

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

NOTICE.

THIS new edition of Francis Thynne's Animadversions was intended for issue last year, soon after the Hindwords were written ; but it was set aside to make room for other friends' work, and other engagements of my own. The delay has been lucky, as it has obtained for the book some very valuable notes from Mr Bradshaw, and has enabl'd me to add some further details about Francis Thynne, as well as contest Mr J. P. Collier's attributions to him of four little books, which, in my opinion, he no more wrote than I did.

The reader must put-up with the inconvenience of finding the facts about William Thynne, the Chaucer-Editor, and his son Francis, the Chaucer-Commentator and Holinshed-Continuer, each in two different places. Dr George Kingsley's very pleasant Preface had earnd its right to a revisd reprint, and so the fresh details about the Thynnes and their work had to go in the Hindwords. No doubt more entries about William Thynne will appear in Professor Brewer's Calendar of State Papers, &c. in Henry VIII's Reign as it goes on. If they do, I hope to print these entries in a short Supplement as soon as the Calendar for 1546 is out. With not enough time for Chaucer and Shakspeare searches at the Record Office, &c., I cannot pretend to undertake Thynne ones. The long quotations for and from the Thynnes in the Hindwords are deliberately given, instead of the facts containd in the extracts being packt into short paragraphs. I enjoy the old details, and like the flavour of William Thynne's meals and Francis's long-winded dedications and affected depreciations of his own work. Moreover, the latter are needed for the reader to judge between Mr Collier and me on the question of Francis Thynne's style. To men without taste or time for such things, skipping is easy

Inasmuch as this tract is a necessary part of a Chaucer Library, this new edition of it is issu'd jointly by the Early English Text and Chaucer Societies, the Chaucer Society copies having a slightly different title.

I thank Lord Ellesmere for lending me Francis Thynne's Animadversions MS., and letting me see his other MSS.; Lord Bath and Canon Jackson for the statements from the Longleat Papers relating to Francis Thynne<sup>1</sup>; Mr W. Christie-Miller of Britwell for his sketch of the contents of the first sheet of The Courte of Venus; my friend Mr Bradshaw for his happy hits, of Sir Bryan Tuke's writing Wm Thynne's Preface, of the rise of Francis Thynne's story about his father's cancell'd Pilgrims-Tale edition of Chaucer, &c.; Mr Stephen Tucker, Rouge Croix, for his Heralds' Office information; Mr G. Parker of the Bodleian, and Miss Toulmin Smith, for their searches and careful copies; and the Bishop of Peterborough, Dr Mark Pattison, and all other helpers, for their aid.

August 3, and October 28, 1875.

<sup>1</sup> The reader will see that the thanks to Lord Bath are for very small mercies. I hope some successor of his, will let some successor of mine, print Francis Thynne's Letters, &c., in full, so as to make our knowledge of the man and his circumstances as complete as it can be made.

THE author of the following interesting specimen of 16th-century criticism came of a Shropshire family of great antiquity; of so great an antiquity, indeed, as to preclude our tracing it back to its origin. <sup>1</sup>Much interesting matter connected with the family was collected by a late descendant of a younger branch, Beriah Botfield, and published by him in a work called "Stemmata Botevilliana."<sup>2</sup> There is some uncertainty about the earlier generations, which is not quite cleared up in that volume. The family name of Thynne occurs in records in the West of England as early as Edward II: but according to the work alluded to, a certain Walter or Thomas Botfield about 1388 was the root of several branches, some of which retained the name, with the variety of Botevyle; but the eldest branch obtained that of Thynne, from the circumstance of its inheriting the freeholds and mansion house or Inn, the copyholds being given to another.<sup>1</sup> The term Inn was used in the sense which has given us "Lincoln's Inn," "Gray's Inn," or "Furnival's Inn," merely meaning a place of residence of the higher class, though in this case inverted, the Inn giving its name to its owner.

the Masters of the Household, to Henry VIII.<sup>1</sup> By his marriage with Anne, daughter of William Bond, Clerk of the Green Cloth, William Thynne had one son, our Francis Thynne, and some daughters, one of whom, Ann, was wife of Richard Mawdley of Nunney in the county of Somerset.*

Though his son gives him no higher position in the court of Henry VIII. than the apparently humble one of clerk of the kitchen, he is careful to let us know that the post was in reality no mean one, and that "there were those of good worship both at court and country" who had at one time been well pleased to be his father's clerks. That he was a man of superior mind there is no question, and we have a pleasant hint, in the following tract, of his intimacy with his king, and of their mutual fondness for literature. To William Thynne, indeed, all who read the English language are deeply indebted, for to his industry and love for his author we owe much of what we now possess of Chaucer. Another curious bit of

* Noble so calls him, see p. xvii, below. He is not so call'd in the Household Ordinances. See Hindwords, below.—F.

<sup>3</sup> The compilers of Mr Botfield's Stemmata Botevilliana wrongly identify William Thynne, the Chaucer editor, with the profligate adulterer Thynnus Aulicus, mention'd in Erasmus's Letters, book xv, let. xiv, who divorc't his neglected, and then erring, wife, and let her fall into prostitution and disease. This Thynnus was evidently a foreigner, a man settled abroad near Erasmus's friend Vitrarius, and could not possibly be our Wm Thynne. Mr Bradshaw, who first call'd my attention to the mistake, and Mr Hales, have lookt very carefully into the question, and are quite certain of their result.

The adulterer Thynne is almost certainly not the Thynne mention'd in "1516, Aug. 2323. Er. Ep. viii. 14. Erasmus to Ammonius. [from (Sir) T. More's] Hopes the hunting may prove as fortunate to Ammonius as it has proved unfortunate to Erasmus. It carried away the King; then the Cardinal. Had angled for Urswick by sending him a New Testament, and asked for the horse he had promised. Finds, when visiting him on Monday, that he had also gone hunting.—Thynne slips off in the same way; and now Ammonius." Brewer's Calendar of Henry VIII., Vol. II. pt. i. p. 716.—F.

literary gossip to be gleaned from this tract is, that William Thynne was a patron and supporter of John Skelton, who was an inmate of his house at Erith, whilst composing that most masterly bit of bitter truth, his "Colin Clout," a satire perhaps unsurpassed in our language.

William Thynne rests beside his wife, in the church of Allhallows, Barking, near the Tower of London, where there are two handsome brasses to their memory. That of William Thynne represents him in full armour with a tremendous dudgeon dagger and broadsword, most warlike guise for a clerk of the kitchen and editor of Chaucer. The dress of his wife is quite refreshing in its graceful comeliness in these days of revived "farthingales and hoops." These brasses were restored by the Marquess of Bath. Would that the same good feeling for things old had prevented the owners of the "church property" from casing the old tower with a hideous warehouse.

The Sir John Thynne mentioned in the "Animadversions" was a cousin of Francis. He married Christian, daughter of Sir Richard, and sister and heir of Sir Thomas Gresham, the builder of the Royal Exchange, part of whose wealth was perhaps devoted to the building of the beautiful family seat of Long Leat, in Wiltshire, in which work he was doubtless aided indirectly by the Reformation, for, says the old couplet,

"Portman, Horner, Popham, and Thynne, When the monks went out, they came in."

Francis Thynne was born in Kent, probably at his father's house at Erith<sup>1</sup>, in or before 1546. He was educated at Tunbridge school under learned Master Proctor. He was never at any University, though Wood says he was; neither was he at Lincoln's Inn, as has been asserted, though he associated with members of the Inn. Some men are born antiquarians as others are born poets, and this was the case with Francis

Thynne. His letter desiring employment in the Heralds' Office is extant, and it procured him the post of "Blanch Lyon pursuivant<sup>1</sup>," a position which would enable him to pursue studies, the results of which, however valuable in themselves, but seldom prove capable of being converted into the vulgar necessities of food and raiment. Poor John Stowe, with his license to beg, as the reward of the labour of his life, is a terrible proof of how utterly unmarketable a valuable commodity may become.

Leading a calm and quiet life in the pleasant villages of Poplar and Clerkenwell, in "sweet and studious idleness," as he himself calls it, the old herald was enabled to accumulate rich stores of matter, much of which has come down to us, principally in manuscript, scattered through various great libraries, which prove him to have deserved Camden's estimate of him as "an antiquary of great judgment and diligence." It would seem that he had entertained the idea of following in his father's footsteps, and of becoming an editor of Chaucer, and that he had even made some collections towards that end. The appearance of Speght's edition probably prevented this idea being carried out, and the evident soreness exhibited in this little tract very probably arose from a feeling that his friend had rather unfairly stolen a march upon him. However the wound was not deep, and Speght made use of Thynne's corrections, and Thynne assisted Speght, in his new edition of Chaucer's Works, with all friendship and sympathy.<sup>2</sup> I sus-

<sup>2</sup> "To the readers. After this booke was last printed, I vnderstood that M. Francis Thynn had a purpose, as indeed he hath when time shall serue, to set out Chaucer with a Coment in our tongue, as the Italians haue Petrarke and others in their language. Whereupon I purposed not to meddle any further in this work, although some promise made to the contrarie, but to referre all to him; being a Gentleman for that purpose inferior to none, both in regard of his own skill, as also of pect Thynne of dabbling in alchemy and the occult sciences. He shows himself well acquainted with the terms peculiar to those mysteries, and hints that Chaucer only "enveyed" against the "sophisticall abuse," not the honest use, of the Arcana. Moreover, in the British Museum (MS. Add. 11,388) there is a volume containing much curious matter collected by him on these subjects, and not only collected, but illustrated by him with most gorgeous colours and wondrous drawing, worthy of the blazonry of a Lancaster Herald. The costumes however are carefully correct, and give us useful hints as to the fashion of the raiment of our ancestors. From the peculiar piety and earnestness (most important elements in the search for the philosopher's stone) of the small "signs" and prayers appended to these papers, it is, I think, clear, that Thynne was working in all good faith and belief. Possibly the following lines, which seem to have been his favourite motto, may have been inspired by the disappointment and dyspepsia produced by his smoky studies and their ill success,

" My strange and froward fate Shall turn her whele anew,
To better or to payre my fate,
Which envy dothe pursue."

On the 22nd of April, 1602, he was with great ceremony advanced to the honour of Lancaster Herald. He never surrendered his patent; and as his successor entered on that post in November, 1608, he is supposed to have died about that date, though some postpone his death till 1611. He married Elizabeth, daughter and co-heiress of Thomas de la Rivers of Bransbe, but left no issue.

those helps left to him by his father. Yet notwithstanding, Chaucer now being printed againe, I was willing not only to helpe some imperfections, but also to adde some things: whereunto he did not only persuade me, but most kindly lent me his helpe and direction. By this meanes most of his old words are restored: Prouerbes and Sentences marked: Such Notes as were collected, drawne into better order, and the text by old Copies corrected."—Speght's Chaucer, 1602, leaf 2, back.

There are many points of interest to be picked out of the following honest and straightforward bit of criticism, if we examine it closely: and, firstly, as to its author? Is there not something very characteristic in its general tone, something dimly sketching a shadowy outline of a kindly, fussy, busy, querulous old man, much given to tiny minutiae, a careful copier with a clean pen, indefatigable in collecting "contributions" to minor history; one jealous of all appearance of slight to his office, even to being moved to wrath with Master Speght for printing "Harolds" instead of "Harlots," and letting him know how mightily a "Harold" like himself would be offended at being holden of the condition of so base a thing as False Semblance? Perhaps the more so from a half-consciousness that the glory of the office was declining, and that if the smallest opening were given, a ribald wit might create terrible havoc amongst his darling idols. How delicately he snubs Master Speght for not calling on him at Clerkenwell Green (How would Speght have travelled the distance in 1598? It was a long uphill walk for an antiquarian, and the fields by no means safe from long-staff six-penny strikers); and how modestly he hints that he would have derived no "disparagement" from so doing; showing all the devotion to little matters of etiquette of an amiable but irritable old gentleman of our own day.

But mark this old gentleman's description of his father's collection of Chaucer MSS.! Had ever a Bibliophile a more delightful commission than that one of William Thynne's, empowering him to rout and to rummage amongst all the monasteries and libraries of England in search of the precious fragments? And had ever a Bibliophile a greater reward for his pleasant toils? "Fully furnished with a multitude of books, amongst which one coppye of some part of his works subscribed in various places 'Examinatur Chaucer'!" Where is this invaluable MS. now? It is worth the tracing, if it be possible, even to its intermediate history. Was it one of those stolen from Francis Thynne's house at Poplar by that bibliomaniacal burglar? or was it one of those which in a fit of generosity, worthy of those heroic times, he gave to Stephen Batemann, that most fortunate parson of Newington? Is this commission to be regarded as some slight proof that the spoliation of the monasteries was not carried on with the reckless Vandalism usually attributed to the reformers?

We learn from this tract that William Thynne left no less than twenty-five copies of Chaucerian MSS. to his son, doubtless but a small tything of the entire number extant, showing that there were men amongst the monks who could enjoy wit and humour even when directed against themselves, and that there must have been some considerable liberality if not laxness of rule amongst the orders of the day. It would, I fancy, be difficult to find amongst the monkeries of our own time (except possibly those belonging to that very cheery order, the Capuchines) an abbot inclined to permit his monks to read, much less to copy, so heretical a work as the Canterbury Tales, however freely he winked at the introduction of French nouvellettes.

But though some may have enjoyed Chaucer in all good faith, there were others who saw how trenchant were the blows he dealt against the churchmen of his time, and what deadly mischief to their pre-eminence lurked under his seeming bonhomie. Wolsey thought it worth his while to exert his influence against him so strongly as to oblige William Thynne to alter his plan of publication, though backed by the promised protection of Henry VIII. And the curious action of the Parliament noticed in the tract (p. 10) was doubtless owing to the same influence<sup>1</sup>: an assumption of the right of censure by the Parliament which seems to have gone near to deprive us of Chaucer altogether. The Parliament men were right in regarding the works of Chaucer as mere fables, but they forgot that fables have "morals," and that these morals were directed to the decision of the great question of whether the "spiritual" or the "temporal" man was to rule the world, a question unhappily not quite settled even in our own time.

The notice of that other sturdy reformer, John Skelton (p. 10) is also very interesting, and gives us a hint of the existence of a "protesting" feeling in the Court of Henry VIII. before there was any reason for attributing it to mere private or political motives. From the way in which it is mentioned here, I suspect that the more general satire "Colin Clout" preceded the more directly personal one of "Why come ye nat to court?" which lashes Wolsey himself with a heartily outspoken virulence which would hardly have been tolerated by him when in the zenith of his power. It the "Statutes at large," 1763. He also refers to Foxe's Acts and Monuments, which is also merely negative on the subject.—K.

[Urry was right, though; for in the Record Office edition of the Statutes, the fifth clause of this "Acte for thadvancement of true Religion and for thabbolishment of the contrarie," runs thus:

"Provided also that all bokes in Englishe printed before the yere of our Lorde a thousande fyve hundred and fourtie intytled the Kinges Hieghnes proclamacions, injunctions, translacions of the Pater noster, the Ave Maria and the Crede, the psalters, prymers, prayer[s], statutes and lawes of the Realme, Cronycles, Canterburys tales, Chaucers bokes, Gowers bokes, and stories of mennes lieves, shall not be comprehended in the prohibicion of this acte, oonelesse the Kinges saide Majestie shall hereafter make speciall proclamacion for the condempnacion and reproving of the same or any of them."

Thus Chaucer's works were not held to be "pestiferous and noysoome," like "the craftye false and untrue translacion of Tyndale," and the "printed bokes, printed balades, playes, rymes, songes, and other fantasies" that were "subtillye and craftilye instructing his Hieghnes people, and speciallye the youthe of this his Realme, untruelie and otherwyse thanne the scripture ought, or should be, taught, declared, or expounded."—F.]

was not improbably written whilst its author was safe in sanctuary under Bishop Islip. William Thynne, court favourite though he was, could never have kept Skelton's head on his shoulders after so terrible a provocation.

Wherever he may be placed, John Skelton stands alone amongst satirists; there is no one like him. Possibly from a feeling that he was writing on the winning side, and sure of sympathy and protection, he scorns to hide his pearls under a dunghill like Rabelais, and utters fearlessly and openly what he has to say. Even in our own time,

"Though his rime be ragged, Tattered and iagged,
Rudely rain-beaten,
Rusty and moth-eaten,
*If ye talke well therewyth,
Yt hath in it some pith.*"

Thynne's note on the family of Gower (p. 12) is of value as agreeing with later theories, which deny that Gower the poet was of the Gowers of Stittenham, the ancestors of the present houses of Sutherland and Ellesmere. The question is not, however, finally decided, and we have reason to believe that all the Gowers of Great Britain are descended from the same family of Guers still flourishing in Brittany. Early coat-armours are not much to be depended on, and Thynne as a Herald may lean a little too much towards them. The question is, however, in good hands, and I hope that before long some fresh light may be thrown upon it.

The old story of Chaucer's having been fined for beating a Franciscan friar in Fleet Street is doubted by Thynne, though hardly, I think, on sufficient grounds.<sup>1</sup> Tradition (when it agrees with our own views) is not lightly to be disturbed, and remembering with what more than feminine powers of invective "spiritual" men seem to be not unfrequently endowed, and also how atrociously insolent a Franciscan friar would be likely to be (of course from the best motives) to a man like Chaucer, who had burnt into the very soul of monasticism with the caustic of his wit, I shall continue to believe the legend for the present. If the mediæval Italians are to be believed, the cudgelling of a friar was occasionally thought necessary even by the most faithful, and I see no reason why hale Dan Chaucer should not have lost his temper on sufficient provocation. Old men have hot blood sometimes, and Dickens does not outrage probability when he makes Martin Chuzzlewit the elder fell Mr Pecksniff to the ground.

Much of the tract is taken up by corrections of etymologies, and the explanation of obscure and obsolete words. It is a little curious that the word "orfrayes," which had gone so far out of date as to be unintelligible to Master Speght, should, thanks to the new rage for church and clergy decoration, have become reasonably common again. The note on the "Vernacle" is another bit of close and accurate antiquarian knowledge worth noting. It is most tantalizing that after all he says about that mysterious question of "The Lords son of Windsor," a question as mysterious as that demanding why Falstalf likened Prince Henry's father to a "singing man" of the same place, we should be left as wise as we were before. We have here and there, too, hints as to what we have lost from Thynne's great storehouse of information; how valuable would have been "that long and no common discourse" which he tells us he might have composed on that most curious form of judicial knavery, the ordeal; and possibly much more so is that of his "collections" for his edition of Chaucer! This last may, however, be still recovered by some fortunate literary mole.

The notice, by no means clear, but certainly not complimentary, of "the second editione to one inferior personne, than my father's editione was," may refer to the edition of

Chaucer which was printed about 1550, (says Mr Bradshaw, though the British Museum Catalogue says '1545?') more or less from William Thynne's second edition of 1542; but from another passage hinting that Speght followed "a late English corrector whom I forbear to name," I suspect that the "inferior personne" was poor John Stowe, and that the edition sneered at was that edited by him in 1561, the nearest in point of date to that of Speght.

The manuscript from which the present tract is reprinted is, like most of the treasures of the Bridgewater Library, wonderfully clean and in good order. It is entirely in the Autograph of Francis Thynne, and was evidently written purposely for the great Lord Chancellor Egerton, and bears his arms emblazoned on the back of title-page. Master Speght most probably got his copy of the Animadversions in a more humble form.<sup>1</sup>

In conclusion may I remark that, as usual, the green silk ribands, originally attached to the vellum and gold cover, are closely cut away, probably for the purpose of being converted into shoe-ties, which Robert Greene informs us was the usual destination of ribands appended to presentation copies. He hints at the same time that those appendages were generally the only solid advantage gained by the dedicatee from the honour done him.

MARK NOBLE'S ACCOUNT OF FRANCIS THYNNE, FROM HIS HISTORY OF THE COLLEGE OF ARMS, LONDON, 1804, p. 213.

LANCASTER. ELIZ. FRANCIS THYNNE, ESQ.

Descended from a branch of the ennobled family, now having the title of Marquis of Bath. The ancient name was

Botteville, taken from a place in Poitou, whence they came to assist John in the barons' wars. Settling at Stretton, in Shropshire, and losing their old name, they acquired that of le Thynne, literally the Inn, a significant term for their large spacious mansion at Stretton; the houses of the great being in former ages called inns. William le Thynne, of Stretton, by Joan, daughter of John Higgons of that place, had issue two sons; Thomas le Thynne seated at Stretton, from whom descended the Marquis of Bath, and William le Thynne, Chief Clerk of the Kitchen to Henry VIII., afterwards Master of the Household to that Monarch. He was father to Lancaster Thynne, who was born at Stretton, and educated at Tonbridge School, under Mr Proctor, the historian, commended by Holingshed; from thence he went to Oxford. Upon his leaving that University, he was sent to Lincoln's Inn to study the law; but fond of heraldic and genealogical pursuits, he presented a petition to Lord Burleigh, then presiding at the head of the commission for executing the office of Earl Marshal, requesting to be admitted into the College, desiring a previous examination, even in the deepest points of armoury which could be obtained, without the knowledge of philosophy and history, mentioning, as a recommendation in his own favour, that he had drawn out a "series" of the lord treasurers and composed "certain circularly pedigrees of the earls and viscounts of England." His acquirements were acknowledged; he was raised to the office of an herald without having ever been a pursuivant. He was then 57 years old. He died in 1608, not in 1611, as Wood mentions, who has fallen into many mistakes about him. Camden calls him "an excellent antiquary and a gentleman, painful and well-deserving of his office whilst he lived." Garter Dethick put his name down as a fit person to be raised to be Norroy. His arms were Or, five bars Sable. Hearne published "A Discourse of the Dutye and Office of an Heralde of Armes, written by him the third day of March 1605." In the year 1651 were printed his "Histories concerning Ambassadors and their Functions," dedicated to his good friend William, Lord Cobham. He continued the Chronicle, known by the name of Holingshed's, finishing the Annals of Scotland, from 1586 down to where they now end. He drew up a list of English Cardinals, added to the reign of Mary I. He wrote the Catalogue of English Historical Writers. His "Discourses" upon the Earls of Leicester, Archbishops of Canterbury, Lords Cobham, and the Catalogue of the Wardens of the Cinque Ports, were suppressed. He also wrote his History of Dover Castle and the Cinque Ports; the Genealogical History of the Cobhams; Discourses of Arms, concerning the Bath and Batchelor Knights; the History and Lives of the Lord Treasurers, mentioned in a MS. life of him, now in the collection of Sir Joseph Ayleffe, Bart. Numerous as these works are, yet there are various other literary productions of his: some of them are preserved in the Cotton Library, others were possessed by Anstis, sen. Garter. His heraldic collections are in the College of Arms, and in the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford. Some of his manuscripts are collections of antiquities, sepulchral inscriptions, taken by him from English churches, and elsewhere. He intended to have published an edition of Chaucer's works, but declining that, gave his labours relative to it to Speght, who published them in his edition of that poet's works, with his own notes, and those of his father, who printed the first edition of this ancient writer in 1542, being the oldest of any except Caxton's. Thynne, Lancaster, had meant to have written a comment upon the text: some verses of his are prefixed to Speght's edition.

To my friend Dr Kingsley's Forewords (or 'Preface') I wish to add some Hindwords on l. a. the duties and allowances of our old Chaucer-editor, William Thynne,<sup>1</sup> at Henry VIII's court, that we may better realize his life; b. the special points of his edition of Chaucer, with c. a note on the re-found Pilgrim's Tale; and 2. some fresh notices of his son Francis's life, and details about his works, in which latter I shall have to comment on Mr J. P. Collier's attributing to him certain books which it is absurd to suppose he ever wrote. I make these additions because the Animadversions is now printed for the Chaucer Society as well as the Early English Text Society.

I. WILLIAM THYNNE.

I a. Assuming, as I do, that our William Thynne was not the Thynne mentiond in Aug. 1516 by Erasmus (Ep. viii. 14),—when he, writing from Sir Thomas More's to Ammonius, says that hunting had carrid off the King, the Cardinal, Urswick, Thynne, and now Ammonius (Brewer's Calendar, Hen. VIII, vol. II, Pt I, p. 717, No. 2323),—we first come on our Chaucer-editor in 1524, when he is but Second Clerk of the Kitchen to Henry VIII, though in 1526 he is Chief Clerk:—

Entries from Mr Brewer's Calendar of Henry VIII, forthcoming vol. up to 1530, supplied by the kindness of Mr C. Trice Martin of the Record Office.

Wm Thynne.

- 11 Feb. 15 Hen. VIII (1524). Second Clerk of the Kitchen, to be bailiff in reversion of Rye, Essex, now held by Ric. Shurley, cofferer of Hen. VII's household.—Pat. 15 Hen. VIII, pt. 2, membrane 18.
- 24 Oct. 18 Hen. VIII. (1526). Chief Clerk of the Kitchen. Grant of Annuity of £10 out of the issues of the Manors of Cleobury Barnes, Salop.—Pat. 18 Hen. VIII, pt. 1, m. 16.
- 25 Feb. 1528. Signature to the expenses of a royal banquet.<sup>2</sup> Lansdowne MS. 1. f. 203-9. "Visus per me Willelmum Thynne."
- 20 Aug. 1528. Chief Clerk of the Kitchen. To be bailiff of the town, and keeper of the park, of Beaudley, Salop, vice Sir W. Compton.—Pat. 20 Hen. VIII, pt. 1, m. 24.
- 22 Dec. 1528. Grant to John Chamber, Clerk; Wm Thynne, Chief Clerk of the Kitchen; and John Thynne; of the next presentation to the church of Stoke Clymslond.—Pat. 20 Hen. VIII, pt. 2, m. 11.

<sup>1</sup> Anthony Wood says, i. 136, "William Thynne, otherwise Botevill, was, as it seems, a Salopian born, and educated among the Oxonians for a time. Afterwards retiring to the court, became, through several petty employments, chief clerk of the kitchen to K. Hen. 8, and is stiled by Erasmus 'Thynnus Aulicus':" on this last point see p. viii, above, and the Notes at the end.

21 July 1529. Head Clerk of the Kitchen, to be Customer<sup>1</sup> of Wools, hides, and fleeces in the port of London, vice Wm Uvedall.

Signed Bill.

8 Oct. 1529. Chief Clerk of the Kitchen. To be Receiver General of the Earldom of March, and Keeper of Gately Park, Wigmoresland, vice Sir Edw. Crofte.—Pat. 21 Hen. VIII, pt. 1, m. 11, vacated 5 May, 38 Hen. VIII (A.D. 1546), to grant a new patent to William<sup>2</sup> & John Thynne. [Our Wm Thynne died on Aug. 10, 1546.]

(There may very likely be more mention of William Thynne later, but his appointments as Clerk of the Kitchen do not appear in the Patent Rolls.—C. T. M.)

"In 1531 William Thynne obtained from the Prior and Convent of the Blessed Trinity called Christchurch near Aldgate in London a lease for 54 years of the Rectorial Tithe of Erith in Kent, where he lived<sup>3</sup>".

16. Now Wm Thynne's duties as a Clerk of the Kitchen are set forth in the Statutes made at Eltham in January 1526 A.D., by Wolsey and the Council, for the regulation of the King's household. And these statutes were made on this wise, as Halle tells us:—

"In this Wynter [1525] was greate death in London, wherefore the Terme was adiorned, and the king, for to eschew the plague, kept his

<sup>2</sup> "I find another Will. Thynne esq. brother to sir John Thynne knight, who, after he had travell'd through most parts of Europe, return'd an unaccomplish'd gentleman, and in the 1 Edw. 6, [An.] Dom. 1547, went into Scotland under the command of Edward Duke of Somerset, (to which duke his brother sir John was secretary) where as an 'eques cataphractus' (that is, a chevalier arm'd cap a pè) he performed excellent service in the battel of Muscelborough against the Scots. This person I take to be the same, to whom K. Hen. 8, by his letters pat. dat. 8 May 38 of his reign, Dom. 1546, gave the office of general receiver of two counties in the Marches of Wales, commonly call'd the Earl of Marches Lands. At length when the infirmities of age came upon him, he gave himself solely up to devotion, and was a daily auditor of divine service in the abbey of Westminster. He surrendered up his soul to him that gave it, 14 March 1584, and was buried in the said church opposite to the door leading into the cloister. Over his grave was soon after erected a monument of alabaster."—A. Wood, Ath. Ox. i. 137. See the Inscription on his monument, with a short biography of him, in Stemmata Bottevilliana, 1858, p. 33; also p. ccvi.

Christmas at Eltham with a small number, for no manne might come thether but suche as wer appoynted by name: this Christmas in the kynges house, was called the still Christmas. But the Cardinall in this season, laye at the Manor of Richemond, and there kept open housholde, to lordes, ladies, and all other that would come, with plaies and disguising in most royall manner; which sore greued the people, and in especial the kynges servauntes, to se him kepe an open Court, and the kyng a secret Court.

"The Cardinall came to Eltham the .viii. daie of Ianuary [1526 A.D.], and taried there till the .xxii. daie. In whiche season the Cardinall, and other of the kynges counsaill, sat for a direction to be taken in the kynges house and, . . . [after discharging and pensioning the old useless officers (who had let their servants do their duty) and 'lxiii of the gard']

"At this season the Cardinall made many ordinances concerning the kynges house, which bee at this daie called the statutes of Eltham, the whiche some saied wer more profitable then honorable."—Halle's Chronicle, 1548, 1550, ed. 1809, p. 707.

These Wolsey 'Statutes of Eltham' are preservd in the Harleian MS. 642, &c., and were publisht by the Society of Antiquaries in 1790, in their collection of Household Ordinances, and at p. 142 of this book we find what Thynne's duties as Clerk of the Kitchen<sup>1</sup> were—on leaf 143 of the Harl. MS. 642, whence I quote :—

Clarkes of the Kitchine.

(Cap. 14.) Item, it is ordeyned that the chiefe Clarkes, with 2 under Clarkes of the same, giue good attendance to see the servise of the Kinge and his household; and specialle that such stuffe of victualls as apperteyneth to the Kinges dishe be of the best and sweetest stuffe that can be gotten, and in likewise for euerye estate and other within the Kinges house, accordinge to theire degrees; and that the stuffe maye be in the Larder in good hower, soe that the Cookes maye haue<sup>2</sup> reasonable leasure for the good seasoninge of the same; [and the same] soe dressed to be serued by the ouersight of the sayd Clarke of the Kitchine in due and perfect manner, to the Kinges more honour and proffitte, without embessellinge or takeinge awaye any parte of the same to any other vse. (Harl. MS. 642, leaf 143, back.)

Victualls for the King, &c., to be the best possible;

and in the Larder in good time for cooking;

and be well coockt and servd,

without any being stolen.

<sup>1</sup> The words on H. Ord. p. 158, directing the delivery of the meat for "the six gentlemen of the King's Chamber, the ushers, and four groomes of the same," and the 'barbor,' "to the clerke of the king's privy kitchen, there to be honestly and well dressed" seem to be a mistake for the cooke mentioned five lines below, "shall be delivered as afore, unto the cooke of the King's privy kittchen."

I.c. In the dedication of his edition of Chaucers Workes to Henry VIII in 1532, William Thynne also describes himself as "chefe clerke of your kechyn." Here is an extract from the document, from sign. A ii, back, col. 1 :

"And verayly / lyke as all these [foreigners] and the rest haue ben thus vigilant & studyous to meliorate or amende their langages, so hath there nat lacked amonges vs English men / whiche haue right well and notably endeuyred and employed them selues / to the beautifyng and bettryng of thenglysh tonge. ¶ Amonges whom, moost excellent prynce / my most redoubted and gracious soueraygne lorde / I your most humble vassall / subiecte and seruauant, Wylliam Thynne / chefe clerke of your kechyn / moued by a certayne inclynacion & zele / whiche I haue to here of any thyng soundyng to the laude and honour of this your noble realme / haue taken great delectacyon / as the tymes and layzers might suffre / to rede and here the bokes of that noble & famous clerke Geffray Chaucer / in whose workes is so manyfest comprobacion of his excellent lernyng in all kyndes of doctrynes and sciences / suche frutefulnessse in wordes / wel accordyng to the mater and purpose / so swete and plesaunt sentences / suche perfectyon in metre / the composycion so adapted / suche fresshnesse of inuencion / compendyousnesse in narration / suche sensyble and open style / lackyng neither maieste ne mediocrite couenable in disposycion / and suche sharpnesse or quyknesse in conclusyon / that it is moche to be marueyled / howe in his tyme / whan doutlesse all good letters were layde a slepe through out the worlde / as the thyng whiche either by the disposycion & influence of the bodies aboue / or by other ordynance of god / semed lyke, and was in daunger, to haue vtterly perysshed / suche an excellent poete in our tonge / shulde, as it were (nature repugnyng) spryng and aryse. For though it had been in Demosthenes or Homerus tymes / whan all lernyng and excellency of sciences florissed amonges the Grekes / or in the season that Cicero prince of eloquence amonges latyns lyued / yet it had been a thyng right rare & straunge, and worthy perpetuall laude / that any clerke by lernyng or wytte coulde than haue framed a tonge, before so rude and imperfite / to suche a swete ornature & composycion / lykely if he had lyued in these dayes / being good letters so restored and reuyued as they be / if he were nat empeched by the enuy of suche as may tollerate nothyng / whiche to vnderstonde their capacite doth nat extende / to haue brought it vnto a full and fynall perfection. Wherefore, gracious soueraygne lorde / takyng such delyte and pleasure in the workes of this noble clerke (as is afore mencioned) I haue of a longe season moche vsed to rede and visyte the same : and as bokes of dyuers imprintes came vnto my handes / I easely and without grete study / might and haue deprehended in them many errors / falsyties / and deprauiacions / whiche euidently appered by the contrarietees and alteracions founde by collacion of the one with the other / wherby I was moued and styred to make dilygent sertch where I might fynde or re-couer any trewe copies or exemplaries of the sayd bookes / whervnto in processe of tyme / nat without coste and payne, I attayned / and nat onely vnto such as seme to be very trewe copies of those workes of Geffray Chaucer / whiche before had been put in printe / but also to dyuers other neuer tyll nowe imprinted / but remaynyng almost vnknowen and in oblyuion / whervpon lamentyng with my selfe / the neglygence of the people / that haue been in this realme / who doutlesse were very remysse in the setting forth or auauancement either of the histories therof / to the great hynderaunce of the renoume of such noble princes and valyant conquerours & capitayns as haue ben in the same / or also of the workes or memory of the famous and excellent clerkes in all kyndes of scyences that haue florissshed therin / Of whiche bothe sortes it hath pleased god as highly to nobilytate this yle as any other regyon of christendome: I thought it in maner appertenant vnto my dewtie / and that of very honesty and loue to my cuntrye I ought no lesse to do / than to put my helpyng hande to the restauration and bringynge agayne to lyght of the said workes / after the trewe copies and exemplaries aforesaid. And de-uisyng with my selfe / who of all other were most worthy / to whom a thyng so excellent and notable shulde be dedicate / whiche to my conceite semeth for the admiracion / noueltie / and strangnesse that it myght be reputed to be of in the tyme of the authour / in comparison / as a pure and fyne tryed precious or polyced iewell out of a rude or indigest masse or mater / none coulde to my thynkyng occurre / that syns / or in the tyme of Chaucer / was or is suffycient / but onely your maiestie royall / whiche by discrecyon and iugement / as moost absolute in wysedome, and all kyndes of doctryne / coulde, & of his innate clemence and goodnesse wolde, adde, or gyue any authorite hervnto.

"For this cause, most excellent and in all vertues most prestant

 this realme / & emperour of Rome, was nexte god and his apostels / chiefely maynteyned / corroborate / and defended / almighty Iesu send to your highnesse the contynuall and euerlastynge habundaunce of his in-fynite grace. Amen.

¶ Thus endeth the preface."

In connection with this Preface comes one of those pretty discoveries<sup>1</sup> which have made Mr Bradshaw's name so famous among manuscript and black-letter men. He shall tell it in his own words, as he wrote it to me:—

"We know that Wm Thynne was 'Chief Clerk of the Kitchin,' that is, as we should now say, that he held an appointment in the Royal Household (the Board of Green Cloth) at Greenwich. Sir Brian Tuke was Postmaster, then an appointment in the same office. When Leland tells us that Sir Brian Tuke wrote a limatissima prefatio to the edition of Chaucer published by Berthelet, we are all puzzled; and when Leland tells us that Thynne edited the edition, we are still more puzzled, because no such edition is known. Now the woodcut frame round the title in Godfray's edition (Thynne, 1532) is that which, having belonged to Pynson, the King's Printer, was transferred to Berthelet, his successor as King's Printer; and this is enough to show that there were printing relations between Berthelet and Godfray, quite enough to allow this to be the edition meant. Curiously enough, there is a copy of Godfray's edition in one of the College Libraries here<sup>2</sup>, in its original binding, in which, at the top of Thynne's dedication, Sir Brian Tuke has written with his own hand<sup>3</sup>:

"This preface I sir Bryan Tuke knight wrot at the request of Mr Clarke of the Kechyn then being / taryng for the tyde at Grenewich."

"It would be difficult to find a prettier coincidence in all points—the tarrying for the tide at Greenwich, when we learn from quite other sources 1. that Thynne's office was at Greenwich, and 2. that he lived down the Thames at Erith. You will allow that it is not often one has the pleasure of hitting things off so prettily. Observe the words then being. In 1532 Thynne describes himself to the king as 'Wylliam Thynne, chefe clerke of your kechyn.' In 1536 Tuke died. On the monument to Wm Thynne in All-hallows Barking Church in London, he is described as 'M. William Thinne esquire, one of the masters of the honourable houshold to king Henry the 8. our soveraigne Lord' (I quote from the Stemmata Botteuilliana, and M. Botfield probably quotes from Stowe's London). The monument says he died August 10, 1546. It is possible that Thynne's position was raised between 1532 and 1536 when Tuke died.—Ever yours, HENRY BRADSHAW."

On March 27, 1533, Wm Thynne got from the King a grant of oaks, but their number is not filled-in in the copy of the document in

To the keper of my parke of Falborne, and in his absence, to his deputie there.

In the Ordinances for the Household of Henry VIII in the Harleian MS. 642, &c.,<sup>2</sup> printed in the volume of Household Ordinances issued by the Society of Antiquaries in 1790, William Thynne is mentiond by name four times: first in 1538, H. Ord., p. 217:

"Articles devised for the Purveyor of Ale, and the Brewers, for the well serving of the Kings Highnesse for his Beere and Ale, ordained and established by Sir William Paulet, Knight, Treasurer of the Household, Sir John Russell, Knight, Comptroller of the same, Edmond Peckhan Esq., Coferer, Thomas Hatcliffe, and Edward Weldon, Clerkes of the Greencloth, and William Thynne, Clerke Comptroller in the Compting-House,<sup>3</sup> at the Kings mannor of Hampton Court,<sup>4</sup> the 20th day of December in the 30th yeare of our said Sovereignes Reigne" [A.D. 1538].

Secondly, in 1542, as one of the obligees of a Bond enterd into by the Wardens of the Poultry (Poulterers' Company, I suppose<sup>5</sup>) with the Controller and four other Officers of the King's Household, to ensure the sale to the Wardens, at fixt prices, of the surplus stock of the King's Purveyor of Poultry, and also the buying by him of the Wardens, at the same fixt prices, such poultry as the King needed (H. Ord. p. 222):—

<sup>3</sup> I put Thynne's name, and 'Clerk Comptroller' in after extracts, in Clarendon type, that it may catch the reader's eye, not to show any difference in the original.

<sup>4</sup> I conclude, from the Household Ordinances generally, that Thynne was Clerk-Comptroller at other Palaces than Hampton-Court; but I can't prove it. These 'Articles' show that at Greenwich there were other such Clerks in April 12, 32 Hen. VIII, A.D. 1541: see H. Ord., p. 218:—

"Item, allowance to be given by the assent of Mr Coferer, Mr Edward Weldon, Master of the Household, Robert Pageman and Anthony Bricks, Clerkes Comptrollers, at Greenwich, the 12th day of April, Anno 32<sup>o</sup> Henrici VIII. unto Thomas Playfoote, Yeoman-Pigtaker, for every Neale, being fatt and good, as well great as small, that he shall send into the Larder, one with another, 4s. peice; and neither more nor lesse." [? Neale.]

"Prises limited by the foresaid Lord Great Master, and others, to be received and paid betwixt William Gurley aforesaid and the Wardens of the Poultry of London, as well for such Poultry-stuff as the said William shall buy of any of the said Fellowship of Poultry for the furniture of his proportion, when need shall be, as alsoe for such Poultry-stuff as the said William shall deliver unto the said Wardens, when and as often as he shall have any Stuff remaineing in his hands, more than shall be needful for the furnishing of his said proportion, as followeth. And the same to performe, they, by this Recognizance following, are bound from time to time soe to doe.

Thirdly, evidently in the same year 1542 (H. Ord. p. 226), in

"A Composition made betwixt Sir Edmond Peckham, Knight, Officer<sup>1</sup> of the Kings Most honourable Household, Wm Thynne, and other Officers of the Greencloth, on the behalfe of our Souveraigne Lord the King, and one Thomas Hewyt of Hythe in Kent, for the better serving his Majestie, and his Household, of Sea-Fish to be by him provided and made in the places hereafter expressed, that is, Lydd, Hythe, Folkston, Romney, and soe to the chamber point, at convenient prices, viz."

Fourthly, in 1545, at the end of "An Order of the 18th day of January, Anno 33° Hen. VIII [A.D. 1542] for washing and cleane keeping of the Napery which shall serve for the Kings owne table", is (H. Ord. p. 216),

"Item, it was agreed by Mr Cofferer, Mr Thyne, and others of the Greencloth, that the Cofferers Clerke that rideth to pay Carriages shall have 8d. per day, at such time as he wayteth for the payment of Carriages (the Cofferer being absent from the Court, nor his chamber having none allowance), at Hampton-Court, the 28th day of December, Anno 37° H. VIII." (22 April 1545 to 21 April 1546.)

Assuming, then, that the words "and others of the Greencloth" in the last quotation, do not imply that William Thynne had changd his post of one of the two Clerks Controllers of the Counting-house (that is, Examiners of the accounts of the Officers of the King's Household, and Superintendents of the kitchen and offices generally) for the nearly-allied

one of Clerk of the Greencloth (in which he'd have been concernd more with entering and posting the accounts that the Clerks Comptrollers passt), let us take out the particulars of the duties, in 1540 A.D., of our 'Clerke Comptroller.' The editor,<sup>1</sup> like his author, lookt after accounts; and even as Chaucer wrote with his own hand counter-rolls of wool-fells and hides, if not of wine and groceries too, at the Custom-House in Thames St, London, so Thynne may there also, as Collector of Customs, have written like accounts; and he must have examind and passt the accounts of the Household Officers for meat, fowls, fish, &c., for King and Queen, at Windsor, Westminster, Hampton-Court and other dwellings royal. (See H. Ord., p. 228—231.)

"Ordinances appointed for all Officers of Household, upon the making an Establishment of the new<sup>2</sup> Booke of Household, made by the Kings Majesty in the 31st yeare of his most Gracious Reigne. [22 April 1539, to 21 April 1540.]

"The Compting-House.

"First, That the Lord Great Master, the Treasurer and Comptroller of the Kings Household, or one of them at the least (other great causes of Councell not letting), shall be dayly in the Compting-house between the hours of 8 and 9 in the morning, calling unto them the Cofferer, Clerke of the Greencloth, and one of the Clerkes-Comptrollers at the least, the other being occupied in the Kings Service otherwise; and to sitt and to have brought before them all the Bookes of briefments of all the Officers of the Household for the day before passed; and in case they shall find any wastfull expences to have been made by any Minister in his Office, that then he, by whom such wast hath been made, to be called before the said Officers, to make answer to the same; and as he or they shall be thought culpable, soe to be punished therefore, as shall be thought necessary or meete by the said Officers.<sup>3</sup>

Between 8 and 9 A.M. daily, one Clerk-Comptroller is to assist his superior Officer in examining the day-before's accounts, that waste may be checkt,

"Item, it is ordeyned that the clerkes of the Greencloath, or one of them, be dayly attendant in the compting-house for the engrossment of dayly bookes of the expences of the day before, in the time of the household keeping; according to the old usage and auntient customes of the King's house.

"Item the chiefe clerke of comptrollment to be there in like wise for the oversight and comptrolling of the said booke."

Clerk-Comptrollers, &c., to be daily in the Compting-house, and at the Greencloth from 8 to 9 A.M., to examine the day-before's accounts of all Household Officers, to check wasteful expenses, and punish the offenders.

One Clerk Comptroller to be daily in the Larder, see that Victuals are good, and given to the Cook.

Clerk-Comptroller to see that the King's and Queen's food is well cookt and not stolen;

also that disorders in the Household be reformed;

that no strangers be allowed at meals.

(p. 229) The Clerkes of the Greencloth, and Clerkes Comptrollers, in the absence of the great officers, shall be dayly in the Compting-house, and to sitt at the Greencloth between the houres of eight and nine in the Morning; and to cause to be brought before them the Bookes and Breifments of all Officers of Household, for the expences of the said Household for the day before passed; and to peruse the same substantially, in considering whether any wastfull expences have been made in any of the said Offices, or not; and in case any such wast shall be found to have been made, that then they doe call before them the Officers who had the ministration of the said Office where such wast hath been made, to answer unto the same; and to punish them for their offence done therein, as by their discretion shall be thought fitt.

Item, the said Clerkes of the Greencloth and Clerkes Comptrollers, or two of them at the least, that is to say one Clerke of the Greencloth, and one Clerke-Comptroller, shall be dayly in the Larder, as well to view and see that the Victuals be good, sweete, and meete to serve the Kings Highnesse and the Queens Grace withall, as alsoe to see the deliverie of the same into the Cookes hands, for the serving of the Kings Grace, the Queens, and Household.

Item, the said Clerkes of the Greencloth, and Clerkes Comptrollers, and Clerke of the Kitchen, shall as well give great charge dayly to the Cookes for the well dressing of the Kings Meate, and the Queenes; and also to see the said Meate sett out at the Dresser dayly, at every Meale, like as it was put into the Cookes hands; and to attend and follow the same at every Meale, and at every Course. [for fear the Cook should steal any, or any man run away with the dishes from the dresser: see H. Ord. p. 37, 45.]

Item, the said Clerkes of the Greencloth and Clerkes Comptrollers, shall see that all the disorders of the Household shall be reformed as much as they conveniently may, in punishing the offenders thereof according to their merretts.

Item, the said Clerkes of the Greencloth and Clerkes Comptrollers, shall weekly, once or twice in the weeke, view all the Offices and Chambers of the Household, to see if there be any Strangers eating in the said Offices or Chambers at the Meale times, or at any other time, contrary to the Kings Ordinance; and in case they shall finde any offending therein, to make relation thereof to the Souveraignes of the House.

And that the Chamberlaines of the Kings side and of the Queenes shall cause like search to be made within all the Chambers belonging to every of their sides; and if they shall finde any disorders therein, then they to see the same reformed, as it shall require.

The Chamberlaine to search their chambers, and reform abuses.

[DUTIES OF THE CLERKS OF THE GREENCLOTH (put-in as Thynne may have been a Clerk).]

The Clerke of the Greencloth shall sitt dayly in the Compting-house at the Greencloth, there to ingrosse and cast up all the particular Breifments of the House after they shall be comptrolled, and the same, soe cast up, to enter in the Parchment docquett called the Maine Docquet; and the same Docquet so entred and engrossed, to remaine in the Compting-house for record, without taking it away from thence by any officers.

Greencloth-Clerk to sit in the Counting-house, and engrosse and cast up daily all examin'd accounts, and enter them in the Maine Docquet.

Item, that they do monthly, within six dayes after the expirement of every Moneth, call into the Compting-house the parcells indented of all the particular provisions, made in every Office of the Household, for the expence of the said Household for the month passed; and after they have been perused and seen by the Clerke-Comptroller, then they to engrosse them up, and to enter them into their Ledger, called the Booke of Foote of Parcells.

Then to make up Monthly Accounts of all stores for the Household, submit 'em to the Clerk-Comptroller, and put 'em in the ledger or Book of Foot of Pa'cells.

Item, that they shall yearly make the Cofferers booke of Accompt for the expence of the Yeares passed, soe the same may be made perfect to be put into the Exchequer yearly, within the terme of St Hillary, upon paine to lose one Quarters Wages, defaulting the same.

Then to make a Yearly Account of the cost of the Household for the Exchequer.

Item the said Clerkes of the Greencloth shall safely keep all their Bookes concerning their Office, after they have ingrossed them up, privately to themselves, without the view or sight of them to any other Officer unto the yeares end. And the said Booke shall be examined with the Accomptants and particular Clerkes for the perfecting of the same. And likewise shall the Clerks Comptrollers and Clerkes Accomptants order all their Bookes touching their Offices.

Greencloth-Clerks to keep their books private, and have 'em examin'd yearly by Accountants.

Clerks Comptrollers' books to be kept and examin'd.

Item, that they shall make every halfe yeare a view of the expence of the Household, that it may be seen what the Charge thereof amounteth to for the said half yeare.

Greencloth clerks to make a Half-Yearly view of Household expenses.

[The Clerks-Comptrollers' Duties again.]

The Clerks Comptrollers, or one of them, shall dayly, as well view the Kings Chamber and the Queenes, as all the Offices of the Household, to advise and see the absence or attendance of all them which be appointed under check of Household, and not onely to default and check the Wages of all such as he shall finde to be absent without lycence, but also to default and check the Wages of all them which be in the House, who by the Kings order should sitt at Dinner and Souper within the Kings Chamber, and the Queens, and do note, but be absent from thence without lycence, soe to be eating in places contrary to the Kings Ordinances, and against his honour.

Item, the said Clerkes-Comptrollers, in soe peruseing the house dayly, shall note well in everie Office, if that there be any more number of Servants in any of the said Offices then is appointed to be by the Kings Ordinances, or else any Strangers or Vagabonds within the same; and in case he shall find any such, that then he for the first time shall admonish and warne the Serjeant, or in his absence, the Hedd of the same Office, who shall give attendance where such shall be found, that they be avoyded, and no more thither to resort; and being after of new there found againe after such warning given, that then everie of the said Servants or Hedd of the Office to be checked of two dayes wages, for every time being soe found culpable.

Item, the said Clerkes-Comptrollers shall make for every Quarter in the Yeare, a Roule of Parchment that shall be called the Check-Roll, which shall containe the names of all them which shall be of the Ordinarie, and within the Check of the Household; and dayly to present in the same Roule the allowance of the Wages of all them which shall be attendant, and the defaultation and check of Wages of all them which shall be absent.

Item, the said Clerkes-Comptrollers, or one of them at the least, shall be at the Green-Cloth with other Officers, as is before mentioned; and one of them dayly to see the Venit and comeing in of all Provisions in every Office of the Household; discreetly advising that the said Provisions be good stuff, and meete to be spent within the House for the Kings honour, or else to reject and returne it back again unto the Purveyors, and to make relation thereof at the Greencloth of the badnesse of the stuff; to the intent that the Purveyors which brought in the same may be punished as they shall deserve in that behalfe, soe disappointing the House.

And that the said Clerkes-Comptrollers, upon the view and sight of the comeing in of the said premises being good stuff, shall make Entry and Record of the same into the Booke of Records, and to bring it to the Greencloth, and there to allow as much of the same as shall be brought in and spent; and if any more shall be presented in any Breifments then by his Record shall appeare to have been spent; then he to controule the same, givinge noe larger allowance than there ought to be.

and by it check all accounts.

Item, the said Clerkes-Comptrollers shall dayly take the Infra et Extra of the Wexe in the Office of the Chaundry, to try the expence of the same, and to give allowance accordingly; and at such times as the Remaines shall be in the Offices of the Pantry, Cellar, and Buttry, by the Clerke of the Kitchen, that then the Clerkes-Comptrollers to goe with him to take the said Remaines to be advouched with him, what the expence shall rise to.

and take the Clerk of the Kitchen's remains of wax.

Item, the said Clerkes-Comptrollers shall sitt at the Greencloth, as well to passe the price of Poultry-stuff, Fresh-water Fish, and other Victualls spent; as alsoe givinge allowance of all the Polls in the Pantry-Roule, Kitchen-Roule, Poultry-Bills, Spicery-Docquets, and other particular Breifments of the Household, and alsoe the particular parcells of all the Household, takeing the advice of the other Officers sitting in the Greencloth, in cases where need shall require.

To passe the price of fish and victualls, the bills (?) of the Pantry, Kitchen, and rest of the Household.

Item, one of the Clerkes-Comptrollers shall dayly see the Fees which the Officers of the House shall have, or that they shall take out of the House, to view whether they be more largely taken than they ought to be, or not; and if he shall so finde it, to punish the offenders thereof. And if any Officer presume to take any Fee away before they have been viewed by one of the Clerkes-Comptrollers, that then they that see shall doe, shall loose the Fee soe taken for ever after.

and let no fee goe untill viewed.

Item, the said Clerkes-Comptrollers, by the advice of the Officers of the Greencloth, shall passe all the Bills of allowance, as well for Wages and Boardwages, as other Provisions and Necessaries; and all such Bills by them soe passed to enter into their standing Ledger there to remaine as matter of Record.

To passe all bills for wages, boardwages, provisions and necessaries, and post them in the Ledger.

Item, the said Clerkes-Comptrollers shall yearly make the Booke of Comptrollment, with the Comptrollers of the Household, which shall be put yearly into the Exchequer, to be advoucht to the Cofferers account.

To make the yearly Booke of Comptrolment for the Exchequer.

From an Ordinance, seemingly "by command of the Lord Great Master and Mr Comptroller, at Wyndsor, the 13th of November, Anno 32°" (A.D. 1540; H. Ord. p. 211), it appears that there were two "Clerks Comptrollers," who workt six weeks by turns, and when not on duty lodgd outside the Court, that "the Kings house shall be the lesse pestered," and were allowd 6s. 8d. a day as board-wages for themselves and their servants instead of their Bouge of Court, or allowances of food, &c., when in the Court:—

Item, the allowance of boardwages to be given to the Masters of the Household, the Clerks of the Greencloth, and to the Clerke-Comptroller, to every of them being lodgd without the Court gate, and have noe meate or drinke, or being out of the Court by command; for everie day, 6s. 8d.

Item, to every of them being sick, for every weeke 10s. . . .

[A.D. 1545] Item, it is agreed by the Lord Great Master, and other officers of the Compting house, the day of March in the 36th yeare of the Kings Majesties Raigne, that there be one chamber appointed for two Masters of the household, whereof one to be of the King's side, the other to be of the Queen's side; and they to waite in the Court six weekes; and one other chamber to be appointed for one of the Clerks Comptrollers, and they to waite in the Court in the like manner, by the said space; soe that by this meanes the bookes may be dayly engrossed by ten of the clock before noone; which doing shall be greatly to his Majesties proffitt. And the other two Masters of the Household, one Clerke of the Greencloth, and one Clerke Comptroller, to be with their servants and stuff out of the Court by the said space; whereby the King's house shall be the lesse pestered, and the lodgings easier for the King's traine. And furthermore, the said two Masters of household, and one Clerke of the Greencloth, and one the Clerke Comptroller, that doth waite the six weekes in the Court, shall not depart from thence after the expiement of the said time, before they present to my Lord Great Master, Mr Treasurer and Comptroller, or to him whom they shall appoint in their absence, the whole of the expence of the said six weekes that they have waited in the Court; and the other two Masters of the household, one Clerke of the Greencloth, one Clerke Comptroller, that shall be from the Court, to have boardwages for themselves and their servants, in the time of their being out of the Court, 6s. 8d. per the day to everie four. And notwithstanding the said boardwages, the King's Majesty shall save four messes dayly of the dietts and Bouche of Court of the said four persons; which will amount to the sume of 536l. 10s. 7d. yearly.

We now come to Thynne's food when he was at Court. This is given in the Eltham Ordinances of 1526, at p. 177-8 of the Household Ordinances. He had a capital hot dinner and supper, of two courses each daily, as well on fish-Fridays as other days, except Saturday, when he seems to have had no dinner provided for him.

A Diett for two Messes to the Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber; one double Messe to the Cofferer; four Messes to the Masters of Household; two Messes to the Clerke of the Greencloth; two Messes to the Clerkes Comptrollers; and one Messe to the Clerke of the Kitchen, of like fare; in all twelve Messes.

Besides these two heavy meals a day, William Thynne had "Bouche<sup>1</sup> of Court," or "sizings" as we might say, allowances for breakfast, for a snack between dinner and supper, and a refresher after supper (the day's drink being 3 gallons of ale and half a pitcher of wine), lights, and fuel. These are given in "The Ordinances made at Eltham in the XVIIth year of King Henry VIII." A.D. 1526, as follows (H. Ord. p. 163<sup>2</sup>):

Knights, and others of the Kings counsell, Knights wives, Gentlemen of the Privy-Chamber, the Cofferer, Master of the Household, Clerkes of the Green-cloth, Clerkes Comptrollers, and Clerkes of the Kitchen.

Everie of them being lodged within the courte, for their Bouch in the morning, one chet loafe, one manchett, one gallon of ale; for after-noone, one manchett, one gallon of ale; for after supper, one manchett, one gallon of ale, dimidium pitcher wyne; and from the last day of October unto the first day of Aprill, three lynkes by the weeke; by the day one prickett, one sise, dimidium pound white lightes, four talshides, four faggots, and . . . [? some coals]; and from the last day of March unto the first day of November, to have the moyety of the said waxe, white lights, wood and coales; which doth amount by the yeare to the sume of xx l. xiii s.

Lastly in the same Eltham Ordinances of 1526 A.D. we find that William Thynne was allowd stabling for four horses in the King's stable, and one bed for his servant (H. Ord. p. 198):

Thappointment of herbigage to be ordinarie for all Noble Estates and others, as followeth; as well for stabling for their horses, as for lodging and beds for their servants: Appointed by the Kings Highness at his Mannor of Eltham, the 19th day of January in the 17th Yeare of his noble Reigne...

In 1546, three months before Wm Thynne's death, he made to his friend William Whorwood, out of his keepership of Beaudley Park granted to him on Aug. 20, 1528,—see p. xxi above,—the following grant of his perquisite of a buck in summer and a doe in winter:

I.f. The next notice we have of William Thynne is of his death, and his tomb in the Church of All Hallows, Barking.

In Anthony Munday's 1618 edition of Stowe's Survey of London is given the inscription on William Thynne's monument. He says:—

“Upon a very faire marble stone, verged about with plates of brasse, and concluding with the like plates, in the middle is thus engraven : ‘Pray for the soule of Mr William Thinne, esquire, one of the Masters of the honourable household to King Henrie the 8, our soveraigne Lord. He departed from the prison of this fraile life the 10. day of August, An. Dom. 1546, in the 38 yeere of our said soveraigne Lord the King ; which body, and every part thereof, in the last day shall be raised up againe, at the sound of the Lord's trumpet. In whose comming, that we may all joyfully meet him, our heavenly Father grant us, whose mercy is so great towards us, that he freely offereth to all them that earnestly repent their sins, everlasting life, through the death of his dearly beloved sonne Jesus, to whom be everlasting praise. Amen.’”

(An epitaph remarkably characterized by the orthodox tenets of the Reformation, though commencing with the old formula, Pray for the soul, &c.—J. G. Nichols, in Stemmata Botevilliana, p. cccvi. The epitaph is also printed there, and at p. 29.)

To Col. Chester's kindness I owe the following copy of the Will of William Thynne, dated Nov. 16, 1540 :

"In the name of god, Amen! I, Wylliam Thynne, Being of good memorye, in manner and fourme following Do make this my Laste will and testament: first, I bequethe my Soule to my swete savior Ihesus Criste, my only Redemer and Sauyor, And to the hole holly company of heuen, of the whiche, In faiethe I beleue to be one of them, throwghe the merytes of Christis Passion, and no otherwyse: my boddye to be buried where yt shall please my wyfe. All my goodes, movable and vnmovable, Leases of Fermes, Debtes, and all other thinges whiche I nowe haue intrest in, or hereafter maye haue eny intrest in, I geue to my wyfe Anne Thynne, And she to depart<sup>1</sup> with her childrene at her owne will and pleasure, and no otherwyse. And I do make my saide wyfe, Anne, my only executrix, and praying her to be good mother to my childrene and hers. And I make Mr Edmund Peckham, cofferer of the kinges housholde,<sup>2</sup> and John Thynne my nephewe, my ouerseers, hertely praying them to be my poore wyfes comforte and helpe in her nede and necessitie, in defending her in her nede; And in this Doing, I bequethe either of them one standing Cupp of Syluer, and gilte, with a couer. And I geue to Thomas ffysher, my seruau<sup>t</sup>, a dublet of crymsen satten. In witnes that this is my last will, I haue to this presentes putto<sup>3</sup> my seale, and also subscribed my name, the xvi Daye of Nouember in the xxxijth yere of the Raigne of our Soueraigne Lorde King Henrye theight. By me, William Thynne."

The Will was prov'd in the Prerogative Court of the Archbp of Canterbury, on the 7th of Sep. 1546, by Wm Walker, proctor for Anne, the relict and executrix. Anne Thynne the widow afterwards marri'd, first, Sir Edward Broughton, and then Mr Hugh Cartwright, and died without having made a Will. She was not burid by Wm Thynne.

"<sup>4</sup> On 5 June 1572, letters of Administration were granted to Elizabeth Pygott, alias Thynne, (through Francis Thynne, Gent., her proctor,<sup>5</sup>) to administer the goods of her mother 'Anne Thynne, alias Dame Boughton, alias Cartwright,' who was, while she lived, the relict and executrix of Wm Thynne deceased. These letters were revoked, and new ones granted, on Jan. 24 1573-4, to Francis Thynne, Gentleman, son of the deceased. Both in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury."

King's Household—with only half his time taken-up with his light office-work; well paid, well fed,—but not drinking his 3 gallons of beer and pitcher and a half of wine a day, when on duty, let us hope,—yet he is then Chief Clerk of the King's Kitchen, on speaking and friendly terms with his Royal Master, who took a warm interest in his book, and able no doubt to get plenty of spare time<sup>1</sup> for reading, and for editing his Geoffrey Chaucer's Works. How did he perform his task? He began in the right way, by collecting all the Chaucer MSS. he could find. He got Henry VIII to let him plunder all the abbey Libraries for them (p. 12 below). How he must have rejoiced! (I can fancy myself in his place; or even with like power to make Lord Ashburnham hand over his Chaucer MSS. to the British Museum.<sup>2</sup>) In his search he found one MS. with "examinatur, Chaucer" in it—where, oh where is it gone?—and altogether accumulated a treasure of a 'multitude' of copies (p. 6 below). These—say twenty-five, p. 12—he collated (p. 6); but—as Tyrwhitt, Mr Thomas Wright, Prof. Child, Mr Jephson (who did R. Bell's edition), Mr Bradshaw, Dr Richard Morris, Professor Ten Brink, and the Chaucer Society, had unluckily not gone before him—he could only make such use of his priceless materials as his knowledge allowd. He could not distinguish between genuine and spurious Chaucer work, but he could, and did, print a better text of the Canterbury Tales than had been given before, besides printing for the first time Chaucer's Legende, Boece, Blanche, Pity, Astrolabe, and Stedfastness. (See p. 7, note 1.)

William Thynne was the first real editor of Chaucer, and deserves the gratitude and respect of every Chaucer student. He must also have been a hater of Romanism and priestcraft, for he put The Plowmans Tale into his second edition of Chaucer's Works in 1542. His son—speaking from reports made many years after his father's death—also says that Wm Thynne wanted to put into his first edition a (spurious) Pilgrims Tale (see Appendix I. p. 79), exposing and denouncing the abuses of religion, so-call'd. He printed it, showd it to Henry VIII, and askt his protection if he publisht it. This, Henry at first promist; but Wolsey prov'd too strong for him, and Thynne had to cancel his first (or suppos'd Pilgrims-Tale<sup>1</sup>) edition of Chaucer—'beinge printed but with one coolume in a syde' (p. 7, 10 below). But Mr Bradshaw—and no man living is so good a judge—looks on this cancelld edition as 'a flam,' and shows how the report of it arose, p. 75-6 below. At any rate, no scrap of this cancelld edition is known to have come down to our times, though Mr W. C. Hazlitt once told me he recollected seeing at a sale at Sotheby's (P Sir Wm Tite's) some leaves of a one-column black-letter edition of Chaucer, put-in to make up a 2-column edition (see p. xliii). If so, these leaves may perhaps prove to be a bit of William Thynne's first book.

But whether he cancelld an edition unknown to us, or not, Thynne must have soon set to work at the first edition we know, the double-columnd handsome folio of 1532, printed with its fine borderd title-pages of the principal works, by Thomas Godfray at London. Its collation is as follows, showing a cancel or insertion after fol. CC.xix:—

"register, sigs. A—Z, Aa—Zz, Aaa—Uuu, in sixes, except A and Qq which have respectively 4 and 9 leaves."—Brit. Mus. Catalogue. Qq iii is leaft or folio'd Fo. CC.xix; then 3 leaves, Qq iiiii, 5, 6, have no leaf-marks; Qq 7 is leaft Fo. CC.xx; Qq 8, Fo. CC.xxi; Qq 9, Fo. CC.xxii, and then R i, Fo. CC.xxiii. 3-fourths of the 2nd col. on the back of Qq 6 are filld up with the heading 'The legende of good women,' and ornaments. And it looks as if Wm Thynne had meant to put something else between the Troylus and Legende, and then had filld up the space with the spurious Testamente of Cresseide, sign. Qq iii (Fo. CC.xix.) to Qq 6.

Thynne dedicated his book to Henry VIII, as we have seen (p. xxiv, above); and it must have sold well for those days, as he brought out a second edition of it in 1542. Into this 2nd edition he put the spurious Plowmans Tale, after the Parson's Tale (p. 69 below).

I h. The Pilgrims Tale. It is a great comfort to have unearht this, after its supposd loss, due to its being left out of the printed catalogue of Douce's books. But the Tale is poor verse, tho' its subject is one that must always have interest to an Englishman, the corruptions of Romanism at the Reformation time. Unless the two lines by which Tyrwhitt fixt the date of the Tale to 1536-40 are an insertion—as they very well may be—we must accept his conclusion (p. 9, n. below) that The Pilgrims Tale couldn't have been in Wm Thynne's first edition of 1532. This conclusion necessitates the inference that the Tale could never have been proposed for insertion in Wm Thynne's prior cancelled edition (p. 9-10); and that therefore Francis Thynne must have told a wrong story when he reports that Wolsey stole his father's first one-column edition on account of its containing The Pilgrims Tale. Mr Bradshaw has shown with his usual skill—and combination of out-of-the-way facts that he's chanced on in his years of search—how this wrong story must have arisen from Francis Thynne's informants, and himself, having known The Pilgrims Tale in the 1-columnnd Courte of Venus, and the probability that Wolsey (or maybe Cromwell) did object to the insertion in Thynne's 1st ed. of 1532, of the Plowmans Tale (also one against the abuses of Papistry) which was actually put into Thynne's 2nd ed. of 1542. It is difficult to resist the arguments of two such Chaucer scholars as Tyrwhitt and Mr Bradshaw. But there is this to be said on Francis Thynne's side: 1. The two date-lines in the Tale may well be an after insertion. The words and run of the lines are to my ear before 1536-40. 2. Tho' Francis Thynne was an infant himself when his father died in 1546, yet he says he got his information from his father's clerks, men "nowe of good worshippe bothe in courte and countrye." He was in close communication with his father's nephew,—who must often have talked with that father,—Sir John Thynne, the builder of Longleat, an owner of Chaucer MSS., a man high at Court (and likely to know its traditions), the Protector Somerset's trusted counsellor. And lastly, Mr W. C. Hazlitt, and Mr F. S. Ellis (the well-known antiquarian bookseller and publisher, of the firm of Ellis and White), told me some time since, and Mr Hazlitt has lately repeated his conviction, that they saw at Sotheby's sale-rooms at 13 Wellington St., W.C., within the last 2 or 3 years, a 2-columnnd folio of Chaucer's Works that had its wanting leaves supplied from some one-columnnd edition. Still, at present Wm Thynne's 1-columnnd cancelled edition must be held the 'flam' or 'fiction' that Mr Bradshaw has called it.

<sup>1</sup> We find a separate edition of the Plowmans Tale, the same type and size as Thynne's first edition of 1532, which looks as if he had intended to include it in that, and was overborne for some reason. He did include it in his second edition.—H. Bradshaw.

The Pilgrims Tale also has interest for its mention of the Prophecies of Merlin and other diviners, and the evidence it gives of folk's belief in them in the early part of the 16th century. Of such, in 1524, I quoted an amusing [imaginary] instance from Halle's Chronicle, p. 675, ed. 1809, in my notes to Andrew Boorde, E. E. T. Soc. p. 325,—Prior Bolton of Bartholomew's, Smithfield, who built a house on Harrow hill for fear of a flood,<sup>1</sup>—and I have had lately to collect other notices (N. Sh. Soc. Trans. 1875-6, Pt. 1, p. 150-4) to try and ascertain whether Shakspeare's 'dangerous' year of Venus & Adonis, l. 508, was the wonderful year in which 'no wonder fell' (G. Harvey) of 1588. And in connection with this Prophecy subject<sup>2</sup>, I print here the only interpretation I've ever seen of the well-known "sise, the best cast on the dice" saw, printed among other places in my Ballads from MSS., i. 318-19 (and see 377), Ballad Soc. This find was part of the compensation that one got in Dublin<sup>3</sup> this May, for the sea-sickness wrought by those Channel-waves

"Our Authors good Judgment and Skill in Antiquity, joyned with an inquisitive Temper, rendred him useful in divers Respects. He was not to be put off with Frauds and Superstitious Fables, commonly imposed upon Men of less Accuracy; but was able to detect and discover them. And as he was a great Lover of Truth, so he was the more inquisitive to find it out: and his Reading and Learning the better enabled him to do it. He confuted the Story of Edward Hall in his Chronicle, following a Fable (saith Stow) then on foot, concerning one Bolton, sometime Prior of St. Bartholomew; 'That there being Prognostications, that in the Year 1524, there should be such Eclipses in Watry Signs, and such Conjunctions, that by Waters and Floods many People should perish. Whereupon many removed to high Grounds for fear of drowning: And particularly Prior Bolton builded him an House upon Harrow on the Hill, and that thither he went, and made provision of all things necessary within his House, for the Space of two Months,' &c. This, Stow would not let pass without diligent Enquiry; and by credible Information found it not so: and that the Ground of the Story was only this, that this Prior, being Parson of Harrow, bestowed some Reparation on the Parsonage-House; and builded nothing else but a Dove-House, to serve him when he had forgone his Priory. Thus Stow sifted out Matters, and was not to be carried away by Reports."

Of course these late attributions of MSS. to Chaucer are quite worthless. Compare Mr Black's Catalogue of the Ashmolean MSS., col. 1213, MS. 1445, no. v. 7.

Another interest The Pilgrims Tale has, in its many Chaucer phrases, as well from his Tales (of which it quotes a line from the Wife of Bath's) as his Prologue, and its citing 6 lines from the Englisht version of the Romaunt of the Rose, formerly, tho' not now, accepted without question as Chaucer's (see l. 741-6, p. 98). Further, a manuscript or black-letter man can never look without sympathy on just a few leaves sav'd from a large book that was once read and car'd for<sup>1</sup> by numbers of his countrymen in Tudor days. Of the Courte of Venus, wherein The Pilgrims Tale was printed, only the first sheet is known, besides the Tale sheet. Of this, Mr W. Christie-Miller of Britwell has been so kind as to give me a sketch, which is printed in the Notes, p. 141. It is difficult to suppose that this Courte of Venus containing The Pilgrims Tale can be the same book as Becon refers to in 'The fourthe parte of the booke of Matrimonye,' Works, vol. i. Fol. Dclxii back, A.D. 1564 (reference in MS. on p. 1 of the Douce fragment):

II. FRANCIS THYNNE.

II. i. Though Francis Thynne must have been born in Kent shortly before his father's death in 1546, I find no notice of him earlier than his own recollections of his youth<sup>1</sup>, set down in 1586. The second seems to imply that he was then—say at 13 or 14 years old—a scholar at the Cathedral school at Rochester:—

A.D. 1554-7. "The next daie she came to Rochester, and rested foure daies there in an inne called the crowne, the onelie place to interteine princes comming thither; as in my time I haue séene both king Philip & the quéene [Mary] to haue rested themselues there."—Holinshed, vol. iii. p. 1494, col. 2, l. 53.

1558. "He [Cardinal Pole] died (as I saie) the same daie wherin the quéene died [Q. Mary, on Thursday, Nov. 17, 1558], the third houre of the night, after that he had liued seuen and fiftie yeares and six moneths, had ruled in the archbishops chaire two yeares seuen moneths thrée wéekes and fíue daies, and had exercised his legantine power four yeares and six daies; whose bodie was first conueied from Lambeth to Rochester, where it rested one night, being brought into the church of Rochester, at the west doore, not opened manie yeres before. At what time, my selfe, then a yoong scholer, beheld the funerall pompe thereof, which trulie was great, and answerable both to his birth and calling, with store of burning torches and mourning wéedes. At what time, his coffin being brought into the church, was couered with a cloth of blacke veluet, with a great crosse of white satten ouer all the length and bredth of the same, in the midst of which crosse his cardinals hat was placed." p. 1489, col. 1, l. 36—55

1559. "In which first yeare of hir maiesties reign, falling in the yeare of our Lord one thousand fíue hundred fiftie and nine, this lord did most honourable interteine the quéene with hir traine, at his house of Cobham hall, with sumptuous fare, and manie delights of rare inuention. Amongst which, one comming now to mind, which I then being yoong beheld, vrgeth me forward in the setting downe thereof; which was: a banketing house made for hir maiestie in Cobham parke, with a goodlie gallerie therevnto, composed all of greene, with seuerall deuises of knotted flowers, supported one each side with a faire row of hawthorne trées, which nature séemed to haue planted there of purpose in summer time to welcome hir maiestie, and to honor their lord and maister."—Cont. of Holinshed's Chron.: A treatise of the Lord Cobhams by Fr. Thin. iii. 1510, col. 2, l. 8-23.

<sup>1</sup> Hearne's Diary, vol. lxiii. p. 118, April 9th, 1717. "Mr Thin, a young scholar, beheld the funeral Pomp of Card. Poole, a°. 1558. See the castrated sheets of Holingshede, p. 1489. c. 1." There may be more notices of himself by Thynne than those I quote.

Under the year 1573, Francis Thynne speaks of Queen Elizabeth's progress through his native county, Kent :

"Of which the queenes progresse into that countrie (wherein my selfe was borne & bred, and wherein I haue both manie friends & kinred (whome this progresse toucheth) I must aswell (for the loue which I naturallie beare vnto it, as for the courtesie I dailie receive in it) leaue some memorie to posteritie. Thus therefore I enter into her maiesties progresse into that countrie."—Holinshed, iii. 1493, col. 2, l. 30-6.

II. Francis Thynne married (at about 19), and improvident.

Though Francis Thynne expressly tells us that he "was never brought up in any Vniuersitie" (p. lxi, below), Anthony Wood claims him for Oxford<sup>1</sup>. His own words in 1600 to the Chancellor, Sir Thomas Egerton, seem to imply that they were at Lincoln's Inn together—"those yonger yeares when Lincolns Inn societie did linke vs all in one cheyne of Amitie" (p. ciii, below). Yet Thynne's name is not in the Lincoln's Inn books, as Mr Doyle the Steward, and I, can testify, though "Thomas Egerton" is there as admitted in the 2nd year of Elizabeth's reign (17 Nov. 1559 to 16 Nov. 1660). The "Lincolns Inn societie" must mean only that Thynne associated with Egerton and his barrister friends.

In February 1573 Francis Thynne 'writes from Barnesey [Bermondsey] streate to Sir John Thynne at Longleat<sup>1</sup>, saying that he is in debt, and in fear of prison, and asking for money'.

II k. Francis Thynne's first antiquarian work. (See Notes.)

But though he is in debt, he is at work, and evidently keeps at work after he has been put in the debtors' prison. Our earliest extant note of his labours is in 1573, when we find his verse "epistle dedicatorye of the booke of Armorye of Claudius Paradyne" in the first MS. of Ashmole 766, in the Bodleian, the lines being dated from "Barmondsey streathe the 2 of Auguste 1573." The next poem in the MS.—printed below, in Appendix IV, p. 103, Thynne's "dyscourse uppon y<sup>e</sup> creste of the Lorde Burghley"—is not dated. But it mentions our author's distress, and also says that he went into a garden, l. 70. If this is not a dream-garden the Southwark prison may well have had a real one; and as Thynne in his second letter, of 19 March, 1576, to Lord Burghley alludes to that nobleman's crest (p. liv, below), I conclude that the poem—a shockingly bad one—was written in or about March 1576. But I am anticipating. On Oct. 19, 1573, Thynne began his collection of alchemical and other treatises, which is now the Brit. Mus. Addit. MS. 11,388. It begins "In dei nomine. Amen. 1573. 19 octobris." Notes by Thynne are on leaf 5, "I wroughte no more of this booke [The secretes of Alchymye] out of the nighshe (?) coopy I had of m<sup>r</sup> de . . . [name rubd out] because I bought the same booke after in Latyn. F. THYNNE.

(leaf 15, back) "Explicit Aristoteles de pomo. Copied oute the 18 of September 1574, by me FRANCIS THYNNE."

<sup>2</sup> This motto, which he writes 3 times in 25 leaves, points to his being in prison, I suppose.

(leaf 37) "finis tractatus de phenice, siue lapide philosophico. Copied out the 18 of Nouember by me FRANCIS THYNNE" (with 4 dashes and dots underneath).

Though 1564 is the first date on the label on the back of this MS. volume of 'Collections' (Brit. Mus. Addit. MS. 11,388), that date must apply to "the order for buryalls to be serued" by Heralds, made "At a Chapter holden at the office of Armes the 20 of Februarye 1564," copied on leaf 189, back, to 190 of the MS., and not to Thynne's own work. His first line in this MS. is, as I said above, "In dei nomine. Amen. 1573. 19 octobris." Here is the Manuscript's list of Contents, by a later hand, to give you a notion of Thynne's reading, and notebooks:—

On the 24th of January 1573-4, Francis Thynne got Letters of Administration, as we have seen (p. xl), to the estate of his mother who had died before June 1572. But he could not have obtained money enough from his mother's estate to clear himself from his debts.

II l. Francis Thynne in Prison, but not mad.

His wife's trustee (Mr Eynes, p. xlviii) or another creditor for £100, must have imprisond him in January 1574, even on Jan. 13, if we take strictly his words that on March 13, 1575-6, he had been confined "for two yerres and twoo months" (p. liii). In February 1574-5, he writes from the White Lion to Sir John Thynne at Longleat, and says he has 'been a long time in prison. He was there still on the 16th of July in that year<sup>1</sup>'.

In March 1575-6, we find him in sore trouble; robdd by his wife's relations (at least, so he says), still in prison, nearly starving, and writing two such letters to Lord Burghley, praying for his release, that the Lansdowne-MS. indexer 'writes him down' "Thynne Francis, a mad-man<sup>2</sup>"; and indeed to any one who does not know that Lord Burghley's crest was a sheaf of golden corn,—on which Francis Thynne wrote a Discourse<sup>3</sup> (see p. 103, below)—and its supporters lions, Thynne's distress may well seem to have toucht his sanity in the 2nd letter. But the signatures to both these letters are unquestionably our Francis's; and so are the bodies of them, and their turns and phrases too:—

Righte honorable (my Verry good lorde) presuminge uppon the honor of your callinge, the wisdom of your mynde, the curtesye of your dispositione, & the fauorable receyte of this my humble sute, I am the moore encoraged to hasarde my rashe attempte, wherein I most humbly besече yo<sup>r</sup> rather to consider the state of my enforced compleinte, then the malipertnesse of my disordered penne, that dareth so impudently (withoute respecte of honor in yo<sup>r</sup>, & thee dutye of wisdom in mee) seeke to craave that at your Lordships handes whiche I cannot deserue, & muche lesse shalbe able to requite. <sup>2</sup> The entries in the Lansdowne Catalogue, p. 43, col. 2, are, "57. Francis Thynne, (who seems to be a madman,) to Lord Burghley; to procure his release from confinement at the White Lion, March 13, 1575.

"58. A second mad letter of F. Thynne, from his restraint at the White Lion, to Lord Burghley, March 19, 1575."

This is adding insult to injury. The cataloguer's coolness in covering his own ignorance and laziness by writing Thynne down 'madman,' is delicious.

<sup>3</sup> Hearne's Diary, vol. xcvi. p. 56, March 28, 1723. "Mus. Ashmole 766. 2. Discourse on L. Burleigh's Crest. myserable pouertye, hathe emboldened the distressed persone to craue your honors fauorable succor to helpe the poore estate of mee, vnjustly delt withall by persons of suche substance in goodes, such pollycye in wisdom, such experience in the affayres of the worlde, & of suche credit in countenance, as I shall vtterly be ouerthrowen, withoute your Lordships good assistance therein. Whereunto I do most dutyfully submytt my selfe & my cause, desyringe your Lordship to deale with mee none otherwise then the iustnesse of my case, the simplycyte of my doinges, the trothe of the matter, the credit of my good naame, & the nobilytee of your callinge, shall well deserue. But what doo I spende manye Woordes, in a iuste cause, from a iuste manne, to require iustice, since that same is superfluous, & to seeke frendshippe in an iniuste matter is meere iniustice, & vtter discredit to the party that craueth yt.

I, Therefore, in the uprightnesse of my sute, most humbly beeseche your Lordship so to stand thus honorable unto mee, that yt will please thee same that I and my matter may bee called before the highe boorde of thee counsell (or rather (as I most earnestly doo craue) before your honoour,) that by your Lordships vnderdeserued curtesye soome remedy mighte bee provided, to helpe my distresse, too releue my neede, to banishe my famyne, & to moderat the iniuste dealinges of euill persons, my case beinge suche as must be determyned by conscience & reasone; for otherwise, suche is the meaninge of my aduersaries (who by name & nature ar my kinsmen), as yf they may bringe mee lowe (as they haue), withoute money; keepe mee (as they doo) imprisoned withoute bayle; make me helplesse (as they trauell therein) withoute freendes, & comfortlesse withoute Justice; they had the same they desyred, for that, that vnder thee cooleore of prouidinge for the assurance of my wiues iointure (whereby they haue withholden ijC markes by yere this fowre yeres) they [f 117, back] haue not all only spoyled mee, but also styll receue the reuenues of the same, not forcesinge<sup>1</sup> what become of mee, sufferinge mee in the meane tyme, withoute sustenance for my maintenance, & withoute money for the discharge of my debte (beinge but one hundred pounde), the same beinge the only cause of my imprisonment) to lye these two yeres and twoo months<sup>2</sup> in restreynte of my libertye, not in case able to recouer my lyvinge because I cannot (againsite their iniuste detencions thereof) haue lybertye to followe the lawe, nor in case able to pay my creditor, for that, that I haue not, by their euill dealinges, wherewith-all for too doo yt, as in reasone I shold, & in trothe & conscience I wolde. Wherefore, vppon the knees of my harte, an the pytyfull compleinte of a famished prisoner, I most humbly beseche your Lordship to stande my assured patrone (as one to whome I owe my lerninge,<sup>3</sup> my traueil, my libertye, & my lyfe (the [whiche] withoute spedye preuentione resteth in danger of loosinge by the dissolucione of my bodye) & that yt will plesse your Lordship, for the admynistratione of

Justice, for godds cause, for the nobilytye of your estate, for the delyuerye of your poore Dutyfull servante, for the defence of the oppressed, for the succor of the helpelesse, & to answere the present hoope I haue in your Lordships curtesye, not to denye this mye iuste desire, but to suffer my importuntye (with the widdowe mentioned in S<sup>t</sup> Luke) to ouercome youre Lordships cause of refusall of this my humble sute, yf yo<sup>a</sup> shold haue occasione mynistred vnto your honor so too doo.

Thee performance whereof shall not all onely bee acceptable to godd, answerable vnto your callinge, & profitable vnto mee, but shall also bynde mee & all my frendes to our vttermoste endeour to rest at your Lordships good commaunde. Thus hooping your Lordship will deale with mee as most curteously heretofore yo<sup>a</sup> haue alwayes delt with others, Commendinge mee & my estate to your fauorable comforte, Cravinge pardonne for my tedious writinge, & commyttinge your Lordship to thee gouernment of the almighty, who sende your Lordship further encrease of honor, & mee present release of restreynte, I most humbly take my leaue, the 13 of March 1575[-6] from the White lyone<sup>1</sup>, the Vnhappye place of my sorrowfull restreinte. <sup>1</sup> This Parish [St George's, Southwark] is of chief Note for the Kings Bench Prison, the White Lyon, the Marshalsea Prison, and the Mint, the ancient Retreats of ill principled Persons, that there sheltered themselves from the Payment of their just Debts, before the late Act of Parliament that took away that pretended Privilege. . . There was formerly in Southwark but one Prison, particularly, serving for the whole County of Surrey, and that called the WHITE LYON, which was for the Custody of Murtherers, Felons, and other notorious Malefactors. It was situate at the South end of S. Margarets Hill near unto *S. <sup>1</sup> Lord Burghley's crest as blazond by Thynne in the Ashmole MS. 766, leaf 5, back, is a sheaf of golden corn, supported by two lions rampant, the left one argent (white), the right one azure, all within the ribbon of the Garter, mottod 'Honi soit qui mal y pense'. This, Thynne interprets thus: the argent lion stands for Luna, in the lowest sphere; and Lord Burghley is this, in "that low'st in curteous dedes, eche doth hym know". The golden sheaf is the Sun in mid-heaven; and Lord Burghley is this, for he is "in myddest of worthy gentryes seuenta degree,

a lordly baron of nobyltye".

The azure lion is Jupiter, in the highest sphere but one; and Lord Burghley is this, as Elizabeth's minister,

"his Lyon Jupiter, in second sphere, is seconde rule, which he doth iustly bere."

See the poem in Appendix IV, below. A sheaf of arrows, or six arrows crosst alternately, form the Salisbury (or 2nd son, Robert Cecil) crest. The shield or coat of arms is supported by two prancing ermind lions.

II m. F. Thynne's bad opinion of Wives.

That Thynne's married life was not a happy one, is clear also from at least two of his 'Epigrams,' which though dated A.D. 1600, fit-in so well here that I quote them out of their order of time. A wife, he says, is best when she's dead; and marriage is happy only when the husband is deaf, and the wife blind.

Epigrams.

(Bridgewater House MS.)

When a wife is badd, worse, and worst.

[leaf 44, back]

When she is good, better, and beste.

My frend, yf that my Iudgement do not fayle, as one well taught by longe experience skill, thy wife allwaies is but a needefull ill, and beste is bad, though she faire she beare her saile; 4 but vsd not well, she worsen is to thee, but worst of all, when best she seemes to bee Thy wife is good when shee forsakes this light, and yealdes by force to natures destinie: 8
 she better is, (thow livinge,) yf she die;
 but best, when she doth soonest take her flight;
 for soe to thee thine ease shee doth restore, which soonest hadd, doth comforte thee the more. 12

Mariage.

Deepe witted menn b'experience haue contrived, [leaf 58, back] that mariage, good and quiet is, ech hower, where the mans heringe organs are deprived of their right vse and sound receyving power, 4 and where is seelēd vp the womans percing sights, that she maie not behould her husbands sweet delights.
 For since natūre hath made that sex most fraile, and subiect to tormenting Ielousie, 8
 vpon ech guiltles signe they will not fayle, their loving husbands to suspecte falselie:
 yet if she could not see, but were by nature blinde, such fonde conceites she would not harbor in her minae. 12
 And if suspected manne were dombe to heere
 the Iealous brawles of his vnquiet wife, ech would embrace and hould the other deere, wherbye they might obtayne a quiet life; 16 without which rare effects, swete mariage is a hell;
 but linkēd with these guiftes, doth Paradise excell. 18

His 'Embleames' "Strangers more friendlie to vs than our owne kinde and kindred" (MS., leaf 38), of 'Societie' (leaf 19), and his Epigram "The waye to gett and keepe frendes" (leaf 43, back), chime-in with the feelings he gives vent to in his White-Lion letters.

II n. His Release, and 'Homo, Animal Sociale'.

Whether Lord Burghley freed him from prison, or his cousin Sir John Thynne came to his rescue, I find no record, but from the very warm way in which he afterwards speaks of Lord Burghley (p. lix, lxxxv, below) it is possible that to him, either directly or indirectly, Thynne ow'd his release. He must have been at liberty before June 6, 1576, as on that day he writes to Sir John Thynne "From my cousin Bechers<sup>1</sup>": but where that was, is not stated, says Canon Jackson. Another letter<sup>1</sup> to Sir John is dated July 22, 1577, but does not say where it was written from, though in it Francis states that he still owes money. Between that date and October 20, 1578,—when we find Francis Thynne at Longleat, Sir John Thynne's new mansion (now the seat of Sir John's descendant, the Marquis of Bath), despatching to Lord Burghley (as I suppose) a dissertation of 6 folio leaves, closely written (now leaves 70—75 of the Lansdowne MS. 27), on the theme Homo, animal sociale; and soon after dedicating a treatise to one of his patrons and friends, Lord Cobham, the history of whose family he afterwards wrote,—the following arrangement, stated by Canon Jackson from the Longleat Papers, must have been made:—

"After the death of his Mother (who had re-married, first Sir Edward Boughton, and then Hugh Cartwright, Esq.), the lease of Erith Rectory<sup>2</sup> had come into Francis Thynne's possession. He had mortgaged it. Sir John Thynne of Longleat redeemed the mortgage, and also paid debts for him: and having purchased the fee-simple from the Crown (upon the confiscation of the monasteries) and then paying Francis for his interest in the lease, Sir John became the owner of the tithes; agreeing at the same time to allow a maintenance for the wife, and to give Francis a home at Longleat. Of this, Francis availed himself, for the dedication to Lord Cobham of his little book, 'The Perfect Ambassador,' is dated from Longleat in 1578(-9). Sir John Thynne died in 1580. Francis appears to have expected that his residence at Longleat was to continue for his own life, but the second Sir John Thynne thought otherwise; for in 1604, after the second Sir John Thynne's death, and when Sir Thomas Thynne had Longleat, Francis addressed a petition to Lord Chancellor Ellesmere, setting forth that though such had been the engagement, it had not been observed, neither had he received any allowance or compensation in lieu of it. Lord Ellesmere wrote in a friendly way on his behalf to Sir Thomas Thynne, the third owner, suggesting some assistance as compensation; but the result of his interference does not appear."

On Oct. 20, 1578, Thynne writes (either to Lord Cobham or Lord Burghley, I suppose) a dissertation on the theme Homo, animal sociale. This is now 6 leaves, 70-5, of the Lansdowne MS. 27. I give the beginning and end:

"Redinge / right honorable / that 'Homo is animal sociale,' I cold not conceue wherefore the same was spoken, vnlest yt were uppon these

II. o. Francis Thynne's Perfect Ambassadors, 1579, printed 1652.

The reader will notice, near the end of the extract, Thynne's mention of "the Reliques of my spoyled Librarie in the time of mine impoverish-ing and infortunate trouble."

1578(-9). Jan. 8, at Longleate. Thynne's 'Epistle Dedicatorie' and wind-up to his Perfect Ambassadors.<sup>1</sup>

To the Right Honourable, his singular good Lord, William Lord Cobham, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, Francis Thynn wisheth perpetuall health, further increase of honour and good success in all his Honourable Attempts.

Although, my very good Lord, neither according to my honest desire, nor your honorable desert (which worthily may challenge from me a farre more dutifull service than my attendance upon you in Flanders) I could not in person, as I did in good will, be present in the same Journey (where I both might have reaped profit, and your Lordship been fully ascertained of my good mind towards you, for that I protest unto you, remaining in this out-nook of the little world (where London newes is somewhat scant, & the Princes affaires very seldome known) I had no intelligence of your so honourable place of Embassie in this year of Christ 1578. untill two daies after your departure. The which bred some corsey<sup>1</sup> of a Melancholy conceipt in me by reason of my foolish negligence that would not oftner direct my Letters to crave intelligence from London. And by reason of the unkind forgetfulnes of my kindred & friends remaining there, who would not vouchsafe so much courtesie in a matter so much desired by me, and of so small a trouble to them, as to direct their Letters to me thereof. Wherefore sorrowing for that which is past, that I could not, as the rest of my Kindred & friends did, assume such enterprize upon me, and yet not only rejoycing at your honourable entertainment, of the good success, of the wise Dispatch, and of the orderly behaviour, wherewith your Lordship was received beyond the Seas; but also desirous by pen, amongst the rest of your wel willers at this your happy and desired return, to congratulate your Lordship with the tokens of my old vowed fidelitie, as a sign of my hidden joy conceived of your safe arrival, I have thought it my challenged duty to direct this tedious Discourse unto you, containing aswell the unfolding of my former griefs, As laying open to your sight the rejoycing of my well-willing heart. And for that other occasion doth not so fitly minister cause to me in other sort to present myself unto you than by saying somewhat which may, & doth concerne Embassadors; Therefore, as wel for that the time is most apt for the man to whom I write, having supplied such place, & for that it also putteth me in mind of your honourable courteous talk which you have often used unto me in like matters, I will here in affaires of Embassie, to an Ambassadors present my labours, the Ambassadors of their absent Master & make discourse of things belonging to Embassie. Wherein I will shew the original, Privileges, the Wisdom, the Valour, the quick wits, & other the behaviours of Ambassadors, as examples for us in all respects to imitate. For as Seneca saith in his sixth Epistle, 'Longum iter est per præcepta, breve & efficax per exemplum,' of which kind of people, that is, of Ambassadors, Legats, or Deputies, Messengers of Princes, and of the Orators of Kings (For all these severall termes do include one Function exercised in divers manners) because there are sundry sorts somewhat different from the custome of our age, I will not only intreat as they were in times past among the magnificent Romans in the midst of their greatest glory; But I will also in like order collect and digest the usage and duty of them as they are now used, & put in Office by Princes, Kings and Emperors, for the executing of their determined pleasure. In which (my good Lord) if anything shall be found, that for want of more diligent search may seem faulty, consider that 'Bernadus non videt omnia.' Wee are no Gods, wee can say no more than reasonable conjecture or former Authority may lead us unto. But if in the placing of the same in the apt sentences, or in the sweet composition of stile, there appear default, impute the same to the want of leisure, and to the rude hasty writing of him, who was never brought up in any Vniversitie; and I seek not 'fucum verborum,' so I may have 'ipsam veritatem & materiam solidam.' And thus this far of that; And so into my purposed matter.

Thus having ended my Christmasse work, done in the midst of my Christmasse plaies, as may appear by the Christmasly handling thereof, I after Christmasse consecrate the same to your honourable acceptance, not as a thing worthy your desert and judgement, but as a thing that answereth my desire, and good meaning. The which I beseech your Lordship to accept as lovingly from mee as it is presented willingly by mee unto you, with whom (as soon as by leasure I might, and as by learning I was able, and as a body born out of time, but yet thinking it better late than never) I deemed it my dutie to congratulate your return with some such poor gift as the Reliques of my spoyled Librarie in the time of mine impoverishing, and infortunate trouble, would yield mee Abilitie to bestow.

And thus most humbly commending me to your Honourable liking, committing you to the Almightyes protection, I dutifully take my leave this eighth of Januarie 1578. at Longleate.

Yours

II p. The Comentaries of Britayne.

The Cotton MS. Faustina E. VIII, 221 leaves, one of Thynne's MS. note-books of collections for English and family history, is "parte of the first parte of the comentaries of Britaine, collected by francis Thynne, by francis Thynne [so], A° 1581, et 8 Januarij" (leaf 2). Other dates are on leaf 59, 'The erles of Lincolne, begonne the 7 of Auguste 1582.' Leaf 77, 'The Register of the erles of Lincolne. In 1583 Francis Thynne writes from London to the second Sir John Thynne of Longleat, who had, as Francis considerd, broken his father's engagement to find a home at Longleat for Francis during his life (p. lviii). The letter is at Longleat, but no copy is allowd me.

We now come to Francis Thynne's first appearance in print (p. lx), and his most important work, his share in the Continuation and Revision of Holinshed's Chronicle. He tells us (p. lxxiii, below) "that both the historie of England & Scotland were half printed before I set pen to paper to enter into the augmentation or continuation of anie of them;" that he took the work up unwillingly, and only "by inforcement of others, whose commanding friendship it had been sacrilege for me to haue gainesaid" (p. lxx, lxxviii). He declares his only desire is to get at the truth, and his willingness to receive and make corrections of his work (p. lxxviii, lxxix); he gives his detractors an occasional dig (ib., p. lxxvii), is continually profuse in apologies (p. lxx, lxxiii, &c.), but still reminds his readers that he has faithfully taken much pains with his work, and toild hard for it (p. lxxix, lxxx). He was surely fit to help in such an undertaking. He had plannd, and made collections for, a "Pantographie of England, containing the vniuersall description of all memorable places, and persons as well temporall as spiritual" (p. lxxv). (Parts of this were no doubt his projected Lives of the Lord Chancellors (p. lxxix, lxxx), Lord Treasurers (p. lxxviii), Earls (p. lxxxi), Lord Cobhams (p. xcix), and Lords Marshal (p. c) of England, as his Lives of the Protectors and Cardinals certainly were (p. lxxv.) He was at least high in the second rank of antiquaries of his day; esteemed and praised by Camden (p. cvi, below), the friend of Egeron (afterwards Lord Chancellor); and he evidently knew, and was thought well of, by men like Lord Burghley, Lord Cobham, Archbp. Whitgift.

That Thynne understood the duty and office of a Historian is clear from his 'Continuation of the Annales of Scotland', in which he selects his materials, combines them, judges their value, though here even he cannot keep from giving six lists (mostly with short lives) of Protectors, Dukes (2 sorts), Chancellors, Archbishops, and Writers on Scotch History (p. lxxi-iii below). But when we turn to his insertions in, and continuations of, Holinshed, we find that Thynne has unluckily forgotten all about the Historian's duty; the Antiquary, the Compiler of pedigrees and biographies, has taken the upper hand. When he came on a High Constable, Cardinal, Archbishop, Duke, in Holinshed, or Stow's or Hooker's Continuation, he evidently said, "Happy thought, let's have a list of all English Cardinals, Archbishops, Dukes, &c.," and accordingly collected the lists, and stuck them into the History, or narrative, over and over again, whisking the reader off, at a moment's notice, from the middle of Elizabeth's reign (say) to Edward the Confessor, or William the Conqueror, and then running him gently down a list of Archbishops, say, for sixty odd folio pages, till he landed him in Elizabeth again.

Whether some of Thynne's 'Collections' were thought too long for the continued Holinshed, or whether they, or any intervening matter by other hands contained praise of any traitors or unpopular folk, I cannot say, but almost all of the copies appear to have been castrated. Bp Nicholson in his Eng. Hist. Libr. says the reason of the castrations was because F. Thynne had greatly praised Lord Cobham, who afterwards fell into disgrace; but the William Brooke, Lord Cobham, whom Thynne praised, did not die till 1596, and was, in 1586-8, in favour, and not in disgrace, with Elizabeth (Hearne, Cur. Disc. ii. 445, ed. 1771). True it is that Thynne also praised his sons, Henry<sup>1</sup>—who was attainted in

1604, when his honours became forfeited (Courthope, Historic Peerage, p. 119), and George<sup>1</sup>, who was executed and attainted (Nicolas, Engl. Peerage, i. 142-3), but these few lines cannot have been ground for cancelling a hundred and fifteen folio pages of Holinshed.<sup>2</sup>

I find ground enough for the castrations, in the nature of the matter cut out, which consists of 1. Thynne's "Discourse of the Earles of Leicester by succession"; 2. a large part of Stow's narrative of "The Earle of Leicesters passing ouer into the Low Countries"; 3. Thynne's Lists and short Lives of the Archbishops of Canterbury, of the Lord Cobhams, and the Wardens of the Cinque Ports. One can fancy the feelings of an editor or reader, or even one of the worthy payers for the book—"John Harison, George Bishop, Rafe Newberie, Henrie Denham, and Thomas Woodcocke"—when, having already suffered six times from Thynne's interrupting long lists, he came on the seventh,—thrust-in just as Leicester had been grandly receivd at Colchester, and was on the point of embarking his army for Flushing (p. lxxxi); and then found the 5 folio pages of this seventh list<sup>3</sup> followd very soon by a whole hundred pages of Thynne's further interrupting 8th, 9th, and 10th lists. Surely it 'ud be enough to make a man swear, and declare he would not stand it, even in those old long-winded days. But be the motive what it might, out went the original leaves Vvvvvvj. to Iiiiiiii 6, or p. 1419-1538; and instead of them were put-in a new Vvvvvvj., or p. 1419, 1420; a new leaf signd A, B, C, D, E, paged 1421, 1490; another leaf signd F, G, H, I, paged 1491, 1536; and another leaf not signd, but paged rightly 1537, 1538.

<sup>2</sup> The "Advertisement" to the 4to reprint of Holinshed in 1807-8 contains nothing about the reasons for the castrations. Hearne says "a great many sheets (beginning in p. 1419, and ending in p. 1575 [that is, 1535]) were castrated or suppressed, because several things in them gave great offence."

The new p. 1419 reprints its first 33 lines, ending with "inter-teined" from the original; then winds-up in 16 lines, l. 34-50, three pages (1424-6) of Stow's description (from the book of one Archer,) of Leicester's triumphant reception at Flushing, and his progress to Middleborough, Rotherodam, Delph, Donhage; and then, at l. 51, after bringing him to Leyden, reprints from the original (p. 1427, l. 22, to p. 1429, l. 54) the description of the Leyden "seuen seuerall shewes that follow", his return to Donhage, &c., and the Placard containing the Authority that the States gave him to govern the Low Countries, save only that lines 63-9, 72-3, p. 1420 of the reprint, abstract shortly, longer passages of the original.

We then find on the substituted p. 1421, from l. 50, col. 1, to l. 39 col. 2, a statement and document not in the original (so far as I can see), Leicester's 10 "Lawes for capteins and souldiors". Next come 5 lines, 40-4, from the original p. 1429, l. 39-41, followed by  $2\frac{1}{2}$  lines of summary, 1 line from p. 1430, l. 44 of the original—"the tenth . . of March he came from Harlem to Amsterdam";—then again a statement (to l. 63) not in the original, about three or four hundred poor and sick English soldiers reliev'd by the Utrecht folk.

With l. 64 of the substituted p. 1421, begins a column of reprint from the original, p. 1433, col. 2, l. 23, to p. 1434, col. 1, l. 28. Then the castrator leaves the sumptuousness of the Utrecht banquet on St George's Day 'to the imagination of the reader,' and Leicester 'in the hands of God,' saying "we will heere leaue the netherlands, and approach to matters of England." Stowe's 10 leaves are thus cut down to 2. But now comes the cutting down of poor Francis Thynne's hundred pages (1434-1454) to one column! Had Stowe a hand in it, and was he call'd "one inferior personne" for it? Let us hope not: he had himself lost four fifths of his Low Countries tale. Well, the substituted leaf in l. 15-29 of p. 1490 (back of p. 1421) col. 2, reprints from the original, p. 1434, col. 2, l. 57, &c., the passage about the beheading of the two Seminary Priests, the burning of the poisoning Wench, and the appointment of Archbp. Whitgift, Wm Lord Cobham, and Lord Buckhurst, given on p. lxxxii, below. It then winds-up Francis Thynne's 100 pages in the following innocent way,—and afterwards (p. 1491, col. 1, l. 15) simply reprints the original, p. 1535, though it cannot make its pages coincide with the original's till the end of p. 1538 is reacht:—

“ And here, as in other places of these chronicles, where we haue set downe certeine collections of right worthie personages in high calling and verie honourable office, we are lead by some reason to deliuer a catalog of the names (at least) of such archbishops as haue successiuelie possessed the metropolitan see of Canturburie, therein implieng their antiquitie and authoritie, &c: and from thense proceed to saie somewhat of the lord Cobhams and lord wardens of the cinque ports as a matter of some consequence, by means of the mutuall aduancement at one instant, which hir highnesse of speciall grace vouchsafed them both. And to begin with Canturburie, being first named, you shall vnderstand that Augustine the moonke (according to the receiued opinion of chronographers) was the first archbishop which occupied that metropolitan see; next whome succeeded one Laurentius, then Melitus, Iustus, Honorius, Deus-dedit, Theodorus, Brightwaldus, Tatwinus, Nothelmus, Cutbertus, Beguinus, Lambertus, Athelardus, Wilfredus, Theologildus, Athelredus, Plegmundus, Athelmus, Wolfelmus, Odo Seuerus, Dunstanus, Ethelgarus, Siricius, Aluricius, Elphegus, Liuingus, Agelnothus, Edsinus: and so forward with the residue before and after the conquest, which, being multiplied by vnities, doo make vp the complet number of three score and twelue.

The number of Archbishops of Canturburie from the first to the last.

“ Where, by the waie, we might touch the varietie of their names (sith authors therein doo dissent) as also the time wherein they liued and flourished, with some commemoration of their acts and deeds, both in church and commonwealth. But this kind of discourse being ecclesiasticall, is vnproper for this secular historie: wherefore, labouring no further therein, we will remit the reader to such authors as ‘Ex professo’ haue ampie treted of that argument: minding now, by waie of note, in a few lines to touch the thre late priuats, as they haue succeeded ech other since the coronation and regiment of hir maiestie: the first of whom was Matthew Parker, whose predecessor, Reg. Poole, dieng, he was aduanced, and inioied the same aduancement certeine yeares, (hauing been the seuentith archbishop of that see) during which time he did much good diuerse waies, deseruing well, not onelie of the church, but also of the commonwealth. But hauing spoken elsewhere of this man, we will here stae our course; concluding this collection of archbishops in their successions, with the two reuerend diuines and doctors, the one, Edmund Grindall late deceased; the other, Iohn Whitegift now liuing; of whom, no more but silence, for vertue dooth sufficientlie commend hir selfe. Now order would, that we should descend into a discourse of the lord Cobhams & lord wardens of the cinque ports, remembred before, page 1435, a 10 [cut out by the Castrator], but herein the reader is patientlie to put vp the disappointment of his expectation, vpon supposall of some reasonable impediment whie the same was not satisfied. And now to the course of our historie, orderlie to be continued.”

[Reason for leaving out F. Thynne's Lives of the Archbishops.]

We can fancy our just-turn'd author's disgust at having his longest and most carefully compil'd collections thus quasht. He must have sympathiz'd with his Father on the traditional foret cancelling of his first edition of Chaucer (p. xli-ii above). But as we have no record of any complaint of his treatment, though he had so many chances of making several in his different MS. treatises, we must suppose, either that he grinnd and bore it, seeing its reasonableness, on political or literary grounds, or that, as his copy was not castrated, he dwelt in happy ignorance that other copies were.

To get the reader into Thynne's style, to show the nature of the man, and the character of his work, I give longish extracts from the beginnings or ends, or both, of his continuations of, and insertions in, Holinshed; namely, from

a. a. his Forewords to his Continuation of the Annales of Scotland (p. lxx); and b. his 6 Lists of Nobles or Officers in that Continuation (p. lxxi-iv), all in Holinshed, vol. ii;

. . . Accept therfore (good reader) that which I doo suppose I haue best spoken (by this my argument grounded vpon Socrates) in this my continuance of the Annales of Scotland vnwillinglie attempted, but by inforcement of others, whose commanding friendship it had been sacrilege for me to haue gainesaid. And therefore rather carelesse to hazard the hard opinion of others, descanting vpon my sudden leaping into the printers shop, (especiallie at the first, in a matter of such importance,) than the losse of the long and assured friendship of those which laied this heauie charge vpon my weake shoulders, I haue like blind baiard boldlie run into this matter, vnder the hope of thy fauourable acceptance. And though herein I shall not in euerie respect satisfie all mens minds and iudgements, that for fauour of persons, times & actions, will, like Proteus, at their own pleasure, make black seeme white, alter euerie matter into euerie shape, & curiously carping at my barrennes in writing, bicause I omit manie things in this my continuance of the Annales of Scotland, & haue reported things in other formes than some mens humours would haue had me to doo: I must desire thee to consider for the first, that the Scots themselues, besides manie others of our owne nation, are the cause thereof, who either for feare durst not, or for pretended aduise and consultation in the matter would not, or for the restraint of others might not, impart to me such things as should both concerne the honour of the Scottish nation, and the substance of their owne cause<sup>1</sup>. For the other matter, if I should bind my stile to the affections of some, I should breake the rule of Socrates, and not speake the best, sith I should then speake publike and common things, publikelie knowne to all men, contrarie to that order, in which they were commonlie and publikelie seene to be doone of all men; and so by that meanes fall into the reproch of a disdeined reporter. . . .

[p. 406. at foot]. Now before I knit vp this exordium (which may seem to thee in respect of the following historie, to be like the towne, the gates and entrance whereinto being verie great, occasioned Diogenes to will the inhabitants to shut those great gates, least that little towne did run out thereat). I am to admonish thee good reader, that in all my former additions to the historie of Scotland, I haue neither word for word, nor sentence for sentence, set downe the writings of Lesleus or Buchanan, but haue chosen out the matter as I thought best and apt to my desire. After which sort I haue likewise in this my continuation of the annales of that countrie, not set downe or deliuered things to the world in that sort and stile as I haue received intelligence thereof, but <sup>1</sup> "Also it is naturally geuen, or els it is of a deuyllyshe dysposicion of a Scotysch man, not to love nor fauour an Englyshe man." 1542-7. Andrew Boorde: see my edition, p. 137, 59. onellie culled fourth such matter as both the time wherein we liue, the matter whereof I intreat, and the method required therefore, may well heare and challenge. Thus hauing laid before thee, that he writeth best that trulie writeth publike affaires, that I was commanded by my deere freends to enter into this sand; that I cannot discourse of this historie as I willinglie would: that I ought not to forbear to write because I cannot in stile and manner equall the best: that they are to be pardoned that attempt high things: that I haue purposed in generall dedicated this labour to the common reader, and not in particular to anie honourable person: and hoping that thou wilt pardon all imperfections, I sparinglie enter into the continuation of the annales of Scotland (being such as thou maist be content to read, & I am contented to write) in this sort as heere followeth, making my first entrance thereinto with the death of the earle of Lennox, with whome Holinshed finished his chronicle; and so to the matter, after this long and tedious detaining of thee from the same.

Francis Thin.

a. b. He then goes on with the history for ten pages without any list or catalogue of any class of ministers or nobles. But he can then restrain himself no longer, and on p. 417, col. 1, l. 31, breaks out:

(1) "Wherefore, to passe ouer the same, I thinke it not vnméet in this place, sith we haue mentioned this Morton which was the last regent, gouernour or protector, of the kingdome, to set downe a catalog of all such regents and gouernours of that realme, as haue come to my knowledge, after the same sort as I haue done in England, at the end of the gouernment of the duke of Summerset, who was the last protector of that realme; into the discourse whereof I enter as followeth.

"The protectors, gouernours, or regents of Scotland, during the kings minoritie, or his insufficiencie of gouernement, or during his absence out of the realme."

ends p. 421, col. 2, l. 20. "Thus setting end to the discourse of the protectors of Scotland, let vs descend to other matters which haue succeeded."

And he goes on with his history (Lord Chancellor Glamis's murder) for 18 lines, but then again starts off, on l. 38, with

(2) "After the death of which lord Glames, the earle of Atholl was aduanced to that place, and inuested with the title of lord chancellor of Scotland. Wherefore, hauing so good occasion therefore at this time by talking of this earle of Atholl, thus made lord chancellor, to treat of that office; I thinke it not inconuenient in this place, nor disagreeable to the nature of the matter which I haue in hand, somewhat, by waie of digression, to discourse of the originall of this office in Scotland, of the etymon of the name, and other circumstances belonging thereto."

ends p. 422, col. 2, l. 21. "Thus this said for the originall and name of the officer called the chancellor, of whose succession we will talke hereafter, and will now returne to the matters of Scotland in this sort."

After this he keeps to History again for four pages. Then he comes across a Duke, and that sets him off. Has he not made a list of English Dukes? Of course he ought to make a list of Scotch ones. And having accomplit that for the home-made Dukes, what else can he do but add another list of foreign-made ones, though they in number are only four?

(3) [p. 426, col. 2, l. 28.] "After which, sith I am now in discoursing of dukes of that countrie, and haue shewed when the first duke was made in Scotland, and who they were: I thinke it not vnfit for this place, to set downe a catalog of all such dukes of Scotland as haue come vnto my knowledge by search of histories, since the creation of the same first dukes, in the yeare of Christ one thousand foure hundred and eightene; which I will not refuse to doo in this place, following the same course which I haue obserued before in the historie of England, where I haue set downe all the dukes, since the first creation of anie duke in that countrie. Wherefore thus I enter into my dukes of Scotland.

"A catalog of all the dukes of Scotland by creation or descent."

ends p. 428, col. 1, l. 19. "Thus hauing set downe all the dukes which haue beene in Scotland, we wil descend to such Scots as haue inioied that title in a forren nation.

(4) "That diuers of the Scots haue obtained the title and honor of dukes in forren countries."

ends p. 429, col. 1, l. 9 . . . . "of whom, [James, Earl of Arran, made Duke of Chatelerauld by the French king in 1554,] I haue intreated more liberallie in my discourse of the protectors of Scotland, and therefore meane not to speake anie thing of that here: wherfore leauing these dukes, we will returne our pen to other matters doone in Scotland."

Then comes a long period of self-restraint, 25 pages without a list. But an Archbishop affords him relief:

(5) "In which place, sith I haue mentioned Patrike Adamson, the archbishop of saint Andrews, because I shall not haue occasion to speake anie more of him, I will here set downe a collection of all the archbishops of that see."

[p. 454, col. 1, l. 34.] "A Cathalog of the archbishops of saint Andrews, collected out of the histories of Scotland." to p. 455, col. 2, l. 67. Hol. ii.

(6) Lastly comes the one legitimately-placed list :

[leaf 457, col. 2.] "A generall catalog of the writers of Scotland, with the times in which they liued, as well of the yeare of Christ, as of the reigne of Scottish kings.

BEfore I enter into the discourse thereof (which I speak not by waie of impeaching anie glorie of the Scottish nation) I must deliuer the opinion which I conceiue of some of the Scottish writers, set downe by manie of their historiographers, who (sauing correction) finding manie learned writers to be termed Scots, doo transferre them all to their owne countrie of Scotland. But in that, they seeme vnto me (holding the same for this present vntill I may see good authoritie to disprooue it) to be ouer couetous in taking from other that which is their due. For I doo verelie suppose, that manie of those men so termed Scots, were Irishmen borne. For vntill late yeres, a little before the conquest (if my memorie faile me not,) the Irishmen were called Scoti or Scots; wherevpon it is, that the Scots and Irishmen, at this daie now knowne by seuerall names, doo challenge Duns, Colinubanus, and others, to be borne amongst them, some calling them Scots, and other naming them Irishmen, and rebuking the Scots for chalenging those men vnto them. For although the Scots came out of Ireland, and the Irish were called Scots, it is no reason to call a Scot borne in Ireland, by the name of a Scot borne in Scotland, as some writers doo vnder the amphibologically name of Scot. But I (whose determination is not to aduance the one, or derogat from the other) will onlie in this place set them downe as I find them, & shew the different opinions touching the same, still leauing it to the iudgement of others, to thinke thereof as they please; for I neither may, nor will, sit as Honorarius arbiter betwéene those two nations. Wherefore thus I enter into the catalog of the writers of Scotland as followeth."

[p. 464, 2nd col.] Thus setting end to my trauels touching Scotland (which I haue not performed as the maiestie of an historie requireth, but as my skill, helps, & intelligences would permit). I desire thée, reader, to take it in good part, remembring that Vltra posse non est esse, sith according to our old prouerbe, A man cannot pipe without his vpper lip. For being denied furtherance (as in the beginning I said) both of the Scots & other of mine owne nation, and thereby not hauing anie more subiect whervpon to worke, I can doo no more than set downe such things as come to my knowledge. And therefore contenting myself with this, that 'In magnis voluisse sat est'; I commit my selfe and my labors to thy fauorable iudgement, who, measuring my meaning with the square of indifferencie, and pardoning all imperfections in these my first labors, in respect of the shortnesse of time to performe the same (for I protest to thee that both the historie of England & Scotland were half printed before I set pen to paper to enter into the augmentation or continuation of anie of them, as by the inserting of those things which I haue doone maie well appeare) thou shalt incourage me hereafter vpon more lesure, and better studie, to deliuer to the world rare matters of antiquitie and such other labors of mine (Absit verbis philantia) as maie both shew the discharge of my dutie to God, to my countrie, to my prince, and to my friends. For though I maie seeme to be idle, yet I saie with Scipio, Nunquàm minùs sum otiosus quàm cum sum otiosus.

β. We now pass to Thynne's 11 Catalogue-insertions in Holinshed's and his Continuers' History of England, Holinshed, vol. iii.

(1) The High Constables of England. Holinshed, iii. 865, col. 2, l. 63.

A conuenient collection concerning the high constables of England, which office ceased and tooke end at the duke of Buckingham aboue mentioned.

THE death of this duke of Buckingham, being the last constable of England, dooth present apt place to me The collection of Fr. Thin in this yeare 1585. wherein to insert the names of all such honorable persons as haue béene inuested with that title of the constableness of England, an office of great account, & such as sometime was the chéefest place of a temporall subiect in the relme (the high steward excepted) whose power did extend to restreine some actions of the kings. Wherefore, [there] being now no such office (for there was neuer anie aduanced therevnto since the beheading of this duke), I thinke it not vnmeet to make some memorie of those persons possessing so high a place, least both they and their office might hereafter grow in vtter obliuion: these therefore they were.

Alfgarus Stallere, constable to Edward the Confessor, of Alfgarus Stallere. whome thus writeth the historie of Elie in the second booke, written by Richard of Elie, a moonke of that house, in the time of Henrie the second, whose words, although they be somewhat long, I shall not gréeue to set downe in this sort . . . . . [ends on p. 870, col. 1 with]

Edward Stafford, sonne to Henrie duke of Buckingham; Edward Stafford. (being also duke of Buckingham after the death of his father,) was constable of England, earle of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, being, in the first yeare of Henrie the seuenth, in the yeare of our redemption 1485, restored to his fathers dignities and possessions. He is tearmed in the books of the law in the said thirteenth yeare of Henrie the eight (where his arraignment is liberallie set downe) to be the floure & mirror of all courtesie. This man (as before is touched) was by Henrie the seuenth restored to his fathers inheritance, in recompense of the losse of his fathers life, taken awaie (as before is said) by the vsurping king Richard the third<sup>1</sup> . . . . And thus much by Francis Thin touching the succession of the constables of England.

(2) The Protectors of England, 1585. Holinshed, iii. 1069, col. 2.

"The protectors of England collected out of the ancient and moderne chronicles, wherein is set downe the yeare of Christ, and of the king in which they executed that function.

Vpon the death of this duke of Summerset, protector of England, it shall not be vn<sup>1</sup>sitting<sup>1</sup> in this place to set downe all the protectors (whereof I can as yet haue intelligence) and who haue béene gouernors, regents, gardians, or deputies of the realme, and of the kings person during his minoritie and time of his insufficiencie of gouernement; or else of his absence being out of the realme; whereof I haue made an especiall title in my Pantographie of England, in which this my collection of the protectors, although perhaps I shall not set downe all (for Barnardus non videt omnia<sup>2</sup>), yet it is better to haue halfe a loafe than no bread, knowledge of some than of none at all. Thus therefore I begin" . . . . . ends p. 1081, l. 48: "Edward Seimer, knight, vicount Beauchampe, earle of Hertford, & after, duke of Summerset, was protector of the kings person, and of the kingdome, in the first yeare of king Edward the sixt, his nephue, which was in the yeare of our redemption 1546, the king being then but nine yeares old. Of this man is more spoken in my following discourse of all the dukes of England by creation or descent since the conquest; with which duke of Summerset, the last in office of protectorship, Francis Thin knitteth vp this simple discourse of the protectors of England of the kings person."

(3) The Cardinals of England, 1585. Holinshed, iii. 1165, col. 2.

[Preamble, ib. col. 1, l. 60. And thus much of cardinall Poole. Upon whose discourse presentlie ended, as hath beene doone in the treatise of high constables [See pa. 865] at the duke of Buckingham's beheading, and of the lord protectors [See pa. 1069] at the duke of Summersets suffering, (in which two honorable personages, those two offices had their end,) so here we are to infer<sup>3</sup> a collection of English cardinals, which order ceased when Reginald Poole died. After which treatise ended, according to the purposed order, and a catalog of writers at the end of this quéenes reigne annexed<sup>4</sup>, it remaineth that quéene Elizabeth shew hir selfe in hir triumphs at hir gracious and glorious coronation.]

The cardinals of England collected by Francis Thin, in the yeare of our Lord, 1585.

THIS cardinall Poole being the last cardinall in England, and so likelie to be, as the state of our present time dooth earnestlie wish,

dooth here offer occasion to treat of all such Englishmen as haue possessed that honor. Which I onelie doo, for that I would haue all whatsoeuer monuments of antiquitie preserued, least Pereat memoria eorum cum sonitu. Wherefore thus I begin

Adrian, the fourth of that name, bishop of Rome, (called before that time Nicholas Breakespeare) . . . . ends p. 1168, col. 2, l. 13: "Thus concluding (that of all these our English cardinals, with the description of their liues, I will more largelie intreat in my booke intituled the Pantographie of England, containing the vniuersall description of all memorable places, and persons, aswell temporall as spirituall) I request the reader to take this in good part, till that booke may come to light. Thus much Francis Thin, who with the wheele of George Rippleie, canon of Bridlington, after the order of circulation in alchimicall art<sup>1</sup>, and by a geometricall circle in naturall philosophie, dooth end this cardinals discourse, resting in the centre of Reginald Poole, the last liuing cardinal in England, by whose death the said Francis tooke occasion to pase about the circumference of this matter of the cardinals of this realme."

(4) The Dukes of England. Holinshed, iii. 1230, col. 2.

The discourse and catalog of all the dukes of England, by creation or descent, since the time of the conquest. [In margin] The collection of Francis Boteuile, aliás Thin, in the yeare of Christ 1585.

TWO sentences, the one an Italian prouerbe, the other an old English byword, haue moued me to make this collection (at the request of an other) of all the dukes of England. First, the Italian said that France cannot abide anie treasurers, England anie dukes, nor Scotland anie kings; the truth wherof need no confirming examples to be set downe, sith (as saith the philosopher) things subiect to the sense need no further prooffe. Secondlie, the English saieing hath been, that 'a Nag of fiue shillings shall beare all the dukes of England & Scotland'; being spoken in no sense of disgrace to that honorable title, but onelie to shew that the time should come, wherein there should be no dukes in England or Scotland. How true the same is in England, and likelie againe to be in Scotland (being once before verified in that realme; for about fiue years past, there was no duke there also when the duke of Lineux was banished,) euerie man dooth well perceiue. For the death of this Thomas duke of Northfolke, being the last of that honour, hath justified the same in England. And the turmoils in Scotland may perhaps shortlie verifie the same in that countrie, in which there were neuer so few dukes, as that they cannot make the first and smallest number; for being but one in that countrie, and he verie yoong, (which is the duke of Lineux,) if he should miscarie, the same would againe also be as true there as it is now here. For which cause, to perpetuat the memories of such antiquities and titles of honor as age hath consumed with the persons which inioied such prehemences in England, I will, from the first creation of anie duke since the conquest, recite the creation, descent, and succession, of all the dukes of England, shewing first the time of the creation of such dukes, & secondlie the descent of all such dukes as are lineallie issued out of that creation, which follow as they came in one line.

Edward (the eldest sonne of king Edward the third) being sur-named the blacke prince, was made duke of Cornewall the eleauenth of Edward the third, in the yeare of our redemption 1337, when he was yet but yoong. This yoong prince was the first duke in England since the Conquest, and Cornewall was by that creation the first place that was erected to a dukedome. Which duke, being the flower of chialrie in his time, died about the fiftith yeere of king Edward the third; in the yeare of Christ 1376, and was buried at Canturburie . . . . .

"arreigned at Westminster, there condemned, and beheaded on tower hill the two and twentieth of the same moneth: whose bodie, with the head, was buried in the tower, he being the last duke that was created in England . . . And thus farre Francis Thin, touching the creation, and the succession in lineall descents, of all the dukes of England since the conquest."

(5) The Treasurers of England. Holinshed, iii. 1238, col. 1.

[Preamble, l. 48. The thirteenth daie of Julie, the quéenes maiestie at Whitehall made sir William Cicill, lord of Burghleie, lord high treasurer of England: lord William Howard, late lord chamberleine, lord priuie seale: the earle of Sussex, lord chamberleine; sir Thomas Smith, principall secretarie: and Christopher Hatton, esquier, capteine of the gard.]

A treatise of the treasurers of England, set downe out of ancient histories and records, as they succeeded in order of time and in the reigne of the kings. [In margin] Collected by Francis Thin in this yeare of Christ 1585.

THIS adorning of sir William Cicill knight, lord Burghleie with the honour of lord treasurer of England, hath rowsed my enuiet pen thorough the malicious barking of some (who suppose nothing well but what they doo themselues, whereby gaine maie rise vnto their posteritie,) in this liberall sort to set downe the names & times of such treasurers as haue liued in England, as hereafter I will doo the chancellors<sup>1</sup>, and that with as good authoritie as these secret backbiters can challenge anie cunning to themselves, who suppose euerie blast of their mouth to come forth of Trophonius den, and that they spake from the triuet. As I will not arrogate anie thing to my selfe,—for in truth I saie with Socrates, Hoc tantum scio, quod nihil scio, or derogate from them that which their worthinesse maie merit,—so shall I be glad (sith nothing is at the first so perfect, but that somewhat maie be either augmented, or amended, to and in it) that this maie whet those enuious persons to deliuer anie thing to the world, that maie, in comptrolling my labours, benefit their countrie; which if they will not doo, let them cease their euill speeches: for Qui pergit dicere quæ libet, quæ non vult, audiet. And truelie for mine owne part, I will Canere palinodiam, and yeeld them an honourable victorie, if anie better shall be produced; and be heartilie glad, that truth (which is all that I seeke) maie be brought to perfection. Now how well I haue done it, my selfe must not be iudge, desiring pardon of such as, either with wise modestie can or ought to iudge, or with rare antiquities can or will correct what I haue doone, if thorough ignorance we haue committed anie escapes or imperfections: further promising, that if hereafter we espie any of our owne error; or if anie other—either friend for good will, or aduersarie for desire of reprehension—shall open the same vnto me: I will not, for defense of mine estimation, or of pride, or of contention by wranglings or quarrelling vpon authorities, histories and records, wilfullie persist in those faults; but be glad to heare of them, and in the whole and large discourse of the lines of the lord treasurers (almost perfected) correct<sup>1</sup> them. For (as I said) it is truth of antiquities that I seeke for, which being had, (either by good intention of my welwilling friends, or by occasion and reprehension of my enuious emulators) I greatlie esteeme not. And so to the matter.

Saint Dunstane (for I vse that name [Saint] more for antiquities than deuoutnesse cause) was treasurer to Eadred or Eldred, king of England, who began his reigne in the yeare that the word became flesh, nine hundred, fortie and six . . . . .

The other house at this daie in honour, is the lord Greie of Wilton, knight of the garter, and sometime deputie of Ireland, a man of no lesse merit for his seruice abroad in the feats of armes, than is the other Greie [of Ruthine, Earl of Kent] for his seruice at home in the affairs of peace. But I will not saie all that I thinke and know of them both, least some, more maliciouslie than trulie, blemish me with the note of flatterie. For I protest I am so farre estranged from that, as I being not at all knowne to the one, and but slenderlie to the other, and neuer benefited by anie of them both, there is no cause why I should vse anie flatterie: and yet such force hath vertue, as it will shine euen in despite of malice. But againe to the matter . . . .

or noble name besides (for manie priuat reasons which I reserue to my selfe) I will yet speake more liberallie of him and the Greies in my large booke of the liues of the lord treasurors of England, and knit vp this Edmund Greie, lord treasurer, with the marieng of his wife Katharine, the daughter of Henrie Persie, earle of Northumberland, by whome he had issue, George Greie, earle of Kent; Elisabeth, married to Robert, baron of Greiestocke; and Anne, married to John lord Greie of Wilton.

iii. 1256, col. 2, l. 64. This sir William Cecill lord Burghleie, liuing at this instant in the yeare of Christ one thousand, five hundred, eightie and six, to the great support of this commonwealth, dooth worthilie inioy the place of the lord treasurer of England, of whome (for auoiding the note of flatterie) I may not saie that good which we, the subjects of England, doo feele by his meanes, and all the world doth see in his rare and wise gouernment. And therefore leauing what may be said of him for his honorable deserts, from his countrie, his prince, and his countrymen, as well for rare gouernement at home, as for graue managing of the matter of state abroad, I beseech the almightie Lord to lengthen his yeares with perfect health and happie successe of all his good desires, to answer the worth of those his honourable deserts. Thus knitting vp this discourse of the treasurors, with no lesse honorable person of the temporalitie in this our age, than I began the same discourse with a rare person of the spiritualitie [St. Dunstan] in that their age,—this being knowne as singular in policie, as the other was supposed to be in prelacie,—I here set end to that, which with much labour of bodie, trauell of mind, and charge of pursse, I haue brought to this forme, what so euer it be. Thus this much by Francis Thin touching the treasurors of England."

We now leave Francis Thynne's insertions of his Lives, or Catalogues, of men, in Holinshed's own work, and come to those in the Continuation of him.

(6) The Chancellors of England. Holinshed, iii. 1272, col. 1.

[The 25 daie of Aprill [1579], sir Thomas Bromleie, knight, was made lord chancellor of England.]

"The chancellors of England, collected out of sundrie ancient histories. [In margin] The collection of Francis Thin.

THE creation of this sir Thomas Bromleie lord chancellor, hath occasioned me to treate of the chancellors of England, a matter which I haue bene the willinger to set downe, because I would minister cause to others (who haue long wanted of their cunning in this matter,) to impart to the world some of their great knowledge herein, to the benefit of their countrie. But since I doubt that they will not accept this in good part till that come, And as I may, & perhaps doo, (in this) somewhat more largelie (than in the iudgement of others shall seeme answerable to the most receiued opinion touching the chancellors) treat of the antiquitie of them, so yet I haue no mind to erre, or to leade anie other into error. Wherefore, if things be not in perfection vpon this first rough hewing (as nothing is at the first so exquisit, as time dooth not after amend it,) yet disdaine it not, sith this may giue more light than before was knowen. And I determine, God willing, either to amend, or to confesse and auoid, in the large description of their liues, whatsoever imperfections haue now distilled out of my pen, either for mistaking or misplacing of name, person, or time; and so to the matter.

It hath beene some question amongst the best antiquaries of our age, that there were neuer anie chancellors in England before the comming of Edward the confessor out of Normandie, whome they suppose to haue brought the same officer with him from thense into the realme. But sith I am, with manie reasons and ancient authorities, led to beleue the contrarie, I will imbrace the contrarie opinion therevnto, and hold in this discourse (as the order thereof shall prooue) that there were chancellors before saint Edwards time; for the confirmation whereof, and for the authoritie of them; for the etymologie and originall of the name, and for the continuance of their office, thou shalt find an ample discourse in my booke purposelie written of the liues of the chancellors, whervnto I wholie refer thee, who, I hope, shall within these few yeares be partaker thereof; and in the meane time giue thee this tast of the age and names of the chancellors, and vicechancellors, and such keepers of the great seale as serued in place of chancellors. For euerie one that was keeper of the great seale, was not intituled 'chancellor', no more than euerie chancellor was intituled 'the keeper of the great seale.' But because the one did serue in the vacancie of the other (so that after a certaine sort, the keeper of the great seale was vicechancellor, and possessed the place, though not the name, of a chancellor, as in our age Sir Nicholas Bacon did), we therefore haue set downe the names of the one and the other, as they followed in succession of time [from ab. 718 A.D.] after this manner." . . . . .

"Thus (although I maie be a little wetshod in passing ouer the deepe sea of this difficultie of the chancellors, in which I am sure I am not ouer head and eares,) I haue at length brought my chancellors to end : a worke of some labour and difficultie, of some search and charge, which I haue doone onelie of my selfe, without the furtherance or help of some others, who, more inconsideratlie than trulie, doo disorderlie report, that I haue attained vnto this in obtaining those names by some sinister means, from the priuat bookes of them who haue trauelled in the same matter. In which (as I said in the beginning, so I saie againe) if anie imperfection for hast, by reason of the printers speedie calling on me, haue now fallen out of my pen, it shall hereafter, God willing, be corrected in the large volume of their liues. Wherefore as I neither esteeme nor feare the secret reports of some others: so for their countries good it shall be well that they would deliuer something to the world, to bring truth to perfection, (if other men haue vnwillinglie set downe error,) and not as they doo, for a litle commoditie & gaine to themselves, neither benefit their countrie, nor speake well of such as would and doo helpe posteritie. Thus this much by Francis Thin, touching the chancellors of England."

And on the first of December the right honorable lord Robert Dudleie, earle of Leicester, lord lieutenant generall (after he had taken his leaue of hir maiestie & the court) with his traine entred the towne of Colchester in Essex, where the maior & his brethren, all in scarlet gownes, with multitudes of people met him, and so, with great solemnitie, entred the towne, where he lodged that night, and on the next morrow, set forward to Harwich, into the which towne he was accordinglie received and interteined.]

"This going of Robert Sutton of Dudleie, the sonne of Iohn Dudleie duke of Northumberland, into the low countries hath occasioned my pen to treat somewhat of the earles of Leicester. Wherefore, sith there hath beene (some hundred yeares past) some noble persons indued with that honorable title of the erldome of Leicester before and since the conquest, therefore determining to make some mention of them, being a thing not common, and so much the more woorthie of continuance to posteritie, I saie, that if any shall thinke this discourse ouer briebe, and slender mention of such honourable persons, of their woorthie exploits, of their antiquitie, of their descents and succession; let him for this present satisfie himselfe with this, whatsoeuer it now be, untill it shall please God to giue better abilitie & more time, to deliuer to the world the whole discourse of their liues, which I haue alreadie roughlie heuen out of the

On the second daie of Februarie, or feast of the purification of our blessed ladie, doctor Iohn Whitegift, archbishop of Canturburie, William lord Cobham, lord warden of the fve ports, and Thomas lord Backhurt, were chosen and taken to be of hir maiesties priue counsell: the two first, to wit, the archbishop & the lord Cobham, were sworne the same daie, and the third on the next morrow; who, being persons worthie that place, both in respect of their deserts for their former good cariage in the commonwealth, & for the gifts of nature & learning wherewith they are richly adorned, haue occasioned Francis Thin to make the like discourse of the archbishops of Canturburie and the lord Cobhams, with the lord wardens of the fve ports, as he hath before doone in this chronicle of most of the other principall officers of the realme."]

Elder did scoffinglie saie; Truelie he had been to be pardoned, if he had written in Greeke, as one compelled therevnto by the decree of the Amphictiones; the which like matter, also found in Aulus Gellius lib. 9. cap. 8. and spoken of Aulus Labienus, is the same historie vnder other names. For Gellius reciteth that Albinus, who was consull with Lucius Lucullus, did write the deeds of the Romans in the Greeke toong; in the beginning of whose historie he hath set downe, that none ought to be angrie with him, although that he hath not written eloquentlie in those books. For being a Roman borne in Latium, a part of Italie, the Greeke toong was but a stranger vnto him. Which worke, when Marcus Cato had read, and happened on this excuse of Aulus Labienus, he reprehendingly said: 'Art not thou Aulus a great trifier, which haddest rather craue pardon for a fault committed, than to be without the committing of a fault; sith we are accustomed onelie to craue pardon when we erre vnwittinglie, or offend by compulsion of others?' Wherevnto Cato further added: 'Te quis perpulit vt id committeres quod priusquam faceres, peteres vt ignosceretur?' Thus much out of Gellius. Whereby it appeareth, that in Plutarch reciting this saing of Cato, the name of Posthumus Albinus is there to be placed; for these two, Aulus Posthumus Albinus, and L. Lucinius Lucullus, were consuls at the time when Cato persuaded that warre should be denounced vnto the rebelling Carthaginians: so that the same storie recited under the name of Posthumus, Aulus, and Albinus, is all but one thing, doone to and by one man having diverse names.

Which historie I haue not vouched, to the end that I would craue fauor for writing the dooings of other persons in a toong wherein I am skillesse; because it deserueth not anie pardon, that one should heedlesse and headlong, both wittinglie and wilfullie, run into that for which he must after craue pardon. But I haue set downe the same, to the intent that the wise sentence of Cato may not be forgotten, saing that where we offend by ignorance or by compulsion, that there we may lawfullie craue pardon therefore. Which words of so graue, so wise, and so reuerend a person, incorageth me to craue pardon, if I haue offended in the discourse of these liues of the bishops of Canturburie (consecrated to thy fauourable acceptance) because I haue beene moued and induced to the writing of them in a short space, by the intreatie of such of my friends, which vpon the inserting of this now archbishop of Canturburie, with the lords Cobham and Buckhurst (woorthilie sworne of hir maiesties priue councell) in the new augmented chronicle of Hollinshed, haue with manie good speeches animated me vnder the bands & duties of amitie (than which a greater law or burthen can not be laid vpon anie man) to enter into this discourse of the archbishops, of the Earls of Leicester, the Archbishops of Canterbury, the Lord Cobhams, and the Wardens of the Cinque Ports,] was the famous Antiquary Mr Francis Boteville, alias Thin. being a thing neuer written before in our vulgar toong.<sup>1</sup> Wherevnto, although I am most vnapt amongst great numbers in this land, as well for the matter and stile, as for the shortnesse of time which I had therefore, (all which might feare a better man than my selfe to withdraw his pen from laieng abroad his imperfections,) yet I hope that courtesie, accompanied with a mild disposition of nature, will favorablie imbrace my good meaning, and beare with all other imperfections in the penning thereof, both because nothing is so exactlie handled, but that some Zoilus will some waie or other repine at it, and also because the reason which I haue before alleaged, and Cato hath warranted, is a sufficient defense for me, without offense, to craue pardon for the vnadvised entring into anie such vndertaken action, and a just cause to mooue thee not to mislike of this, or anie thing which we doo at the intreatie of our neere and deere friends vnworthie of anie deniall. In discoursing of which archbishops, I determine not to dispute of the antiquitie of the christianitie of this realme, neither of the state of christianitie infected with the Pelagian heresie (being streitened within the borders of Wales) nor yet of the hatefull paganisme with which all the rest of the parts of this Ile now called England was ouerspred, which Augustine the moonke of Rome (not the doctor of the church and bishop of Hippo in Africa) found here when he came first into this lland, but onlie nakedlie to shew the time, the order, the succession, the deeds and names, with the honor and offices of the archbishops and metropolitans of the same see of Canturburie. Wherefore, for this time I doo in this homelie sort enter into the matter, taken (in some part) out of Matthew Parker, who learnedlie in Latine wrote the liues of seuentie bishops of that place, as here dooth presentlie follow. Augustine, &c." (for 64 pages).

Afterwards, doctor Grindall, archbishop of Canturburie, dieng in the moneth of Julie 1583, it pleased God to put into her maiesties hart to nominat him [Whitgift] in August after, archbishop of that see, whose election therevnto was confirmed at Lambeth on the 23 of September following. And on the second of Februarie 1585, according to the computation of our church of England, being the 28 of hir maiesties reigne, he, with other worthie and honorable personages, was sworne one of hir maiesties priue councill: which honor vnder hir maiesties most gracious gouernement, I praie God he maie long inioie. Thus hauing set end to the discourse of the archbishops of Canturburie, with this reuerend prelat Iohn Whitgift now liuing, order leadeth vs to a collection of the lord Cobhams, for that the lord Cobham now liuing is the next before mentioned to haue beene sworne of hir maiesties councill.

(9) The Lord Cobhams.

A treatise of the Lord Cobhams with the lord wardens of the cinque ports; gathered (as well out of ancient records and monuments, as out of our histories of England) by Francis Boteuile, commonlie surnamed Thin; in the yeare of oure redemption 1586.

The diuine philosopher Plato, diuiding nobilitie into four degrees, saith; that the first is of such as be descended of famous, good, iust and vertuous ancestors; the second are they whose former grandfathers were princes and mightie persons; the third sort be such as be renowned by worthie fame, in that they haue obtained a crowne and reward for anie valiant exploit, or in anie other excellent action in the feats of warre; the fourth and cheefest kind of noble men, are persons which of themselves excell in the prerogative of the mind, and benefit of vertuous life. For he is most rightlie termed noble, whom his owne dowries of the mind, and not an others worthinesse dooth nobilitate. Wherevpon Socrates, being demanded what was true nobilitie, answered: Animi corporisque temperantia. And Cassiodorus prooueth, that of all others, the nobilitie gotten by ourselues is the most excellent, when he saith, Nobilitas à me procedens, est mihi cordi, plusquam quæ ex patrum procedit nobilitate: quia in quo desinit cuiusque nobilitas tunc aorum nobilitate congruè indiget. The reason whereof, and the cause whie a man is counted most noble by his owne actions, the graue and morall Seneca hath appointed to be; the nobilitie of his mind, which alwaies seeketh to performe woorthie and honourable actions; for thus he deliuereth vs his opinion vpon the same: Habet hoc optimum generosus animus, quod concitatur ad honesta. Neminem excelsi animi virum humilia delectant & sordida. Fœlix qui ad meliora imperium animi dedit: ponet se extra conditionem fortunæ, prospera tentabit, aduersa comminuet, & alijs admiranda despiciet. Now if anie one of all these things by themselves in particular, falling in seuerall persons, maketh euerie such person noble, who tasteth but of one of these foure distinctions of nobilitie: how much more is that person to be termed noble, and rightlie to be honoured therefore, in whom all these four parts, or the most of them, doo concur; as to be descended of good, of mightie, of ancient, and of warlike ancestors, and himselfe not to degenerat from them, euen in the cheefest point of all others, which is in his owne actions, therein most of all to nobilitate himselfe and his posteritie. All which, as I haue perswaded myselfe, are to be found in one, who at this time (as is before said) was, amongst others, for his woorthinesse and merit aduanced to the estate of a counsellor vnder the rarest princeesse and queene of this our present age. Which noble person being so preferred to that place, ministreth iust cause to me to record some antiquities touching the lords of Cobham, and the wardens of the cinque ports; and that the rather, for that the lord Cobham now liuing, being the glorie of that ancient and honorable familie, not onelie meriteth well of his countrie, as after shall appeare, but is also an honorable Mecenas of learning, a louer of learned persons, and not inferior in knowledge to anie of the borne nobilitie of England.

But leauing him for this instant to himselfe (of whome I cannot saie that which I ought, and he deserueth; and, for auoiding the note of flat-terie, I maie not saie that which I can, and euerie man knoweth) I will orderlie descend to my purposed catalog of the lords of Cobham, and the wardens of the cinque ports, which I will set downe in that sort, as the pedegree of that neuer sufficientlie praised lord treasurer of England, sir William Cecill, knight, lord Burleigh, is deliuered to the world in my former discourse of the lord treasurers of England. [pag. 1228.] Wherefore thus I begin with the lord Cobhams. William Quatermer, &c.

(p. 1515, col. 2, l. 69.) "Thus hauing finished all my coorse discourse of these lord Cobhams, it is high time for vs now to descend to the lord wardens of the fue ports: which office the honorable baron sir William Brooke, knight, lord Cobham of Cobham now liuing, dooth to his countries good, and his great honor, worthilie inioy, as some of his ancestors haue doone bifore."

(10) The Lord Wardens of the Cinque Ports.

(p. 1516.) "The catalog of the lord wardens of the cinque ports, and constables of Douer castle, aswell in the time of king Edward, surnamed the Confessor, as since the reigne of the Conqueror, collected by Francis Thin in the yeare of Christ oue thousand fue hundred fourscore and six.

IT hath bin some question, whether this officer of warden of the ports were in the Romane and Saxons times, which truelie I am resolued was then vsed; and the officer rightlie to be called Limenarcha, the chiefe (as it were) of the borders of seacoasts, and the gouernor Sazonici litoris; which was of that shore which belonged to England, in Kent, on which the roming pirates of the Saxons lieng vpon the sea were woont to alland, and then to spoile the countrie. For the more explanation whereof, I refer thee to that learned worke of maister Camden, and will onlie bend my pen to such principall officers of those places as fall within my knowledg, as followeth.

Goodwine, earle of Kent, was constable of Douer castell, maister of the ports and those parts of the seacoastes, and had the towne of Douer in his keeping, in the time of king Edward the Confessor . . .

(p. 1534, col. 2, l. 56.) "Sir William Brooke, knight, lord Cobham, was made constable of Douer castell, warden of the cinque ports, and chancellor of the same, after the death of sir Thomas Cheineie, in the first yeare of the quéenes reigne that now is, being the yeare of Christ one thousand fue hundred fiftie and nine: of whom, because I haue spoken more liberallie in my discourse of the lord Cobhams of Cobham, I will not here saie anie thing but this; that he, hauing possessed this place by the space of eight and twentie yéeres, being much longer time than anie of his predecessors, hath (in executing that office) caried himselfe with such honor and loue, that he woorthilie deserueth, and his countrie hopeth he shall inioie the same, manie following yeares, to his owne honor and his countries benefit: whome I will here leaue in his princes fauor, and set end to all my discourses inserted in the new aug-

After this, we cannot put down to Francis Thynne Reginald Scot's very interesting account, which follows the last-quoted paragraph, of the inspection by Lord Cobham in 1586, and the building in 1583, of the harbour-works at Dover<sup>1</sup>. The description of the works (in the Continuation of Holinshed) is done with relish, and reminds one of the railway embankment-making one has seen. I copy a bit which speaks of the workmen's cleverness and good behaviour, iii. 1546, col. 1, l. 17:—

In the passage also of the courts [little waggons loaded with chalk, sleich, &c.], if (by chance) either man or boie had fallen downe amongst them (as sometimes some did) the hill was so steepe at some places, and the court was so swift, that there could be no staie made, but the courts must run ouer them, and yet no great harme hath happened that waie. And I myself haue seene a court loden with earth passe ouer the bellie or stomach of the driuer, and yet he not hurt at all therby. Manie courts also being vnloaden (for expedition) were driuen at low waters through the chanell, within the pent, from maister lieutenants wall, whereby they gained more than halfe the waie: and so long as by anie possibilitie they might passe that waie, they were loth to go about. And when the flood came, the chanell did so suddenlie swell, as manie horssees, with their courts, and driuers which rode in them, were ouertaken, or rather ouerwhelmed with water, and were forced to swim, with great hazard of life, though therat some tooke pleasure. For sometimes the boies would strip themselues naked, and ride in that case in their courts through the chanell, being so high, as they were ducked ouer head & eares; but they knew their horssees would swim and carrie them through the streame, which ministred to some, occasion of laughter and mirth. Finalle, this summer, being in the yeare of our Lord one thousand fve hundred eightie & three, was verie hot and contagious, & the infection of the plague that yeare more vniuersallie dispersed through England than in manie yeares before, and that towne [Dover] verie much subiect ther vnto, by meanes of throughfare and common passage, and had beene extremelie visited therewith not long before, so as the towne was abandoned of most men, yea, of some of the inhabitants themselues for that cause: and yet God blessed so the works, as in this extraordinarie and populous assemblie, there was in no part of the towne anie death or infection, either of townsmen, or workmen which resorted thither from all the parts of England.

[Admirable behaviour of the

The flag of libertie

[holsted to stop work.]

And one thing more in mine opinion is to be noted & commended herein, that is to saie, that in all this time, and among all these people, there was neuer anie tumult, fraie, nor falling out, to the disquieting or disturbance of the works, which by that means were the better applied, and with lesse interruption. For they neuer ceased working the whole daie, sauing that at eleuen of the clocke before noone, as also at six of the clocke in the euening, there was a flag vsuallie held vp by the sargent of the towne, in the top of a tower,—except the tide, or extraordinarie busines forced the officers to preuent the houre, or to make some small delaie & thereof,—And presentlie vpon the signe giuen, there was a generall shout made by all the workers: & wheresoeuer anie court was at that instant, either emptie or loden, there was it left, till one of the clocke after noone, or six of the clocke in the morning, when they returned to their businesse. But by the space of half an houre before the flag of libertie was hanged out, all the court driuers entered into a song, whereof although the dittie was barbarous, & the note rusticall, the matter of no moment, and all but a iest; yet is it not vnworthie of some brieft note of remembrance; because the tune, or rather the noise thereof, was extraordinarie, and (being deliuered with the continuall noise of such a multitude) was verie strange. In this and some other respect, I will set downe their dittie, the words whereof were these:

<sup>1</sup> Or six
[The Dover-harbour workmen's song.]

O Harrie hold vp thy hat! 'tis eleuen<sup>1</sup> a clocke, and a little, little, little, little past:
My bow is broke, I would vnyoke;
my foot is sore, I can work no more.

[Brutish call for the Players at the theatre.]
A commendation of them which wrought or had anie charge about Douer works.

This song was made and set in Romneie marsh, where their best making is making of wals and dikes, and their best setting is to set a needle or a stake in a hedge: howbeit this is a more ciuil call than the brutish call at the theatre for the comming awaie of the plaiers to the stage. I thinke there was neuer worke attempted with more desire, nor proceeded in with more contentment, nor executed with greater trauell of workemen, or diligence of officers, nor provided for with more carefullnesse of commissioners, nor with truer accounts or duer paie, nor contriued with more circumspection of the deuisers & vndertakers of the worke, nor ended with more commendation or comfort. . . .

But though the Dover-harbour account is not Thynne's, no doubt the alphabetical list of writers on England and English History, on pages 1589—1592 of vol. iii, headed 'F. T.' in the margin, is by Francis Thynn. This is his introduction to it:—

"Now as Holinshed, and such as with painfull care and loue to their countrie, haue thought good, before me, to knit vp<sup>1</sup> the seuerall reigne of euerie seuerall king with a generalitie of the seuerall writers in that princes daies, so haue I béene importuned by manie of my fréends, to knit vp<sup>1</sup> the said whole historie with a particular catolog of all such as haue purposelie in seuerall histories of this realme, or by the waie in the histories of other countries, written of England and English matter. For which cause (with the title of other anonymall chronicles) I haue here for that purpose, by order of alphabet set downe the same. Wherein, although I shall not set downe euerie mans name, nor of what time & qualitie euerie one was, (for he is not liuing, I suppose, that can doo the same,) yet hauing doone my good will therein, and that more than perhaps some others would haue doone, I praie thee to beare with the defaults, and accept that which I haue doone and could doo. And although perhaps I maie set downe one man twise, as first by his name, and then set downe the worke without his name, as another seuerall thing; yet is it not of purpose doone, or to the end that I would make a great shew, and seeme ambitious of names or knowledge; but for that I haue not as yet attained to that perfection which hereafter I hope to doo in distinguishing of the same. For Rome was not built in one daie; & yet if one daies foundation thereof had not beene first laid, it had neuer beene after builded: and so to the matter." Holinshed, iii. 1589, col. 1, l. 42-70. Under P he notes "John Proctor, schoole-maister of Tunbridge, to whom I was sometime scholer." p. 1591, col. 1, l. 18. Under B, "Henrie Bradshaw, borne in Chester, a blacke moonke there in the time of Henrie the eight. John Burgh, a moonke in the daies of K. Edward the third" (the Continuator of Lydgate's englishing of the Secreta Secretarum) p. 1589, col. 2, l. 52-5.

ends p. 1592, l. 30. (l. 17.) "Thus far this catalog. Now peraduenture some will looke for a rehearsall omnigatherum of such as haue written in the reigne of our blessed souereigne: but herein as it passeth our possibilitie to satisfie their expectation, their number being infinit, and many of them vnknowne, and vnworthie of remembrance: so it were to be wished that some fauourer of learned mens fame, would comprise their names and works in a particular volume, therein imitating either the order of Bale, or Gesner; or else the commendable method of Iohn Iames the Frislander, printed at Tigurie one thousand, five hundred, fourescore and thrée; either of which courses being taken, would well serue the turne."

II r. First application for a Post in the Herald's Office.

A Herald's Office or a Record Office was the place that Francis Thynne was clearly meant for. All his studies and his instinct ran in that line, and he must have long desir'd an official standing. The present Record Office contains two documents showing both the nature of his work, and his wish for a Post of the kind:

1. State Papers, Domestic, Elizabeth, Vol. 219, Art. 20,
? Dec. 7, 1588.

"The answer of the presidentes produced by Mr neville against the ladye Fane. Sett downe by Francis Thynne." A paper (of 17 leaves), concerning the claim of Lady Fane to the title of the barony of Abergavenny. It contains "The generall answer to all suche presidentes as Mr. Edwarde Nevill producethe to prove the tytle of dignytye of a Baronye upone one entayle of the lande to the heire male in the collaterall lyne, to discend accordingleye to that heire male, and not to the heire female in the directe lyne beinge heire generall:" and "The perticular answeres to the severall presidents of Ed. Neville."

"The 'Generall Answer' occupies two sides of a leaf and a quarter; it is something like a counsel's 'Opinion,' taking up the points of Mr Neville's precedents, and confuting each one strongly. (The confuter lays much stress on "the reasone and maximes of the comone lawe.") The 'Perticular Answeres' consist of short pedigrees and detailed notices of ten baronies and two earldoms.

The paper throughout is not in Thynne's hand, but there are two endorsements, and several side-notes, consisting of references to Inquisitiones post mortem, Rolls, &c., which perhaps are in his hand. The pencil endorsement of date is "probably 7 Dec. 1588." The document is one among many on the same subject.

2. His Letter of Nov. 15, 1588, to Lord Burghley, lamenting his bad luck in being too late when he appli'd for a place in the Herald's Office; stating the bad condition of the Office, and the petty jealousies among the officers; reviewing their characters; and saying, that while waiting for dead men's shoes, he, barefoot, will die before he gets their legacy in the shape of a Herald's post:

Francis Thynne to Lord Burghley.

State Papers, Domestic, Eliz. Vol. 218, Nov. 15, 1588.

Your Lordship may suppose (Right honorable) that I haue muche idle tyme and litle wisdome, to write so often & spede so seldome. Whiche yf yo<sup>n</sup> do, I impute to the frowarde heauens distyllinge there Influence in my natyvytye, wherin Saturne, beinge in his pryde, hathe as hardly thretened, as I haue heuely felte, the ouerthwarte procedinges of the two fyrste tryplicitytes or progressions of my lyfe now almost ended: All whiche yet I beare the moore pacientlye because I ame fedd withe a swete hope, that at the entringe into the thirde progression of the cours of my yeres, the gentle Jupiter wyll expell his father Saturne oute of his kingdome, & so gelde hym of his malice that I shall for euer be freed from the tyrranye of his powre. Whiche I speake in all simplicytye, I protest vnto your Lordship, because I Iudge that the denyall of my sute to mee, & the graunte therof to others by your Lordship (solicited for the same before my lettres<sup>1</sup> came) is rather to be holden a thinge Incidente to my vnhappy fortune (then to their greate desartes) sithens yt is my happe euer to come to late. For whiche cause, the same whiche Plutarcke recytethe of Pythias the proopheett (answeringe one demaunding whether he sholde enter into the managinge of the comon wel[the or no] may Iustly be applyed to mee, the prophetts woordes beinge, “Sero venisti, me de principatu et rei publice administratione consulens, & alieno tempore militiæ Ianuam pulsans”. For the office of Norrey was gone<sup>2</sup> before I came; The place of Chester was graunted before I sued<sup>3</sup>; the doore was locked; I knockt to late; I slepte withe fyve foolyshe virgins, and was deprived of that whiche I hooped through your Lordship to haue obteyned.

Now where your Lordship sayed that all the whoole colledge of hereaundes had sued for William Thomas<sup>4</sup>, I ame gladd to here of so grete a sympathye betwene them: whiche yet, I feare, is not so muche for loue emongest them selues, as for hatred unto others. For (I dobte) suche is the corruptione of the place, that yt is not catena aurea but aurata, and hath for the presente tyme put one a flyinge tincture of golde, whiche, havinge no greate force, will easely vanishe awaye in smooke, yf yt coome to the examinacione of the fier of truthe. For howe so euer they shall seme to make an harmonye (havinge two bitter factions emongest them selues, for the meynテナunce whereof eche partye laboreth in that office to drawe euery one they canne to their side, in preferringe those in that office whiche wilbe beholdinge to them), yet is their suche larringe tunes in the greteste of their knowledge, that the truthe of manye antiquytyes and perdegrees shalbe ether meymed of her

Thynne's signature, with the date 1589, 2 Julii, is on leaf 32 of the Sloane MS. 3836, a MS. in Thynne's hand, of 70 leaves, chiefly Arms (with sketches) and Monuments from Churches.

II s. Speeches.—In 1591 (or -91 and 92 if his "x of february 1591" is old style,) we find Francis Thynne one of the knot of men who were the forerunners of the present Society of Antiquaries. This knot of men was generally calld 'the Society of Antiquaries', but it must of course be distinguisht from its after-born namesake. "Sir Wm Dethick was one of the first members of the [old] Society of Antiquaries, and permitted them to hold their several meetings at his apartments in the Heralds' Office." (Lives of the Heralds, a MS. in the Library of Sir Joseph Ayloffe, Bart.: Hearne's Cur. Disc. ii. 451-2, ed. 1771.) One of their Notices of Meeting sent to Stow, a fellow-member of the Society of Antiquaries, and a fellow-continuer of Holinshed, with Francis Thynne (Hearne's Cur. Disc. ii. 440-443 (for 441), ed. 1771,) is printed by Hearne, Ib. vol. i. p. xv.

"Society of Antiquaries (To Mr Stowe).

The place appointed for a conference upon the question followinge, ys att Mr Garters house on Frydaye the ii of this Nouember, at ii of the clock in thafternoone, where your oppinioun, in wrytinge or otherwise, is expected.

The question is,

'Of the antiquitie, etimologie, and priuiledges of parishes in Englande.'

Yt ys desyred that you giue not notice hereof to any but suche as haue the like somons."

Francis Thynne was a working member of the Society. Two of his speeches, in his own crabbed note-hand, are preservd in the Lansdowne MS. 254, Brit. Mus. He heads the first (leaf 38),

"my speche. The Thursday, the x of february 1591, at m' Garters [Dethick's] howse in the office of the heraldes, vpon these questions.

1. Of what antiquytie the name of 'Barones' in Englande; of their creatione; and signyficatione of the worde.

2. Of what antiquytie tenures are; and the forme thereof; with other matters belonging thereunto. (leaf 35); ends "we sett end to this tedious and course discourse." leaf 41, bk.

Thynne's heading for the second (leaf 45) is "my speache the xxij daye of June a<sup>o</sup> 1591, in the assemblye of the Antiquaries at m<sup>r</sup> garters howse aboute these questions followinge a<sup>o</sup> Elizabeth 33.

1. On the Antiquytie of Viconts, and of other thinges concerning the same in Englande.
2. "Of the Antiquytie of 'sealinge'<sup>1</sup>; the forme therof; and the sealinge with Armes." This ends on leaf 52 with "And so fynishing this troblesome & confused discourse, I beseeche yo<sup>u</sup> to pardone all the imper[fec]tioness thereof, and not obiecte to me the sayinge of Salomon, that 'in multiloquio non deest peccatum.'

(The next 3 Articles in the Lansdowne MS. 254 are, 1.—on leaves 50-56, formerly 53-59—'A shorte Introduction for the easie vnderstandinge of that parte of the Arte of Herauldrie which handleth the descriptions of Noblemens Armes'; 2. on leaves 57-61, 'A breife description of the Erldome or Countye of Penbroke'; 3. on leaves 62-66 a treatise headed 'Gentleman'; on his name & degree; 'on Yeomene, & Esquiers.' These are not in Thynne's hand—so far as I can judge—and have no trace of being Papers for reading, but are set down as Thynne's in the Lansdowne Catalogue, which says

"These 5 discourses were delivered by Mr Thynne at the meetings of the Society of Antiquaries in the reign of Elizabeth, and some of them are stated to be in his own handwriting."—Note in Lansdowne Catalogue, p. 88, col. 2.)

Besides these speeches remaining in MS., it is clear—from Hearne's account in his Curious Discourses, and the words of his editor, in the 2nd edition of that book,—that Thynne either spoke before the Society of Antiquaries, or wrote for it, the following speeches or essays printed in Hearne's Curious Discourses :—

Of Sterling money. Art. VI, p. 20-3, ed. 1720.

Of what Antiquity Shires were in England. Art. IX, p. 33-42.

Of the Antiquity and Etymologie of Termes and Times for administration of Justice in England. Art. XIV, p. 54-61.

Of the Antiquity of the Houses of Law. Art. XXVI, p. 108-126.

Of the Antiquity of Epitaphs in England. Art. LXXXVI, p. 251-6, vol. i, ed. 1771. (See β, Note 1, in List of Thynne's Works, below.)

On the Antiquity, Authority, and Succession of the High Steward of England. Art. V, p. 24-30, vol. ii, ed. 1771. (See β in List of Works.)

The Antiquity and Office of the Earl Marshall of England. Art. XXIII, p. 113-116, vol. ii, ed. 1771. (See  $\beta$  in List of F. Thynne's Works, below.)

These Curious Discourses were, says Hearne, Pref. p. xii-xiv, ed. 1771, copies "of the little dissertations that had been occasionally written by divers of the members" of the Society of Antiquaries that existed in the time of Elizabeth and James I, and was afterwards broken up (or 'off,' as Hearne has it, p. xiii), because it 'would be prejudicial to certain great and learned bodies,' and 'some of the society were persons, not only disaffected to, but really of a quite different persuasion from, the church of England'! Hearne's "late reverend and very learned friend Dr Thomas Smith," collected some of these essays, and "designed to publish them himself, for the use and service of the young nobility and gentry of England," but dying on May 11, 1710, 'left this Collection, among other curious papers' to Hearne, who published them in 1 volume in 1720. An enlarged edition "to which are added a great number of Antiquary Discourses written by the same Authors," was issued in 2 vols 8vo. in 1771, and re-issued with a new title-page in 1777. Vol. ii. p. 421-449 contains "A List of Such Persons who appear to have been Members of the Society of Antiquaries In the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, Together with some short Account of their Lives and Writings": their names—which I give as those of Thynne's associates—are, 1. Arthur Agarde, 2. Bp. Lancelot Andrews, 3. Robert Beale, 4. Henry Bouchier, 5. Mr Bowyer, 6. Richard Broughton, 7. Richard Carew (of the Survey of Cornwall), 7. Mr Cliffe, 8. Lord Wm Compton, 9. Sir Walter Cope, 10. Sir Robert Cotton (whose MSS. now form the Cotton Library in the Brit. Mus.), 11. Sir John Davies (of Nosce teipsum, &c.), 12. Sir Wm Dethick, Garter King at Arms, 13. Sir Jn. Dodderidge, 14. Mr or Dr Doyley, 15. Sampson Erdeswicke, Esq. (the Staffordshire Antiquary), 16. Wm Fleetwood, Esq. (the Recorder of London), 17. Wm Hakewill, 18. Abraham Hartwell (the last member admitted), 19. Michael Heneage, 20. Joseph Holland, 21. William Lambard (Perambulation of Kent), 22. Sir Thomas Lake, 23. Sir Francis Leigh, 24. Sir James Ley, 25. Michael Oldsworth, 26. Wm Patten (or Paton, of The Expedition into Scotland, 1548), 27. Mr Savel or Saville, 28. Sir Hy. Spelman, 29. John Stow, 30. Jas. Strangeman (of Essex), 31. Thomas Talbot (assisted Camden), 32. Francis Thynne, 33. Sir James Whitlock, 34. Thomas Wiseman, 35. Robert Weston, 36. Mr Jones.

The Pedigree of William Lambarde, Esq. compiled by Francis Thynne on 14 Feb. 1591-2, was exhibited to the (new) Society of Antiquaries, May 22, 1862. (No. 16, in Messrs Coopers' List.)

II t. Second application for a post in the Heralds' Office. 1593, Dec. 2.
Francis Thynne's Letter to Lord Burghley.

After waiting five years (p. lxxxix), Francis Thynne resolves to be in time for the appointment to a fresh vacancy in the Heralds' Office, and on Dec. 2, 1593, writes the following letter to Lord Burghley :

Lansdowne MS. 75, Art. 76, leaf 161.

I wolde most dutyfully (right honorable & my very good lorde) present my selfe vnto yo<sup>u</sup>; and for that cause was yesterdaye at your Lordships howse. But since I cannott, I ame, in place thereof, to Acknowledge my selfe and service (redye at your Lordships disposition,) by my penne. Withe whiche, desyringe your Lordships fauor (the rather be cause yo<sup>u</sup> willed mee to expecte the next auoydance wherin your Lordship wold afford me your honorable furtherance,) that I may, by your meanes, (for I haue alwayes, and styll will, depende uppone your Lordship, and one none other) atteyne to a place emongest the Heraldes.

How worthye I may be thereof, yt besemeth not me to speake; because, to prayse my selfe were vanytye, & to disprayse my selfe were follye; and to compare with anye of the office, were odious; yet this muche withoute offence I maye saye, that I beseeche your Lordship to put me to the triall, whether I may not in skyll of lerninge (euen in the depest pointes of Armorye, whiche cannott be knowen withoute the mysteries of Philosophie and the iudgmente of histories) deserue that place as well as some others.

Manye, I knowe, haue, and yet doo, labore for the offices of Clarenceux and Norreye, of whome I ame not to speake, although I knowe who they are, what they canne doo, howe lerned they be, howe mete for those places, Howe able to serue their prince & cuntrye, & of howe great contynuanee in Haroldrye. But yet yf yt lyke your Lordship to cast a fauorable lykinge to hym (whiche hath wholly tyed hymselfe to yo<sup>u</sup> & to your howse) yt may be that he which cometh last, may be preferred with the firste.

My nowe contynuall trauayle, my Lord, is, in finishinge the worke of the tresurers of Englande, whiche I haue brought vnto Henry the fourthe, and hoope to finishe before Easter next<sup>1</sup>; vntill whiche (yf your Lordship shall haue in lykinge to fauor my present suyte) I onely crave of your Lordship that some staye maye be made of bestowinge those offices vntill I haue fynished that booke of tresurers & certeyne cir-

cutury<sup>1</sup> perdegrees of the Erles & Vicontes of Englande, whiche in mynde I haue alrebye consecrated to your honorable Protectione. Howe muche I haue alrebye donne of those thinges (yf yt please your Lordship to see in suche rude and indigested forme as they bee) I wyll weyte vppon your Lordship with them, whene your Lordship will vouchesafe mee admyttance to your presence, by appointinge a tyme therefore; for otherwise I knowe not howe or when I shall fynde your Lordship at leysure, or willinge therunto.

Thus in all dultye I humbly comende me to your honorable furtherance, & comytte yo<sup>a</sup> to godd, who sende to your Lordship manye happye yeres, and to me the contynuance of your vnderuerued fauor.

Clerkenwell Grene, this 2 of December, 1593.

Your Lordships wholye to dispose,

II u. Discourse of Arms.—Jan. 5, 1593-4 is the date of Francis Thynne's "Discourse of Armes":<sup>3</sup> "A Discourse of Arms, wherein is shewn the Blazon and Cause of divers English, Foreign, and devised Coats, together with certain Ensigns, Banners, Devises, and Supporters, of the Kings of England." MS. formerly in the Library of Ralph Sheldon, Esq., of Beoley, and given by him in 1684 to the College of Arms. Dedicated to William, Lord Burghley, dated Clerkenwell Green, Jan. 5, 1593-4.<sup>3</sup> To the College of Arms I accordingly went to ask for this autograph MS. Mr Bellasis, Blue-Mantle, the youngest Member of the College, kindly searcht for the MS. but could not find it; and now comes a letter from Rouge Croix, Mr Stephen Tucker, saying that the MS. has long been lost—or stolen:—

"Heralds' College, E.C., 1st Sep. 1875. Sir,—Your letter addressed to 'the Librarian' has been opened here with the ordinary correspondence of the Public Office, and is therefore answered by me, as I happen to be for this month on duty. We have no 'Librarian' proper, the collections are arranged, &c. by a Library Committee: We are all 'Librarians' in our regular rota of 'waiting.' I cannot tell you how much I regret to say that I cannot assist you in your search for Thynne's MS. Such a book, entitled 'A discourse of Arms', was here, and was known as 'No. 54' in the Collection of Augustin Vincent. Dale, who catalogued the MSS. in 1696, then noted it as missing. To this, Le Neve afterwards added a note, that it had since been found. However, when John Charles Brook (Somerset) made his Catalogue in 1774, it was again missing, and has not, I believe, ever since been heard of.

"This, I am sorry to say, is not a solitary instance of the loss of the College MSS.—though I am not aware that we have ever lost a Record."

II v. Names and arms of the Chancellors, &c.

On June 12, 1597, Francis Thynne finisht, and dedicated to Lord Chancellor Egerton, a MS. now in Bridgewater House, "The names and Armes of the Chauncelors, collected into one Catalogue by Francis Thynn, declaringe the yeres of the reignes of the kinges, and the yere of oure lorde in whiche they possessed that office." Motto 'Je suis envie maugre envie, et pur ceo sortee pur bien ou ne sortee rien.'<sup>1</sup> The arms of the Chancellor are blazond at the back of the title, and 10 lines of Latin verse on them are written under them. Then comes, on leaves 1-16, Thynne's treatise on the origin of the office, and name of Chancellor. I take the personal bits at the beginning and end.

To the right honorable hys synguler lorde, Sir Thomas Egertonne, knyghte, lorde keper of the Greate seale, and master of the Rooles of the honorable courte of Chauncerye, Francis Thynn wyssethe manye happye and helthful yeares.

Yt nedeth not (my verye goode lorde) to lay downe a cause or reason whye I presente your lordship (beinge lorde keper of the greate seale, and havinge the auctorytye of the Chancellor) withe the names and armes of suche your predecessors as have possessed that place and preheminece. for besides that yo<sup>n</sup> well merite this and moore from me (to whome your honorable curtesye hathe vouchesafed manye fauors beyoynde my desartes) your singuler vertues and orna-mentes of nature and industrye (by whiche yo<sup>n</sup> imitate, or rather excell, the fame of your predecessors before yo<sup>n</sup> knowe their names and act[i]ons) doo and may iustelye challenge this Catalogue of the Chancelors and keepers of the greate seale to be offred vnto yo<sup>n</sup>. Wherefor I wiit saye no moore (for when I have sayed all, I shall saye to litle) of your worthynesse to possesse the place, and to knowe the names and armes of suche as in that honorable service of their prince and countrey have goonne before yo<sup>n</sup>, not in excellencye of executinge their functione, but in the revolutione of the whele of tyme.

What care and industrye I have vsed in settinge downe that Catalogue of their entrance and contynuaunce in that place, and in aptinge the yeres of the kinges reigne to the yeres of Christe, modestye enyoynethe me not to write, vpon payne of havinge my cheekes steyned withe vermilion, and my credytte blotted with philautia<sup>1</sup>, selfe love, and vanytie. And the daughter of tyme, I hoope, shall herafter gyve sufficiente shewe to the worlde, and confirme this labor by the auctorytye of approued hystories, and warrante of vncontrolable Recordes, bothe whiche do weyte vpon my peine to witnesse what care I have had for the true deliuerance thereof. And for that cause nether praylinge nor disprayinge my selfe (synce 'laudare se vani, vituperare se stulti est') I leave the consideracione thereof to your Lordships rare Iudgments, the Eagles sighte whereof canne perce the sonne of all knowledge, and espye the imperfect[i]ons of all writers. 'Sed quo nunc proprepit iste?' I had almooste (in spekinge of your lordships vertues, and myne owne labors) looste my selfe, for the firste ys so spacious a fiele for mee to runne ouer, that I shall be oute of brethe befor I haue ended halfe my course; and the other is so barreyne, as yt affordethe not matter worthe remembrance, and so haue iuste cause to feynthe before I doo beginne, and so to loose my selfe in boothe.

Wherefore to retorne 'in gradum,' I will prosecute the intente of my forespeche to this Catalogue, and (vnder your lordships correctione) bringe forthe suche thinges as I haue obserued in the gatheringe thereof, concerninge the originall, the antiquytie, the office, the auctorytye, & suche other thinges belonginge to the chancelor. Wherefore, in fynishinge hereof, I ame to importune your Lordship to pardonne two grosse imperfections in this course discourse and Rapsodicall collectione of the Chancelors/. The firste whereof is, the tedious leng[t]he and the disordered compositione / and the other is, the deformed blotted and rude wrytinge. for excuse of the fyrste I hoope your Lordship will not laye before mee that whiche I herde one saye of a longe speche made by a frende of myne, 'Hic desinit flumen verborum et gutta mentis,' here endethe manye woordes and litle wytte,—alludinge to that whiche was wonte to be sayed when Aximenes vsed to speake to the people, 'hic incipit verborum flumen et mentis gutta,'—nor yet saye of these collected auctoryties as the selfe conceyted m<sup>r</sup> Savile, prouoste of Eatone, is reported (lf 16, bk) to saye of Lipsius his politickes, that they be 'sentenciæ pueriles' tyed together withe pointes. althoughe I know that our speche sholde be answerable to the proportion of moneye, wherof the lesser quantytye comprehendethe the gretest value, as apperethe in golde; and in fewest wordes is often tyme the gretest wysdome, . . . . Yet since I ame lyke the peinter whiche cannott take his pensil from his worke before he marre his labor by addinge and changinge by ouermuche curiositie, and desire to have his picture well performed, I beseche your Lordship not to thinke what I have donne but what I wolde and sholde have donne in avoydinge Battologia and manologia, wherinto I confesse I haue fallen . . . . I leave that matter : And for the other falte, the blotted and rude wrytinge<sup>1</sup>, I craue your Lordship also to passe yt ouer, remembringe that 'sub sordido pallio latet sapientia,' and that we are taught by Christe not to iudge 'secundum faciem aut vestem;' for pure wyne is no lesse comfortable to nature yf yt be dronke oute of a wodden vessell (wherinto yt is naturally first powred) then yf yt were receved oute of a cuppe of golde. And the swete chestnute is couered with a harse and rooffe coote, as is the peche and other delicate frutes. So that I nothinge dofte but that your Lordship will pardonne all imperfections hereof, withe that curtesye whiche hitherto hathe alwayes accompanied your former actions; and accept this from me with such a mynde as I present the same to yo<sup>u</sup>, for so sha<sup>l</sup>t yo<sup>u</sup> encourage me herafter to consecrate somme other my labors to your fauorable acceptance; & I fully rest satisfyed of your good mynde towards mee. Thus in all duetye commendinge mee to your honorable good lykinge, & in all reverent love commyttinge yo<sup>u</sup> to the protectione of the almightye, I cease any further to molest your Loordship. Clerkenwe<sup>l</sup> Grene, the xij of June 1597.

Your Lordships wholly to dispose

Then follow blazons of the shields of the Chancellors, leaf 18 to leaf 22, and on leaves 24—50 "The collectione of certeyne Recordes founde in the rooles of the towre, concerning the Chauncelors and the tymes wherin they were inuested with that office,"—Latin documents from the Close and Patent Rolls, all copi'd in Thynne's own hand. Another hand has added on leaf 51 (as on 22, bk) the names of the later chancellors to 'Sir Heneage Finch, after, Lord Finch of Braintree; since Earle of Nottingham.'

In 1598, according to Messrs Coopers' list (Gent.'s Mag. July, 1865), Francis Thynne finisht his full "Lives of the Lord Cobhams" (see p. lxxxv), of which they give this account:—

"18. The History, Lives, Descents, and Succession of the House and Barons of Cobham, of which Line were three famous distinct Families, being the Lords of Rondale, and the Lords of Sterborow Castle, in Surrey. Collected according to the most approved truth, <sup>1</sup> This treatise is not so carefully written as the other dedicated ones, though it is far better than Thynne's note-books are.

Records, Evidences, Histories and Monuments of most reverend Antiquity," &c. MS. formerly in possession of John Verney. Dedication to Hen. Brooke, Lord Cobham, dated Clerkenwell Green, Dec. 20, 1598. A part of the original draft in MS. Addit. 12,514."

The former MS. I've not seen, and its whereabouts I don't know. The Addit. MS. 12,514 is part of an expansion of the Lives printed in Holinshed, iii. 1499-1515. See List of Thynne's Works, below.

On Oct. 24, 1598, Francis Thynne writes "From the Tower", says Canon Jackson, "where he seems to be employed<sup>1</sup>, but on what does not appear."

On Feb. 28, 1598-9, Francis writes again from the place where he has finally settl'd down, "Clerkenwell Green." Both letters are addrest to the second Sir John Thynne, of Longleat, where they still are. Copies of them are not allowd me; but I suppose they are appeals to the dulld conscience of Sir John to carry out his father's agreement with Francis (p. xlvi above), or give him some money instead.

In 1598 and 1599, Thynne was at work again on his MS. note-book of Collections for History, &c., Brit. Mus. Additional MS. 11,388 (see p. xlix above); leaves 46 back to 63, contain a copy by Thynne of Roper's "Lyfe of Sir Thomas Moore." Finis 26 maj 1598. Thynne says "This William dwelt at Elthame in Kent, and dyed aboute ."

leaf 78, back. "finis 22 maj 1599. FRANCIS THYNNE.

(On leaf 172, back, in a copy of the household of Hen. VI, the name of one of Shakspeare's men, 'the great Alcides of the field', catches my eye, "John Lord Talbot and Furnivall, after, Erle of Shrewsbury, Capteyne of Constance.")

For the year 1599 is enterd in Messrs Coopers' list a MS. that I can't trace :—

"20. Miscellanies of the Treasury, with the history of the lives of some of the lord treasurers." Written to Thomas Lord Buckhurst, 1599, but not completed. MS. formerly in the possession of John Anstis, King at Arms. The Messrs Cooper add "Extracts from the Lives of the Lord Treasurers in MS. Phillipps [the late Sir Thomas P.] 4,853." These are possibly copied from Holinshed.

II W. Animadversions on Speght. 1599-1600.

Francis Thynne inherited his father's love for Chaucer and manuscripts, and had made preparations for a new edition of his father's book, when, in 1598, his acquaintance Thomas Speght published his new edition of Chaucers Workes, and in his Preface insinuated that no editor before him had collated manuscripts for his text. Nor had Speght paid due homage to the hereditary editor Francis Thynne, by consulting him as to the new edition. This put the worthy herald's back up, and he took advantage of the custom of literary men presenting their noble patrons with a new book or treatise as a New Year's Gift, to write the following Animadversions,—dedicated and given to the friend of his 'yonger yeares' (p. ciii), Lord Ellesmere—snubbing Speght for his injustice to William Thynne, his presumption towards himself, Francis Thynne, and his ignorance, as shown by the many mistakes in his edition, of which the text Francis gave him many specimens.

The most interesting part of Francis Thynne's Animadversions is, unquestionably, its personal part, its account of his father's first cancelled edition—if that can be trusted,—the interest taken in it by Henry VIII, the opposition to it of Wolsey, the exception of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales from the "Acte for thaduanncement of true Religion" (pages 6—10 below, and xiii-xiv above). But the critical value of Francis Thynne's comments is considerable. In only four main instances out of some 50 great and small, is he wrong<sup>1</sup> (as to Chaucer's grandfather being his father, p. 11; as to the Dethe of Blaunche, p. 27; 'heroes,' p. 44; and 'unserial,' p. 47, in the Knight's Tale). His notes on the dates of the Nun's Priest's Tale, p. 59—62; and of Queen Philippa's marriage (p. 14—16), are admirable; and the others on dates, historical matters, and the meaning of words, show scrupulous care in consulting authorities. Altogether, Chaucer students have much cause to regret that Francis Thynne did not carry out his declared intention of re-editing Chaucer (p. 75), and specially trying to distinguish the genuine works of the poet from the spurious ones attributed to him (p. 69). For, with William Thynne's collection of MSS., and specially that 'examinatur-Chaucer' one, Francis Thynne might have given us invaluable evidence—now, alas, irrecoverable—of what these MSS. said as to the authorship of the poems they containd, and might have sav'd Tyrwhitt, Mr Bradshaw, Prof. Ten Brink, and the rest of us, no end of trouble and uncertainty in this troublesome and delicate investigation. We can easily forgive Thynne's little touch of self-confidence (p. 75), that if God would lend him "tyme and leysure to reprinte, correcte, and comente" Chaucer's Works, he trusted they "mighte at leng[t]he obteyne their true perfectione and glorye." His contempt for John Stowe,—as Dr Kingsley and I assume—that "one inferiour persone" (p. 11) whose name he declines even to mention, is amusing, specially as Stowe calld Thynne his 'good friend':—

"Of whom [Archbp. Whitgift] I will say no more in this place, because I haue before, in the yeaere 1600, said somewhat, and my good friend maister Francis Thynne, Lancaster Herold, hath also liberally treated of him in his booke of the liues of the Archbishops of Canterbury."—Stowe's Annales (1604), p. 1427.

But of course our identification of Stowe with the "one inferiour persone" may be wrong. Before Thynne's Lives of the Lords Cobham, &c., were cancelld (p. lxx above) he referrd to Stow as an authority:

"The maner whereof is set downe by John Stow, and shall be more liberallie touched by me in my larger discourse of the lord Cobhams, hereafter to be set forth.—Hol. iii. 1515, col. ii, l. 20-3."

And Francis Thynne is, I suppose, the 'one painefull antiquarie' mentiond by Stowe in Hol. ii. 435, col. 2, l. 56, as possessing the prophecy that he prints on p. 435 from Roger Wall, a herald.

Nov. 3, 1600, is the date of Thynne's treatise 'Of the Antiquity of Epitaphs in England', printed in the 2nd edition of Hearne's Curious Discourses, 1771, vol. i. p. 251-6, long after Hearne's death, on June 10, 1735. (See p. xciv above.)

II x. On Dec. 20, 1600, Francis Thynne dedicated to Lord Chancellor Egerton his "Emblemes and Epigrames," a 4to MS. of 71 leaves, with the motto "Psal: Quum defecerit virtus mea, ne derelinquas, domine," and in his Dedication he says that "some of them are composed of thinges donn and sayed by such as were well knowne to your Lordshipp and to my self, in those yonger yeaeres when Lincolns Inn societie did linke vs all in one cheyne of Amitie; and some of them are of other persons yet living, which of your Lordship are both loved & liked." . . . "Thus, my good Lord, in all dutifull love commendinge these my slender poems (which may be equalled with Sir Topas ryme in Chaucer) vnto your good likinge, and committing me to your honorable good favour and furtherance (to add oyle to the emptie lampe of my muse for mayntenance of the light thereof, which without the comfortable heate of your honorable patronage will soone be extinguished) I humblye take my leaue, from my howse in Clerkenwell Grene the 20 of December 1600. Your Lordshippes in all dutye, Francis Thynne" (underdotted and dasht, as usual).

Of these Epigrams, two, on bad wives and Marriage, have been quoted above, page lvi-lvii. As I am printing the whole MS. for the Early English Text Society, the reader can refer to the print for Thynne's epigrams on his friends, and his opinions on Societie (MS., leaf 19), 'The waye to gett and keepe frendes' (leaf 43, back), 'Spencers fayrie Queene' (leaf 53, back), 'Camdens Britannia' (leaf 69), 'Leylandes rightfull ghost' (leaf 70, back), &c.

II y. Essay on the Lords Marshal.

1601, March 21. The Cotton MS. Julius C VIII contains, on leaves 89-93, a short treatise by Francis Thynne on the Lords Marshal of England, "Oute of the booke entituled Domus Regni Angliæ, conteyning the orders of the Kinges house, written in latine and English, being made in the tyme of King Edward the 4th."

The tract of five leaves seems intended for dedication to some descendant of the Earl of Norfolk—whose descendants are now hereditary Lords Marshal of England, heads of the Heralds' Office or College of Arms;—and, after treating shortly of the name and office, ends thus:—

"Which Roger being in disgrace with king Edward the first, made the king his heire of both his Earledomes of Norfolk and Marshall, which honours the king left to one of his sonnes by his second wife, Earle Marshall, from whome the Mowbrayes and Howards hold the same office, as yt weare in right of their discent; of which lyne your Lordshippe is lineally extract, being discended of the howse of your Lordshippes name, which possessed both those titles of Norfolk and Marshall

"But of this we will not nowe speake any more, because the latter end of this booke doth sett downe a Catalogue of all the Earles Marshals<sup>1</sup>; and I meane hereafter to make a more liberall discourse of them in the forevouched booke of their liues, to be opened at large with all suche worthy actions as they haue performed. Thus, my good Lord, in all dutye humblye Comitting mee and my labours to your Lordshipps fauor-able Countenance and furtherance of my sute, & Comending your Lordshipp to the protection of the almighty, who send to your Lordshipp further increase of following honour, and to mee the vnderdeserued Curtesye which incourageth mee thus boldly to offer to your honorable acceptance this slender Collection, I dutifully take my leaue. Clerkenwell greene, the one & twentieth of Marche, 1601.

II z. Appointment as Lancaster Herald. 1602.

We saw above, p. xc and p. xcvi, that in 1588, and on Dec. 2, 1593, Thynne askt Lord Burghley for an appointment in the Herald's Office. After waiting more than 14 years, during which he made speeches (p. xciv), wrote treatises (p. xcv), and made collections (p. xcvi), no doubt to fit himself better for his Herald's work, he got, at 57, what he had sought at 43. Anstis's MS. History of the Officers of Arms (at the College of Arms), vol. ii, p. 559, under "Lancaster. Chapter xi, Sect. 13," says,

II A. In 1602 came-out the 2nd edition of Speght's Chaucer, in which he availed himself of most of Francis Thynne's Animadversions, as the notes to the text below show. That Speght took Thynne's criticisms in good part is prov'd by his prefixing to his edition the following poor poem by Francis Thynne:

(Brit. Mus. Press mark, 83. l. 4, King's Lib.)

Directly after this, comes another sonnet, which I at first took to be a compliment to Francis Thynne, the Writer of our Animadversions ; but as Speght is praised by name in the sonnet, I suppose we must take "The helpfull notes" to mean Speght's Life of Chaucer, and the Head-notes which he has put before nearly every 'Tale' as well as longer 'Minor Poem.'

Of the Animadversions vpon Chaucer.

In reading of the learn'd praise-worthie peine,
The helpfull notes explaining Chaucers mind,
The Abstruse skill, the artificiall veine ;
By true Analogie I rightly find,
Speght is the child of Chaucers fruitfull breine, Vernishing his workes with life and grace,
Which envious age would otherwise deface :
Then be he lov'd and thanked for the same,
Since in his love he hath reviv'd his name.

Mr Lemon (State Papers, Domestic, t. 7 Eliz. ii. 559) gives as Francis Thynne's an endorsement on Paddy's vacated appointment of Lancaster Herald which Thynne himself afterwards filld :

"June 7. Westminster

An autograph collection of Pedigrees &c. made by Francis Thynne in the years 1602-5 is now the Harleian MS. 774.<sup>1</sup> It has 40 leaves of his work; the 4 that include the table, are not in F. Thynne's hand.

His autograph copy, with the King's arms on the sides, which are sown with fleur de lys, is now the Additional MS. 12,530 in the British Museum. It was bought for the Museum at the Strawberry Hill sale at Robins's Rooms on June 21, 1842, having been given to Horace Walpole by Sir Joseph Banks, President of the Royal Society, in 1786. The MS. is a folio of 66 leaves, the treatise ending on leaf 59 back, and being followed by 1. a criticism from a friend of Thynne's on the tract, written "from Lyncolnes Inne this :28: of Marche 1604"<sup>1</sup> (that is, 1605), 2. Thynne's answer to his friend the censurer; and, 3. a second answer or letter of Thynne's (leaves 65, 66) "from my house on Clerkenwell greene this xiiijth of Maye 1605." In his signature, "Lancaster" is written—as elsewhere—between his name and the dashes and dots under it. The Dedication and the conclusion of the Treatise follow:—

To the right highe and mighty prince James, by the grace of God Kinge of Great Brytayne, France and Irelande, defendor of the ffaythe, Francis Thynne, Lancaster Herrold, his Maiesties dutifull servant, most humbly presenteth his seruice in all submission.

When I had, my dread Soueraigne, fynished this worke, what soeuer it be, many pregnant causes offered themselues to mooue me to dedicate the same to the honorable Comissioners<sup>2</sup> substituted in place of the Earle Marshall, to whom vnder your sacred Maiesty it duly belongeth, to dispose of matters of honor: amongst which causes, one was, that I am to them knowen, and soe might hope to haue this disordered answere the sooner graced by their favorable acceptance; whereas, being altogether estranged from your Maiesties notice, I durst not presume to salute the same with so meane present as this simple booke, farre vnfit the viewe, judgment, or defence, of so learned and worthy [a] kinge, and therefore fearefull to approche the beames of your splendor, [I] deemed it best to consecrate the same to those inferior lightes participating of the brightnes of your Regall Septer. But on the other side, remembring the saying of Marius Geminus to Cæsar, "Qui apud te, Cæsar, audet, dicere magnitudinem tuam ignorat, & qui non audet, humanitatem," And with that saying casting myne eyes vpon the endles boundes of the Oceane of your magnificent clemency, (which from the center of your bounty doth spreade it selfe into the circumference of all orders of your subiectes, as well highe as lowe, learned as vlearned,) I some what gathered my selfe into my selfe, and casting a way all feare (for most duty is alwayes accompayned with greatest feare), I thought it my bounden Duty, and one especiall parte of my function, to offer to your Maiesty the frutes of my labore, which I haue gathered by the only Maynteynance and support of your Maiesties benevolence and liberallity; for since by you I lyue, and lyving must serue you, and serving you, must wholly imploye all my partes to performe what your Maiesty may justly challeng from me, being one officer of honor vnto you; I knowe none to whom I owe more duty, or to whom of right I might in any sort consecrate my labores in matters of honor, but vnto your Maiesty, the fountayne of all honor, from which those Comissioners doe deryue their authority. Wherefore hoping that your Maiesty will not permitt me your subiect, your seruant, your officer, alone of all others to departe sorrowfull from your presence, as one discourteased in this disordered discourse, (since as the Emperour Vespasian saide, "non oportet quemquam a vultu Cæsaris tristem discedere,") I most humbly prostrating my selfe before the seate of your Clemency, that only Ancor of my hope, beseech that same fauorably to accept this whatsoeuer booke, gratusly do countenance the subiect thereof, (conteyning the worthynes belonging to the honorable degree of the Knightes of the Bathe,) and as princely to defende those Knights made in your Maiestys atteyning to the Crowne of England, as you haue most nobly graced them with that note of honor in the Bulla, Tablet, or ensigne of the triple crownes, environed with the Moot or word of "tria iuncta in vno;" for so shall the honor of those Knights made in your Maiesties tyme be no more obscured, or their shyne eclipsed (by the emulation of others which ought not to dispute your Maiesties fact) then it was in the former and famous gouernment of your heroicall predecessors, whereof neuer any equalled your Maiesty in largnes of dominions, in abundance of Clemency, in fauour of the worlde, or in dowryes of the mynde, as all men knowe that can rightly iudge./

Thus laying this booke and myselfe at your Maiesties feete, craving pardon for my presumption, hoping of your Inmerited fauour, and desiring that the Tautologies, or needles repetitions in the answere

[Conclusion.]

Causes to induce precedency for ye Bathe Knights
& their wiues.

That in Respect the Knights of the Bathe are a Distincte & peculer order: that they are more ancient then Bachelers: that they are more honorable in ceremonyes, that they haue still contynued the possession of the place: that they alwayes fought & serued under Banners of their owne, when Bachelers serued vnder the Banners of others: that they are selected for the honor of the King, & in that, the Kinge to honor them: that the statuts haue priuiledged them in their creation before Knights of the Garter & Banneretts: that they haue at all tymes one honorable place in princely proceedings aboue Bachelers: That they are honored with the note of their Robes vpon their toombes after their death: that they are to haue their spures in their funerall pompes to be caried before them by one Harrolde, whiche the Bachelers bath not: that it is no spirituall nor officiall order: & that the King hath further honored them with the Bulla or tablet of his devise, to distinguishe them from other Knights: That now in like sort as in former tyme they ought to haue precedencye of Bachelor Knights<sup>1</sup>. & that their wiues (because they participate of the Dignitye of their Husbands: because by Custome they haue obteyned & kept possession of their place: & because all the arguments alledged agaynst them by the Aduocate are of no validitye,) ought also to haue the precedencye of the wyues of Bachelor Knights, therein to answere the Dignitye of their husbands :-/

The Ende of the Plea betweene the Aduocate &
and Bachelor Knightes.

The end of Thynne's answer to his friend's letter or comment (p. cvi, note 5) on the treatise is:—

“And therefore having nowe (more breifly then I desire or would haue done) delyuered my opynion, I doubt not but that you & all others (whose desire is nott to seeke a knott in a Rushe, or Spider-like to sucke poyson out of Flowers, & to peruert euery thinge well meant, by perverse exposition to the worse construction,) I doubt not, I say, but that you & all others will holde themselues contented with that Iudgement which I haue before written in answere to the Aduocates sixt and Seauenth chapter; for otherwise both they and you should wronge me: Thus wishing to you as to myself, commendinge me to your favour, and Committinge you to God, I end ∴ from my house on Clerkenwell greene this :xij.th of Maye. 1605 ∴”

II C. In 1606,—3 March 1605 veteri stilo—Francis Thynne had a bad attack of gout, as we find from Hearne's Collection of Curious Discourses written by eminent Antiquaries, 1720, p. 230.

“A Discourse of the Dutye and Office of an Heraulde of Armes, written by FRAUNCIS THYNNE Lancaster Heraulde the third daye of Marche anno 1605.

“My very good Lord [P Chancellor Egerton]

“That cruell Tyrante the unmercyfull Gowte, which triumpheth over all those that are subject to him, of what estate soever, takinge on him, in that parte to bee a God, because hee respecteth noe person, hath so paynefully imprisoned me in my bedd, mannaclad my hands, fettered my feete to the sheetes, that I came not out thereof since I sawe your Lordship on Christmas Eve. But having by meere force at length shaken off the mannaclad from my hands, (although I am still tyed by the Feete) I have now at the last (which I pray God may bee the last troubling my hand with the Gowte) attempted the performance of my promise to your Lordshipp, and doe heere send you a Chaos and confused Rapsodye of notes, which your Lordshipp, as an expert Alchimiste, must sublyme and rectifye” (p. 231). p. 268: “I humbly take my leave, as one wholye devoted to your Lordship, and in you to your honourable Famelye, further craving pardon for this goutye Scribblinge, distilled from the Penn guyded by a late gowtye hand.

Your Lordshipps in what hee maye

This gout may perhaps justify the report in Hearne's Diary, vol. cix. p. 100. Sept. 14, 1725. "Mr Anstis told me the same time, that he had heard (from the Weymouth Family) that Mr Thynne, the Herald, tho' a very learned man, was a very hard Drinker."

On June 30, 1606, Francis Thynne writes again to Sir Thomas Thynne<sup>1</sup>, asking for money, and signing himself "Lancaster<sup>2</sup>".

As Thynne did not surrender his Patent, and that of his successor in the Heralds' Office as Lancaster is dated November 19, 1608, Thynne no doubt died in that year.

Certain features of his character, Dr Kingsley has already sketcht (p. xii). His early extravagance<sup>3</sup> he aton'd for by his 2½ years' im-

<sup>3</sup> Canon Jackson's just-receivd note of an early (1573-8) volume of copies o. Alchemical Treatises by F. Thynne, now at Longleat, confirms my fancy that his early extravagance may have been due to his dabbling in Alchymy. He says he "was famylar in practyse" with a writer on the subject:—

Treatises on Alchymy. MS. vol. at Longleat, containing:

1. Stella Alchymie: Libellus compositus a Joanne Bûbelem de Angliâ A.D. 1384. "Copied oute the 28. Oct. 1573 by me Francis Thynne."
2. The Ordinall of Alchymie made by Mr Norton of Bristowe. "He flourished in the year of our Lorde 1477 and was the scoller of Rypleye. F. T. June 1574."
3. Tractatus de Magnete. "Copied out the 20 Aug. 1574. by me F. T. Aut novus, &c." [as on page xlix above.]
4. Arbor philosophie. "A kind of pedigree of Philosophy."
5. Claudianus de Statuâ Martis et Veneris Magneticâ.
6. George Ripley's 12 Gates of Alchymy. "This was written out by me Francis Thynne at Longleat in Wiltshire & there fynished the 5 day of Aprill 1578. My strange," &c.
7. Certeyne Remembrances touchinge the two greates offices of the Seneschalsey or highe Stewardshipp of England and of the Quenes house. At the end "Thus much out of the booke called Domus Regis Anglie."
8. A Treatise on the Philosopher's Stone, with this heading. "This booke was made by Mr [Edwarde]* gent, and dedicate to Mr Haddon one of the Masters of the request to quene Elizabeth as here ensueth."
"As the stone of Philosophers is most precious," ending "but also to dye at your foote. E. D."

Then follows:

"This was copied out the 9th of Sept. 1573 in the XV of Elizabeth from the originall of the hande of the said auctor* by me Francis Thynne was famylar in practyse with the said auctor. Francis Thynne.

* "The name has been carefully erased in both places: Mr Horwood and I think the Christian name is Edward; the surname is illegible. The initials of the author were E. D.; which F. T. (or whoever it was that erased the name) forgot to erase."

prisonment, his disappointment in getting his promised life-home at Long-leat, and by a long course of steady work at antiquities, and family and general history. His marriage was miserable. He waited long for his appointment in the Heralds' Office, and only held it for his last 6 years, from 57 to 63. Many bitters were mixt with the sweets of his life. Amongst the latter, were his pursuit itself—no nagging wife, no worrying trustee, no faithless cousin, among his lov'd MSS.,—the society of friends of which he speaks so warmly in his Epigrams, of kindred spirits, in younger years with Egerton at Lincoln's Inn, in older days with Antiquaries at Garter Dethick's rooms; his love for CHAUCER; his plans for editing him, and writing besides, unlimited Lives of Treasurers, Chancellors, Archbishops, and all the occupants of all the great offices of State and Church—glorious vision!<sup>1</sup> Think too that he may have shaken hands with Shakspeare, seen and heard him in his own plays; perhaps sigh'd at Spenser's death; and emptid a bottle with Marlowe. Ben Jonson he surely may have known. Bacon he may well have come across. Truly there were compensations for trouble in those Elizabethan days. At any rate, in his own learned circle, Francis Thynne was esteem'd and respected. Somewhat punctilious and fussy he no doubt was, as fond of stuffing catalogues into histories as the suppos'd Perkins was of poking emendations into Shakspeare; but careful he was, and honest; went to original authorities whenever he could, and gave his others when he couldn't; an intelligent critic too, and an industrious

[In the first page of the Treatise on the Philosopher's Stone is this passage:—"So sayeth the sonne of hamill, 'This art, sayeth he, is y' wh. the glorious godd hath hydd from menne lest the whole worlde sholde thereby be over throwen.'" (In the margin F. T. has written, "Chaucer, Stella completionis & Nortone.")]

9. A disputacione betweene Merlyne and Mariam of the marriage betwene Sylos and Anul, begins, "As the childe sat on his father's knee"; ends, "12 tyme of day."

Then follows this note:

"Copied out of the originall the 18 of October 1573 by me Francis Thynne whiche originall I had of Mr. Tho. Peter, written withe thande of the same Thomas Peter but I thinke this worke is imperfect because as yt seemeth theire lacketh some verses to furnishe the ryme but notwithstandinge I have followed the Copie. F. T."

searcher; he did his work with a will, and did it well. If he had small store of humour and wit, of fancy and imagination, or none at all; if he wrote bad verse, and only dull and useful prose, let us remember that his calling was that of Antiquary and Herald, that he had to deal with records and facts, that he helpt to lay the foundation of the study of Antiquities in England, and that he cleared the works and memory of CHAUCER from some of the rubbish that had been heapt about them.

As all the 500 copies of Dr Kingsley's edition of the Animadversions in 1865, for the Early English Text Society, had sold out, with the rest of the Society's issue for that year, I askt him to prepare a new edition of the tract for our Reprints; and he did begin it, in the interval of his professional travels all over the world—is he not the Doctor of 'The Earl and the Doctor' who helpt to blow those most enjoyable South Sea Bubbles, and has not he visited again and again every quarter of the habitable globe?—but the frequency of these excursions prevented his getting far with the new edition, and he therefore handed it over to me, with Francis Thynne's autograph MS. which Lord Ellesmere had kindly consented to let me have. I have therefore read the text twice through with the MS., put such notes to it as my limited leisure and knowledge allowd, got together, in these Hindwords, such details as I could, of old William Thynne's duties and food, &c., and of his son Francis's life and works. A new Index I have made too, and revis'd Dr Kingsley's list of Francis Thynne's Works<sup>1</sup>. I make no excuse for giving in full the details above as to William Thynne; for those who think them a bore, can skip them; and those who care for the old Chaucer-Editor as much as I do, will share the pleasure I had in going through his day's work and food with him. I hope it was from his edition that Shakspeare read the Troilus and Cryseyde, and learnt to write The Rape of Lucrece, which echoes 'Chaucer' all through, as Beethoven's early work does Mozart.

<sup>1</sup> Had I but known earlier of the Messrs Coopers' Letter in the Gentleman's Magazine, the notes on Francis Thynne would have been in better order, and much trouble would have been sav'd me; but Mr Tucker didn't tell me of the Letter till Sept. 4, 1875, when the Museum was clos'd; and on its re-opening on Sept. 8, I got only one afternoon there before coming to Egham on the 9th for a rest, and to better a badly-spraind ankle: a punishment for "making a beast of burden of myself" (Martin) in my old age, and towing sitters in a boat instead of sculling 'em.

In the bright air on this chalk down, memories of all four Masters come to me. The wild thyme under foot gives out its sweet scent, the tender graceful harebell nods, the golden lady-slipper glows, the crimson ground-thistle gladdens in the sun, the fresh blue sky and fleecy clouds look down well pleas'd<sup>1</sup>. Would that Chaucer and Shakspeare were here!

Sept. 5, 1874.

 "The original Edition of the Chronicles of Holinshed, it is well known, was published by their author in a mutilated state. A number of pages, which had obviously been printed with the rest of the work, were found to be omitted, except in a few copies obtained by some favoured persons. In the present edition these castrations are faithfully restored."

(This is the "Lives of the Lords Cobham, of Cobham, Rundalle, and Starborough," British Mus. Add. 12,514. f. 56. The MS. is incomplete, and ends in l. 9, col. 1, p. 1515 of Holinshed iii.)

15. "The catalog of the lord wardens of the cinque ports, and constables of Douer castle, aswell in the time of King Edward, surnamed the Confessor, as since the reigne of the Conqueror, collected by Francis Thin, in the yere of Christ one thousand, five hundred, fourescore and six." (vol. iii. p. 1516-1534, col. 2.)

Hearne (Cur. Disc. p. iv) says the Holinshed castrations extend to p. 1575. But Reginald Scot begins where Thynne leaves off, on p. 1534. (Thynne's MS. is said to have been in the library of More, Bishop of Ely. "The names and armes of the Earles Marshalls of England, Collected by Francis Thynn in the yeare of our redemption 1601."

It is a paper of 14 leaves, of which eight are the Discourse, written in a fair hand; four other leaves are devoted to the names and emblazonment of arms, and two are blank. The Discourse is addrest to Charles Howard, Earle of Nottingham, Lord High Admiral, on the "new Commission directed" to him, the Lord Treasurer and the Earl of Worcester. It treats of the etymology of the word Marshall, of the office among foreign nations, and something of its history in England. The following are the opening and ending paragraphs, the last being signed by F. Thynne's own hand:

"I make no question, Right honourable and thrice Renowned Erle, but that manye (who owe both love and dutye to your good Lordshipp) have after this new Commission directed to the lorde Threasurer, to your Lordshipp, and to the Erle of Worcester, presented vnto you such rare Antiquities concerning your honorable Office, as may both manyfest their loveing dutie, and give light to things which have long lyen hidden: for which cause, I might iustly staie my Penn from presumyng to adventure my dutye towards your Lordshipp after the same manner, (myself being of others most inexpert in those things, as one whoe hath alwaies lived in silence, although a well willer to Antiquities,) yf your noble birth, honourable disposition, and rare Curtesy, did not adde wings to my desire, which of long tyme wished to have some occasion mynistred, wherein I might manifest my dutiefull Affection to your Lordshipp. Wherefore, as one amongst the rest, willing to present vnto your Lordshipp some outward pledge of inward duty; I offer vnto your Lordshipp these few eares of knowledge which I have gleaned out of the leavings of auntient histories and Records."

"[ends] . . . . . the latter end of this booke doth sett downe a Catalogue of all the Erles Marshalls;* and I meane hereafter to make a more liberall discourse of them in the fore-touched Booke of their lives, to be penned at large, with all suche worthy actions as they haue performed.

"Thus, my good lord, in all dutye humblie committing mee and my labours to your Lordships favourable Countenance and furtherapce of my sute, and Commending your Lordshipp to the protection of the Almighty, who send to your Lordship further increase of following honor, and to mee the comforte of your Lordships vnderdeservd Curtesye, which encourageth mee thus boldlye to offer to your honourable acceptance this slender collection, I dutyfully take my leave. Clerkenwell Grene, the one and twentyth of Marche, 1601.

Your lordships wholeye in all dutye to dispose,
Francis Thynne."

After Mr Collier's practical jokes—to call them by no harsher name—on Shakspeare, one is not surprised to find him practising on Francis Thynne, and indulging in the pleasantry of attributing to our author 1. The Debate between Pride and Lowliness<sup>1</sup>; 2. A Pleasaunt Dialogue or Disputation betweene the Cap and the Head, 1564; 3. Newes from the North, otherwise called The Conference between Simon Certain and Pierce Plowman, 1579; and 4. The Case is altered, 1604. To any one who knows Francis Thynne's style and character, this putting-on him of four different tracts, evidently by 3 or 4 different men, all differing in style and temper from him and from one another, is a real joke. The notion that the critic of Speght's Chaucer, who resented that editor's poaching on his Chaucer manor, would sit still and see Greene clear-out his park of the Debate, and, under his eyes, set his choice deer in the said Greene's meadow of the Quip,<sup>2</sup> labelled 'Greene's stags,' is delightful. Why, Thynne would have flayed him for it, and have left his skin pepperd and salted, to posterity.<sup>3</sup> Mr Collier seems to have argued, "Here are two books by F. T., argal they're by Francis Thynne. Here's another by T. F., argal that's by Francis Thynne too."<sup>4</sup> And here's a fourth anonym-

"Attributed to Thynne by Mr Collier on the strength of the initials F. T. in print on the title, and F. Th. in MS. there. But the latter appears to be in a modern hand, attempting an imitation of old writing." Of course.

I have since lookt at this 'F. Th.' and compar'd it with Francis Thynne's other signatures at Bridgewater House and in the British Museum, and I do not doubt that it is a modern forgery. The hesitating and somewhat-waving downstroke of the F, the top-curl not being made with a separate line, as Thynne's are; the touches in the beak of the T and at the foot of the h, the artificially pale ink, and the general look of the letters, mark them as a modern imitation of Thynne's hand. The imitator was no doubt the forger of the other notorious Bridgewater-Library documents. In no instance that I have seen, has Francis Thynne sign'd 'F. Th.' only.

<sup>4</sup> "'Newes from the North . . ." we may assign to Thynn without any hesitation, not merely on account of the character of the work [which is as unlike any of Thynne's genuine work as chalk is to cheese], but because his initials, reversed, are upon the title-page."—Introduction to The Debate between Pride and Lowliness, p. xvi, old Shakespeare Soc. 1841.

ous book, argul that's Francis Thynne's as well." Let any one with a head read even only the bits of Thynne in this little volume, and then turn to The Pride-and-Lowliness Debate; the Cap-and-Head Disputation (1564; at Lambeth); the Newes from the North, 1579 (Bodleian; 1585, Mr H. Huth, Lord Ellesmere, Brit. Mus.); The Case is altered, 1604 (in Brit. Mus.); and see whether he can honestly say any one of the four is like Thynne's work. (The reader will also remember that Thynne's own words as to his "sudden leaping into the printers shop, especiallie at first," in 1586 (p. lxx, above), leaves no doubt as to the spuriousness of the first three of these four books.) Here is a little bit from each book, by way of sample.

1. The Debate, that "admirable poem," as Mr Collier calls it (p. xvi), by "an attorney" (p. 69)—who we are to believe is Francis Thynne at 23, associating with the future Lord Chancellor Egerton and others at Lincoln's Inn—and who says (p. 70):—

Therefore beseech I such as be learned,
 Into whose hands this work may chance to come,
 Barresters, or how so ye be termed,
 To judgen it after your wisdoms.

Besides all this, least any man misjude
 Of these my woordes, or hold me parciall,
 As bearyng to the buttockes any grudge,
 More then unto the other members all,

Because my matter hath ben of a breche,
 Which is their habit and their couerture,
 To thinke none ill therein I them beseeche,
 Or that their losse I have ment to procure.

As that they might not weare, as may the rest,
 I meane, the members of more worthines;
 For sure I hold they ought to weare the best,
 And if ye read S. Paule, he saith no lesse.

Wherfore to buttockes, evil I ne ment,
 More then unto the belly or the backe,
 Or else the head concerning ornament,
 For nature hath more furnished their lack.

They may with lesse shame be discovered
 And naked, then the lower parts may be;
 Though yet unseemely, saving for the head
 Of man; forwhy, of God th' image is hee;

And is the ground of reason, and the roote,
 The seate of understanding, and of wit;
 Guide of the rest, yea, both of hand and foote,
 And royall as a king, on high doth sit.

And therefore if the buttockes do exceede,
Or be to monstrous in that they weare,
The head ought to be blamed for the deede,
For reason ought to have his dwelling there,
Not in the buttockes, who know nothing lesse
Then what is seemely for them to put on,
And are appointed other busynesse . . .

Who purposeth to liven vertuouse
In favour of our God, let him take keepe,
That pride none office beare within his house,
For where he doth, vertue is layde to sleepe.

bare it, had bene deuoured with Dogges, or that it had bene burned in the filthy fingers of the ilfauored olde queane that spunne it.

The Head.

Why, what meanest thou by thys cursing? I neuer did thee any harme.

The Cap.

No diddest? thy euill entreating of mee is the whole cause of my grieffe, thou arte the worker of my wrong, and the onely occasion of my complaint.

The Head.

I knowe no cause why thou shouldest be greued with me; for I payde sweetely for thee, & thou knowest that euery man weareth not so fine a Cap as I doe weare; & at night, when I go to bedde, I brushe thee, I lay the[e] on a faire Carpet, & couer thee with a cleane Handkercher, where thou retest quietly all the night and a good part of the daye. in the morning when I go abrode, I sprinkle thee with Rose water, and strawe thee with Damaske poudre, and then set thee on the hyghest and moste honorable place that I have. What wouldest thou haue more?

The Cap.

I had rather thou shouldest place mee in the lowest and filthiest place: for I had rather that thou madest mee a patche in thy Breeches, so that I might liue in peace and quietnesse without reproche, and bestowe thy rose water and damaske poudre vpon thy Nice picke me dainties, for I passe not for it . . . but one while thou wearest mee aloft, another while ouer thine eyes; one while on this fashion, and an other while on that fashion, without anye discretion: moued, put of, put on again, I assure thee I esteeme the patche in the breeches to be happyer than I . . . Who is able to beare such iniurye at thy hand? that art neuer contented to weare me after one fashion: but one while thou wearest me lyke a Garland; by and by like a Steple; an other while lyke a Barbers Basone; anone after lyke a Bolle whelmed vp side downe; sometime lyke a Royster, sometime like a Souldiour, and sometime lyke an Antique; sometime plited, & anone after unplyted; and not being contented with that, thou bindest mee with gaarishe bandes; one while of one colour, and an other while of an other, and sometime with many colours at once, as if I were mad: how is it possible to suffer so many chaunges? . . . it seemeth that thou goest about to shame mee vtterly; for thou art not contented with making mee to weare Read, Yellowe, Greene, and Blew laces, but besides that, thou encombreth mee wyth Brouches, Valentines, Rings, Kayes, Purses, Gloues, yea, fingers of gloues! thou wrappeth me in Chaines, thou settest me with Buttons and Aglets, thou lardest me wyth rybans and bandes, thou cuttest me, borest me, and slashest me, both aboue and beneth, without any compassion or pitie, and so by this disfigure mee, empairing my dignity, and yet the more to thy shame. . . .<sup>1</sup> And as for the feathers which thou prickest and stickest in me, one while Ostrige, another while Cranes, Parrats, Bittors, cockes and Capons feathers, signify nothing else but the lightnesse of thy brayne; for we haue a common prouerbe, "Thou art as light as a Feather". . . . thy toyishe deuises in thy Brouches, & thine vnconstant wearing of Feathers, do shew the wauering of thy foolish brayne. . . But to come againe to our matter. Al this grieueth me not so much as other intollerable iniuries that thou dost me, which maketh me many times wish my self an ouen sweper. For when thou art drunk, and that the superfluity of thy bybbed Wine distylleth forth in sower sweatye dropes, then throwest thou me away, thou treadest on mee, and so leauest me in daunger of Dogs and Cattes, which many tymes both pysse and shyte on me. I woulde I were then whelmed on thy drowsye drunken noll!

To attribute writing like this, to Francis Thynne at nineteen, in the year of his marriage (p. xlviii), is mere harumscarumness or perverseness.

¶ TO THE GODLY AND GENTLE READER.

THou hast heer, Godly and gentle Reader, the Conference between Sim Certain and Pierce Plowman, two great Clarkes, <sup>1</sup> This is preceded by the following amusing derivation of gallant: "First, gallantnesse is deriued of this word Gall, which is a superfluity that groweth on the oke tree, vnprofitable, wythout seede, light; and so rounde that it can scarce lye still on the playne ground. Wherof some nations haue a prouerbe: 'thou art as fickle as a Gall.' And thou shalt vndestande, that of Gall, commeth this word Galling, which signifieth a fretting and wearing awaye of hymselfe, or a hurting and offending of other. And so consequently they are called Gallant, bicause eyther they consume and spende away that which their frends hath left them, in their vain follye and garishnesse, and so gall them selues: or (if they haue not of their owne to gall) eyther gall the Marchaunt in his boke, or else, by shamefull shifting, gall so many to maintain their Gallantnesse, till they bring themselves at the length to the gallomes, which we see commonly to be most furnished with gallants: god giue them better grace!" (The italics are mine. See W. de Worde's 'Treatyse of this Galaunt' in my Ballads from MSS. i. Ballad Soc.)

How the Author comming homeward out of Scotland through Yorkshire, chaunced to lodge in Rippon, At what signe, the name of the Hoste, the order and maner of the House and famelye, And his entertainment there.

Chap 1.

In my last return from Edenborough in Scotland, comming homeward through Yorkshire: I traueled somewhat out of the common high London way, of purpose to see the Cuntie. And one day among others, toward euen I chaunced to come to a little through fare Towne called Rippon, where at the very entring into the Town, I met a poore olde Woman, of whom I asked if there were any good lodging in the town. She answered mee that there was good lodging at the signe of the Greeke Omega. "The Greeke Omega (quoth I) what doo you meane by that?" "Nothing," said she, "but that there is good lodging and honest entertainment, which (I suppose) is all that you require." Then I asked her what was the good mans name of this house. "His name (quoth she) is Simon Certain; we call him commonly Sim Certain." "Sim Certain (quoth I), surely these are very strange names," and so bidding her farewell, I departed into the towne warde, much more desirous to be come to my lodging, for the strangenes of the names, as well of the Signe, as also of the Good man of the House. By that time I had entred a little way into the Town, I was ware of a very faire Greek Omega hanging forth as a common signe, euen as the olde woman had tolde me before. And thether I went; and entring into the house, I found in the Hall the Good man, his two Sonnes, his Chamberlain and his Hostler singing the C.iiij Psalme of Dauid very distinctly and orderly. The Goodwife with her two Daughters sat spinning at their Wheelles a little distaunce from them. All which things when I beheld, I thought with my selfe that these things were yet more strange to beholde, then were either the Signe or els the good mans name to heare, So I bad them God-speed. The Hoste very curteously arose, and bad me welcome; so did the wife also, and asked mee whether I meant to tary all night. I answered yea. Then he asked mee if I would see my Chamber. "No, gentle Hoste (quoth I), I will not hinder so much your good exercise, for I am sure I cannot be lodged amisse in this house." "Not so, sir (quoth he), but ye shall haue the best that we haue, and welcome." I gaue him harty thanks. Then hee enquired of mee, of whence I was, where I had been, and whether I was bound. I tolde him I was a Southern man borne and dwelling, and that I had been at Edenborough in Scotland, and was thus farre in my way homeward. "In good time, sir (quoth hee), and yee are hartely welcome into this part of Yorkshire." "I thank you, gentle Hoste" (quoth I).

The comming thether of Pierce Plowman, beeing newly come from London. His request to the Hoste to lend him fise pound vpon a paune. The refusall of the Hoste, the question thereupon moued, beeing the matter of the conference.

Chap 2.

By that time we had talked scant half an houre, there came in a Cunttrie man, a Neighbour, a iolly olde fatherly man, bringing vnder his arme a fardell of Bookes, as many as hee might well holde vnderneath one of his armes; he gaue vs the time of the day. "What! neighbour Pierce" (quoth our Hoste); "welcome from London! Sir, (quoth he to me), this Neighbour of mine is lately come from where you are going, God willing." "Truely (quoth I) and this is happily met by grace of God, and as I verily suppose neere in the mid way betweene Edenborough and London." With that, "Neighbour Simon," quoth this Pierce Plowman, (for that was his name) "I am come to desire your help." "What is the matter, neighbour Pierce"

(quoth our Hoste). "Neighbour (quoth hee) to lend mee fīue pound for half a yeer; for truly (quoth hee) I haue spent all my mony at London, and haue not left myself so much as to buy my seed Wheat, wherwith to sowe my land this season." "No haue! neighbour Pierce?" (quoth hee): "that was very ill handled; ye shoould alwaies so vse your matters that the main stock be saued whole." "Fye, neighbour Simon! quoth he, speak no more of that, for the reuerence of God, for truly I am ashamed of myself; but what remedy now saue patience, and to learne to be wiser heerafter?" "What meanes all these paper Books" (quoth our Hoste). "Mary, neighbour, quoth the Pierce, they shalbe suretie vnto you for the repaiment of your fīue pound." "With that they were vnbound; and beeing opened and looked vpon, they were Billes, Answers, Replications, Reio[i]nders, Coppies of Depositions, and such like; Some out of one Court, some out of another. When our Hoste had seen them all: "why, Neighbour (quoth hee), doo you think to meet with any man that is so mad to lend v. pence vpon such trash?" "Trash! Neighbour, quoth Pierce, they stand me in aboue fīftie pound." "Peraunture so, quoth our Hoste, but that proueth not that they are worth fīftie points, sauing vnto him that were as mad to buy them of you, as you bought them at their hands that solde them vnto you. But or you meet with any such chapman, I beeleue you will be weary of keeping them." With that, Pierce began to be half offended. "Neighbour Pierce," quoth our Hoste, "fīue pound is a small matter between us twain, you shall haue it vpon your word. But as for your Books: heer dwelleth a Lady not far hence, carie them to her, for they are far fet and deer bought, and such things, men say, are good for Ladies."

F. iij. Cap. 13. . . "Doo you call this a mending, Neighbour Simon?" quoth Pierce. "In very deed," quoth he, "I must needs confesse, that these great and excessiue Charges and large Expences haue rebuked me, haue chasticed and amended me; but to say that I think or iudge it thank woorthy vnto them that haue receiued my money: I say 'the Deuil kisse his arse that so amendeth me or any frēnd of mine;' for verily such amending, in my iudgment, deserueth asmuch and the very like thanks, as did the Wife who gaue her husband two strong poisons, meaning to spēd him in déed, but the poysons béeing of contrary natures, wrought one vpon an other, and destroyed either others force, wherby the man béeing hardly handled for a season, yet béeing driuen into a lask by their extremitie, auoyded them bothe; and with them much corruption, so that where before he was a very corrupt body, he was by their clensings the better xx. yēers after. Thus she did him good by accident, but far from her intent or purpose, and vtterly against her will. . . .

Cap. 14. . . For I haue partely shewed you héer what leaue and libertie the common people, namely<sup>1</sup> youth, haue to follow their own lust and desire in all wantonnes and dissolution of life. For further proof wherof, I call to witnesse the Theaters, Curtines,<sup>2</sup> Heauing houses, Rifling bootthes, Bowling alleyes, and such places, where the time is so shamefully mispent, namely<sup>1</sup> the Sabaoth daies, vnto the great dishonor of God, and the corruption and vtter distruction of youth. All which (I say) are either the causes or the effects of these great gaines and reuenues, or els both causes and effects interchaungeably. For I dare vndertake, that if either these gains and profits were publike, as you pretend, or els if there were as great gain and proffit to the Maiestrates and Officers, in the godly liues and honest conuersation of the common people, as there is in the contrary, these harbours of vngodlines & misnurture would haue lesse fauour and maintenaunce then they haue, and godlines Sobrietie and modestie of liues & maners, would be in greater estimation then they are, and the honor and glory of God more aduanced therby. (ed. 1585, sign. F. 4.)

Lij. And when I would departe : my Hoste and Pierce Plowman (whether I would or no) bring mee on my way to Doncaster ; and did, and there caused mee to haue great entertainment without a peny charges for one whole day ; and then we took either leaue of other, and departed each of vs toward his owne. After which departure, vpon the way as I traueled, I remembred the Prophet Dauid, who saith, 'I was glad when it was said vnto mee, wee shall go into the house of the Lord,' which I suppose be neuer ment by a common Inne or hosterie, where neuerthelesse I may safely say I found it. And therefore full true it is that Ouid saith, 'there is oftentimes a good fish in a water where a man would little think.' Wee boast much of ciuilitie and nurture in the South partes of this land, namely in London, and dispraise and dispise the North as rude and vnciuil, but surely for mine owne parte (that am a Southern man, and borne in Kent), to speak indifferently for any thing that euer I haue found in all my trauel in both the partes, I cannot see nor know why the Northern People should not rather pittie vs, then enuie vs, concerning either Godlynes, Vertue, or good maners ; for heer I haue spoken of the basest kind of People, wherby it may partly approoue what hope there is of the Gentlemen, merchants, and them of the good Townes and Citties, for whose sakes, and generally for all others, I vndertook to gather and to report this little Conference, and with Gods help and fauour haue doon it as neer accordant to the trueth as I could, neither adding therto nor taking there from, the desire wherof caused mee to take the lesser Iourneis homewarde, and to write it by parcells at my Innes least I might haue forgotten it.

And herein I protest that I haue neither flattered no belyed any man, for my meaning is trueth, and the commendation therof, and therein is no flattery; for surelie if I haue flattered any body, it is mine owne self in that, that where before I was perswaded that pride had vtterly corrupted this whole common welth, and had clean ouerspred it with his generation of all vngodlynes, and wickednes, wherof all times and ages doo agree with him to be the father, sithence this Iourney I begin to hope that God wil haue mercy vpon vs, and hath, and that he hath reserued vnto him self a remnaunt, as hee did in the time of Elias, for whose sakes hee will spare the rest, as le offered vnto Abraham, touching Sodome and Gomorra.

Therefore the intent of this my collection thus appearing: I refer my self to the iudgement of them to whose hands it shal heerafter come, desiring their good woord in recompence therof, and also of my long and weary Iourney, wherof this labour yas mine only rewarde.

Beseeching Almighty God, of his great mercie and clemency to graunt vnto the same no wursse effect than I haue ment therin, and that by the Appostles counsell, we may consider that wee are but strangers and pilgrimes heer in earth, and that there after wee may order our liues and conuersation longing for our owne Cuntrie, content to suffer, and to forbear, and glad to heare or see the thing that may bee for our edifying, learning, and knowledge, to bee the meeter and better welcome into our Cuntrie, which is the Heauenly Jerusalem,

whether God for Christes sake bring vs all

The Apologie, and Conclusion of the Author.

THus ended is this shorte Collection
Rude and vnperfect for his want of skil,
Who should haue giuen it perfection,
and would, if his might had been to his wil.
Or else if time had therunto sufficed,
To haue perused it and recognised.

¶ But for as much as I did fayle of bothe,
To wit, of Learning and also of time,

And to let dye such matter I was lothe,
Though I ne could it duely enlumine ;
Yet, for my God and for my Cuntries sake,
Me thought of force I must it vndertake.

And namely for the woorthy Shire of Kent,
Famous of olde time for humanitie,
As is to finde in writing auncient,
Besides what dayly proof dooth testifie ;
Sith I was borne in her, me thought of right
I ought to bring this matter into sight.

¶ So strongly ruleth looue the part of man,
Namely that looue whiche is so naturall,
To doo his Cuntry good in what he can,
That his good hart is to be borne withall ;
For God requesteth of a man his will,
Although he want wherwith it to fulfil.

¶ These are the causes why I took on mee,
To be reporter of this Conference
Which I haue doon as heer is plain to see,
As neer as I could followe their sentence ;
Wherin if I haue failed any whit,
I pray you in good part to taken it.

¶ For first touching the matter in substance,
The Speakers are the Authors, and not I ;
As for the order in deliuerance,
I put in the Readers curtesie
To mend it, or take it as it is,
For he is wise that dooth nothing amisse.

4. The Case is Altered, 1604. (Not by Francis Thynne, created Lancaster Herald in 1603.)

TO THE READER.

Gentle Reader, I pray God, I do not flatter you, for if you should proue either vnwise, or vnkinde, I should call in my Title : So it is, that hauing nothing to do, I set mysele on work about a litle better matter, to write downe certain Cases neuer pleaded, but only dis-coursed vpon, by a couple of idle people ; the matters handled, are of no great moment, and therefore scarce worth the reading : but yet if you peruse them all ouer, no doubt but some of them wil please you : if any of them do otherwise, I am sory, I knowe not your humour ; but if you finde yourselfe touched with any euil, rather mend the fault in your selfe, then finde fault with me. In brief, I only write vpon Cases, neither kniue-Cases, Pinne-Cases, nor Candle-Cases, but onely a fewe merry pittiful Cases : In which if I haue lost time, I am sory for my labour ; If I haue lost my labour, I am sory for my time ; but if I haue gained your good will, all is not lost : and I thanke you ; but, because I knowe not where to come to you to tell you so, I leaue you to reade and like what you list, and to think of me as you haue cause ; and so in good will, I rest.

Your friend, F. T.

[sign. B, back]

Dal. . . . But what is become of my neighbours Biros daughter.

Mil. Alas the day. there is a pittifull Case indeed, if you speake of a Case to be pittied. A young wench, a faire wench, a fine wench, a pretty wench, a sweet wench, a gallant wench, a proper wench, a wise wench, an honest wench, a kinde wench, a good wench ; that could speake well, and daunce well, and sing well, and play well, & worke well, and do euery thing well, to be cast away ; I say, cast away : yea vtterly cast away vpon a Noddy, a Ninny-hamer, a Tamegoose, a Woodcocke, a Meacocke, a Dawcocke, that loues nothing but fatte meate, and can spel nothing but Pudding, & yet put vp in gay cloaths must stand in stead of a better man, to be the vndoing of such a peerlesse woman, & all for a little trash : Oh wicked money, to be the Actor of such a mischief : is not this a pittifull Case ?

Dal. It is : and poore heart (were not wishing in vaine) I could beteeme her a better match : for to see a Diamonde buried in Sea-coale ashes, it is pitty ; it deserues a better soyle : & in truth had I such a daughter, she should spin, & I would reele, and we would make thread for a liuing, before I would bring her to her death by such a miserie.

Mil. You say well, & so I thinke should I. but 'tis a pittifull Case, and so let it be.

[sign. C 2, back]

Mil. Then heare me, thus it was. An old woman, a very old woman, a crooked old woman, a creeping old woman, a lame woman, a deafe woman, a miserable woman, a wretched woman, a wicked woman, fell with halfe a sight, (for shortly after she fell blind) in loue with a prety, neate, nimble, spruse, liuely, handsome, & in truth, lovely young man, and so faire, as after the manner of the country people, she would, if she met him in a morning, bid him good morrow, with "how doe you, sonne, ? I praie you come neere," if it were neere her house, and "I praie you sit downe," and "I pray you drinke, and how doth your good father, and your mother and all your house, ? In troath you are welcome, I am sorie I have no good cheere for you, but such as I haue, I pray you doe not spaire : if I haue any thing in my house, it is at your commande : In deede I euer loued you of a childe, and if I had a daughter I would giue her, with all I haue, to you ; that I would, I, truly, would I : but, and you could make much of an old woman, it may be. I haue some old Rud-dockes that saw no day these twenty winters and ten, that may make a young man merry : yea, and perhaps make you liue by their noses that holde their heads full high." And thus, with shewing of him all her wealth, which she coniured him to keepe secret, & giuing a piece of gold or two with him, she made him doe, yea mary did he, that which his conscience had no comfort in, and he found no good of ; for hauing robbed her cupberd of a great deale a coine, only bearing her in hand to be her Asse-band, and for a little ilfaoured kindnes, it fell out, that shortly after, he falling in loue with a neighbours daughter, a wench worthy the looking on, when all parties were agreed, the matter was made vp, hands were ioyned, hearts were ioyfull, the Banes were asked, the Bride and Groome were married, the guests were bidden, the dinner was readie ; the minstrells plaid, the youth danced, and the old fooles laught, and the day was well past, and nothing longed for but night, and then the supper done, the guesates departed, then curtesie and "I thank you," the Rich had their bellies full, and the beggers had their pockets full, and the house was at quiet, the doores were shut, the fire and candel put out, the bed made softe, and the sheets white washed, and the pillowes sprinckled with rose water, and all things in order, for the comfort of these yong couple ; the old woman that grewe mad at this match, though she durst not forbid the banes, being at the church, and hearing of diuerse saying "God giue you ioy," fell to mumbling to herselfe, and some sorrow too ; when how she wrought with her Inchantment, I know not, but the young people might kisse, while she might sigh, and he fret, but there was no further matter to be performed ; and this continued some two yeares, till she in love and modesty, concealing her miserie, & he seeking all meanes he could for his comfort, and finding none, met by chance with this old woman, and in a mistrust that shee had done him some villainie with her ill tongue, fell vpon her, and throwing her downe, trode vpon her, & did beate her, till he left her for dead ; and indeed she neuer eate bread after ; for going home to her house, belike going about some other hellishnes, her Cruch slipping, she fell ouer the threshold, and broke her neck : when the young man came home, and talked so kindly with his wife, that within fortie weekes after she brought him a goodly boy : And is not this a pittifull Case, that a man should so long be tormented by the wicked tongue of a woman

Dal. A woman, you would say the shape of a woman, for a witch is but a diuell Incarnate, it is pittie that any of them are suffered to liue. But to requite you: not many miles from the town wher I dwel, there was an old man, a filthy old man, a coughing, sneueling, bleer-ied, wry-mouthed, botle-nosed, lame-legged, palsie-handed, stumpe-footed, wry-bodied, gagge-toothed, slandering-tongue, foh, stinking-breathed, who walked but vpon cruches, read but with spectacles, and spake with a shaking, nodding, or a noddie head; this ougly obiect, or rather abiect of nature, the sorrow of youthes eie-sight, the disprofit of time, the hate of loue, and the lamentation of hope, such a man as is not in the world to be seene, by very ill fortune, vpon a faire day chanced to meete with a Tenants daughter of his, whom hauing well viewed, as his dimme sight would give him leaue, giuing a nodde to her curtesie, sent the next day for her to his house; but the wench the day before hauing so much of his sight, that she desired neuer to see him more, with bitter teares fell at her fathers feete, and desired him to goe, and know his pleasure, and make excuse for her, that she was not well, but the next day she would come to him: the poore man seeing his daughter change colour, did yeelde to her request, put on his best shooes, & a cleane band, & being but a litle way to his house, through want of a horse went on foote, when, but a litle wet shod, with slipping into a ditch, he comes at last to the doore of this rich clowne, who being head Bailiffe to the chiefe Lord of the manner, kept a house, the best thatched of all his neighbours in the parish; there being saluted by a couple of fowle cures, not much vnlike their old maister, being of his old acquaintance, shewed him but their teeth, & then wagging their tailes, did him no harme, but let him there stay til this Chaps, the old mezil, hearing his dogges, and knowing their voices, came out to heare whom they talke too, and there seeing this poore man stand cappe in hand, setting himselfe downe vpon a bench, after a horse cough, and a spalling spet or two, begins to aske him for his daughter, whose excuse being made, he falls aboard with him for her, to haue her for his seruant: which he answering with an excuse, that it could not be, for she had taken earnest of a gentlewoman, to waite on her in her chamber; which he belieuing, answered that he would do more for her then any gentlewoman of them all, for he had no children, and he would make her both his childe and his wife; and therefore she should take no care for seruice: the poore man, glad of this message, went home merily to his daughter, told her what good fortune was towards her, for ioy sent for the other pot, & now thought to take no care for rent, when his child should be his Landlady: but the poore girl—seeming to her father to be as ioyfull as he—when her father was gone to his daies worke in the morning, tooke an old sacke, in which she put vp all her cloathes that she had, and away goes she to an Aunt she had ten miles of, and there with howling and crying, that her father ment to marrie her to the diuel, intreated her to put her to seruice, for she had rather washe buckes all daies of her life, then be matched with such a monster: "Oh Aunt, euery bodie saies that he kild his last wife with kindnes, and I thinke he would do as much with me. Oh tis a venome man as liues; and truly Aunt it is such an il-fauoured man, and he hath such a breath, It is a beastly creature; besides, the house that he dwells in, he hath but his life in; but, if he had all the world, and as much good as would lie in all your house, I would not haue him, I had rather begge my bread."

Her Aunt seeing the honest heart of the poore wench and knowing that she could set a seame together, and handle her needle prettily, for a plaine hemme, & could tell how to eate a peece of meate, howeuer she could dresse it, spake to a gentlewoman neere vnto her, to take her into her seruice, droue a bargain for her wages, brought her to her, and placed her with her: where she behaued her selfe well, and was well thought on; and there I leaue her. Now home comes her father, misseth his daughter, runnes to his Landlord, thinking to finde her there; the micher thinkes he is mockte, he falles out with his Tenant, warnes him out of his house; the poore man goes home weeping, his wife with her handes wringing entertaines him with a scolding, railing vpon him, cursing her Landlord, and swears she will haue her home, 'hang him, dogge, he shall not be the death of her daughter, she will not dwel in his house, she will haue her childe out of his house, or she will beate downe his doores'; and is as good as her word; the next morning with an open mouth goes to his doores, where lowder then both his Mastiffes shee maketh an outcry for her childe.

The man, knowing her to be an vnreasonable woman, entreats her to be quiet, swears by the cross of his Crutch that he knowes not whither she is gone; and with much adoe to pacifie her, gettes himselfe ridde of her; when comming home, and not finding her deare daughter, she falls into such an agony, that a horse would not abide it. When the poore man with grieve takes such thought that he can eate no meat, and she weary, & almost out of breath with scolding, goes to bed for anger; and the old man, with sorrow to loose his loue, and to see her parents misery, after a fit of the stone, with a stitch of the Chollick, being griped at the heart & fearing to leaue the world, sendes for his Tenant, forgiues him his rent, & giues his house to his daughter, if she be found againe; and so bestowing among the poore of the Parish some litle matter not worth the speaking of, hauing made al meanes he could, and by her parents good care and trauaile, found out, and brought vnto him some houre before his death, gaue her in an old foule Handkercheffe, that which payde for more then the washing of two faire Smockes, and so causing the great Bell to be towlde, after a hollow hemme or two, euen for Loue, (because he could liue no longer) dyed. And is not this of a long Case, a pittifull Case?

Mil. Yes, if it were true, but surely tis a iest; there was neuer such a man, nor such a matter.

Dal. Well then, say it were a iest, was it not a pittifull iest?

Mil. If there were anie pittie, it was in that hee liued so long.

(sign. D. 4.)

When they had thus ended their Cases, and giuen each other a good night, and came home to their wiues in good time, that al things were quiet for that night, the next day about nine of the clock in the morning, according to promise they met at the place appointed, the great Oake, vnder which, when they had a litle rested themselues, vpon their walking staues, after a litle ordinary salutations, with "good morrow, and well met, and how doe you with all your household?" "Well, I thanke God, and I thanke you, and God hold it," and so forth, taking vp their cudgells with "come, goe, the morning goes away and the market will be done," away they goe together, and being some foure or fife miles to the towne, they fell into new matters to talke vpon, which, if you wil tary til they be written, as I haue heard them, true or false as they be, you shall haue them, in the [meane] time hoping you will haue patience with this, till you heare of what followes, I will thus end.

A merry Case is wittifull,
A wofull case is pittifull;
The wittifull doth breede but Iest,
The pittifull may breede vnrest;
Then leaue the last, and take the first,
And take the best, and leaue the worst.

FINIS.

II F. With consistent recklessness, Mr Collier also says<sup>1</sup> that the following poem written by George Turberville, to a friend whose age (l. 8) he contrasts with his own youthfull yeares (l. 9) "must have been" addresst to "Francis Thynne," when Turberville was actually older than Francis Thynne, probably 15 years older, as Turberville's conjecturd birth-year is 1530 (Hole, Biog. Dict. 1865). So that when Thynne was 22, the comparatively old Turberville of 37, or thereabouts, contrasted his youthful years with his junior's old age!

And as there was an earlier edition of the book, Thynne may not have even reacht 21 when Turberville's poem was written.

[George Turberville's Epitaphes, Epigrams, &c. London, 1567; leaf 79, back.]

at his desire.

My Francis, whilst you breath your foming steede Athwart the fields in peace to practise warre,
In Countrie whilst your keneld Hounds doe feede,
Or in the wood for taken pray doe iarre; 4
Whilst you with Haukes the sielie Foule doe slaye,
And take delight a quick retriue to haue,
Wasting your age in pleasure passing braue:
To flee to marke, and heare the Spanels baye, 8
In Citie I my youthfull yeares doe spende,
At Booke perhaps sometime to weare the day:
Where man to man, not friend to friend, doth lende,
With vs is naught but pitch (my Friend) and pay. 12
Great store of Coyne, but fewe enioy the same,
The owners holde it fast with lymed handes;
We liue by losse, we play and practise game;
Wee by and sell; the streate is all our landes. 16
Well storde we are of e[v]rie needefull thing,
Wood, Water, Coale, Flesh, Fishe we haue ynow:
(What lack you? Wyues and Maides doe daylie sing
The Horne is rife, it sticks on many a brow.) 20
But yet (I say) the Countrie hath no peere,
The Towne is but a toyle, and wearie lyfe:
We like your Countrie sportes (Friend Francis) heere,
The Citie is a place of bate and strife. 24
Wherefore I thinke thee wise and full of thrift,
That fledst the Towne, and hast that blessed gift.

[In Turberville's volume there is another poem, of 3 pages, "To his Friend T: hauing bene long studied and well experienced, and now at length louing a Gentlewoman that forced<sup>2</sup> him naught at all," leaf 76, back.

I Thought good fayth, & durst haue gagde my hand
For you (Friend T.) that beautie should now hight
Haue rasde your hart, nor Cupid with his brand
Haue brought thy learned breast to such a plight.]

<sup>1</sup> In the edition of 1570 this is printed Frances, and so in the table at the beginning, but it has his lyfe like the 1st edition.

To Master Thomas Speighte

Master Speght, your new edition of Chaucer deserves praise,

but as nothing is perfect,

you must let me,

[* leaf 1, back]
 as my father edited the poet, examine your book,

The Industrie and love (master Speighte) whiche yo<sup>n</sup> haue vsed, and beare, vppon and to oure famous poete Geffrye Chaucer, deseruethe bothe comendationne and furtherance: the one to recompense your trauayle, the other to accomplyshe the duetye, whiche we all beare (or at the leaste, yf we reuerence lernynge or regarde the honor of oure Countrye, sholde beare) to suche a singuler ornamente of oure tonge as the woorkes of Chaucer are: Yet since there is nothinge so fullye perfected, by anye one, whereinne somme imperfectione maye not bee founde, (for as the prouerbe is,
 'Barnardus,' or as others have, 'Alanus, non videt omnia,') yo<sup>n</sup> must be contented to gyve me leave, in discharge of the duetye and love whiche I beare to Chaucer, (whome I suppose I have as great intereste to adorne withe my smale 'skyll as anye other hath, in regarde that the laborious care of my father made hym most acceptable to the worlde in correctinge and augmentinge<sup>1</sup> his woorkes,) to enter into the examinacione of this newe editione,<sup>2</sup> and that the rather, because yo<sup>n</sup>,

<sup>3</sup> Does this mean that Speght borrowd Francis Thynne's copies, and printed 'em without his leave, or that Speght had got hold of some of William Thynne's Chaucer MSS. which had been stolen from, or given away by, his son Francis, as noticed on page 12? If the former, I feel no doubt that old William Thynne had the MSS. of these spurious poems, but did not print them, either because he felt they weren't Chaucer's, or because he got them after his 2nd edition of 1542 was publisht.

the plowmanne; that pilgrimes tale begynnynge in this sorte;

"In Lincolneshyre fast by a fenne, Standes a religigious howse who dothe yt kenne," &c.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Unluckily no MS. of The Pilgrim's Tale, or leaf of Wm. Thynne's 1st edition, is known to us now. But I reprint in an Appendix the bit of the Tale that Tyrwhitt saw. He says, "Though Mr Speght did not know where to find The Pilgrim's Tale, and the printer of the edition in 1687 assures us that he had searched for it 'in the public libraries of both Universities,' and also 'in all private libraries that he could have access unto,' I have had the good fortune to meet with a copy.* It is entitled 'The Pylgrymæ Tale,' and begins thus:—

In Lincolneshyr fast by the fene
There stant an hows and you yt ken,
And callyd sempynham of religion
And is of an old foundation, &c.

"There can be no doubt, I think, that this is the piece of which Mr Speght had received some confused intelligence. It seems to have been mentioned by Bale among Chaucer's works, in the following manner, 'Narrationes diversorum, Lib. i. In comitatu Lincolnensi fuit.'—Script. Brit., p. 526, ed. 1559. But it is impossible that any one who had read it should ascribe it to Chaucer. He is quoted in it twice by name, fol. xxxiii and fol. xlv, and in the latter place the reference seems to be made to a printed book. The reader shall judge:—

He sayd he durst not it disclose,
But bad me reyd the Romant of the Rose,
The thred leafe just from the end,
To the secund page ther he did me send,
He prayd me thes vi. stavis for to marke, Whiche be Chaucers awn hand wark.

¶ Thus moche woll our boke sygnify
That while Peter hath mastery, &c.

[Then follow four more lines from Chaucer's Rom. R. v. 7263-8, ed. Urr.] It is not usual, at least, to cite MSS. by the leaf and the page. But if this citation was really made from a printed book, The Pilgrim's Tale must have been written after Mr Thynne's edition, for Chaucer's translation of the Romant of the Rose was first printed in that edition. Another

* The copy, of which I speak, is in the black-letter, and seems to have once made part of a volume of miscellaneous poems, in 8vo. The first leaf is numbered xxxi, and the last xlv. The Pilgrim's Tale begins about the middle of fol. xxxi, vers., and continues to the end of the fragment, where it breaks off imperfect. The first leaf has a running title—Venus, The court of—and contains the ten last lines of one poem, and another whole poem of twenty lines, before The Pilgrim's Tale.

This curious fragment was purchased at the auction of Mr West's library, in a lot (No. *1040) of Sundry fragments of old black-letter books, by Mr Herbert of Gulston's Square, who very obligingly permitted me to examine it. [Though Mr Hazlitt, in his Handbook, says that Douce had it, but it did not go to the Bodleian; it is there.]

In this tale did Chaucer<sup>1</sup> most bitterlye enveye against the pride, state, couetousnes, and extorcione of the Bysshoppes, their officialls, Archdeacons, vicars generalls, comissaryes, and other officers of the spirituall courtes. The Invention and order whereof (as I haue herde yt related by some, nowe of good worshippe bothe in courte and countrie, but then my fathers clerkes,) was, that one comynge into this relligious howse, walked vpp and downe the churche, beholdinge goodlye pictures of Bysshoppes in the windowes, at lengthe the manne contynuyng in that contemplatione, not knowinge what Bishoppes they were, a grave olde manne withe a longe white hedde and berde, in a large blacke garment girded vnto hym, came forthe and asked hym, what he iudged of those pictures in the windowes, who sayed he knewe not what to make of them, but that they looked lyke vnto oure mitred Bishoppes; to whome the olde father replied, "yt is true, they are lyke, but not the same, for oure byshoppes are farr degenerate from them," and withe that, made a large discourse of the Bishoppes and of their courtes.

This tale, when kinge henrye the eighte had redde, he called my father unto hym, sayinge, "William Thynne! I dobtte this wiſh not be allowed; for I suspecte the Byshoppes wiſh call the in questione for yt."

passage will fix the date of this composition still more clearly. In fol. xxxix .xl. are the following lines:—

Perkin werbek and Jak straw

And now of late our cobbler the dawne.

One would not expect to find any mention of Perkin Warbeck in a work attributed to Chaucer; but, passing that over, I think it is plain, that our cobbler, in the second line, means the leader of the Lincolnshire rebels in 1536, who, as Hollinshed tells us, p. 941, 'called himself Captaine Cobbler, but was indeed a monk, named Doctor Mackarell.' The Pilgrim's Tale therefore was not written till after 1536, and consequently could not possibly be in Mr Thynne's first edition, which, as has been shown above, was printed at latest in 1532."—Tyrwhitt, Appendix to Preface to Canterbury Tales, p. vi, note, Moxon's ed. 1855; p. xv-xvii, notes, ed. 1775.

The story of this
Pilgrim's Tale was (as my have told me), that, to a man looking at painted and not knowing an old Father told him, 'of old

[* leaf 4]

When Henry VIII
read the Tale, he Bishops 'll be at you for this',

to whome my father, beinge in great fauore with his prince, (as manye yet lyvinge canne testyfy,) sayed, "yf your grace be not offended, I hoope to be protected by yo<sup>a</sup>:" wherevppon the kinge bydd hym goo his waye, and feare not. AH whiche not withstandinge, my father was called in questione by the Bys-shoppes, and heaved at by cardina<sup>ll</sup> Wolseye, his olde enymye, for manye causes, but mostly for that my father had furthered Skelton to publishe his 'Collen Cloute' againste the Cardina<sup>ll</sup>, the moste parte of whiche Booke was compiled in my fathers howse at Erithe in Kente. But for all my fathers frendes, the Cardinalls perswadinge auctorytye was so greate withe the kinge,<sup>1</sup> that thoughe by the kinges 'fauor my father escaped bodelye daunger, yet the Cardina<sup>ll</sup> caused the kinge so muche to myslyke of that tale, that chaucer must be newe printed, and that discourse of the pilgrymes tale lefte oute; and so beinge printed agayne, some thynges were forsed to be omitted, and the plowmans tale (supposed, but vntrulye, to be made by olde Sir Thomas Wyat, father to hym which was executed in the firste yere of Quene Marye, and not by Chaucer) with muche ado permitted to passe with the reste,<sup>2</sup> in suche sorte that in one open parlamente (as I haue herde Sir Johne Thynne reporte, beinge then a member of the howse,) when talke was had of Bookes to be forbidden,<sup>3</sup> Chaucer had there for euer byn condemned, had yt not byn that his woorkes had byn counted but fables. Whereunto yf yo<sup>a</sup> will replye, that their colde not be any suche pilgrymes tale, be-but promist to protect him.

However, through the power of Wolsey,—the old enemy of William Thynne, because most part of Skelton's Colin Clout

was written at Thynne's house at Erithe,—

[* leaf 4, back]

my father's 1st edition of Chaucer was cancell'd, and a 2nd printed, without The Pilgrim's Tale. And from the 3rd The Plowman's Tale was nearly left out.

Indeed, Chaucer's works would have been condemn'd by parliament if they hadn't been held fables.

If you say The Pilgrim's Tale can't be Chaucer's

<sup>1</sup> This must have been before Wolsey's impeachment on 9th October, 1529, and probably before the beginning of the coolness between Wolsey and the King on the Divorce-cause being shifted to Rome in June 1529.

1. You seem to think that Richard Chaucer [the poet's grandfather] was his father.

'Vnder the tytyle of Chaucers countrye, yo<sup>n</sup> seme to make yt probable that Richarde Chaucer, vinetener of Londone, was Geffrye Chaucers father:<sup>2</sup> But I holde

Love*, saying that "in the Citie of London . . . I was fourth growen"; and then says, "In the Records of the Guild Hall in London wee find, that there was one Richard Chaucer, Vintener of London in the 23 yeare of Edward the third, who might well be Geoffrey Chaucers father." But, as I found in the Hustings Roll, 110, 5 Ric. II, at the Guildhall, Chaucer that no moore then that Iohne Chaucer of londone, was father to Richarde; of whiche Iohne I fynde in the recordes in Dorso Rotulor. patent. memb. 24, de anno 30. Ed. 1. in the towre, that kinge Edward the firste had herde the compleinte of Iohne Chaucer of london, who was beaten and hurte, to the damage of one thousand pownde (that some amountinge at this daye to thre thowsande pownde;) for whiche a comissione wente forthe to enquire thereof. wherbye yt semethe that he was of some Reckonyng. But as I cannott saye that Johne was father to Richarde, or hee to Geffroye: So yet this muche I will deliuer in settinge downe the antiquytie of the name of Chaucer, that his anncesters (as yo<sup>u</sup> well coniecture) were strangers, as the etymon of his name (being frenche, in 'Englishe signyfyinge one who shueth or hooseth a manne) dothe prove; for that dothe the etymon of this worde 'Chausier' presente vnto vs; of whiche name I haue founde (besides the former recyted Iohne,) on<sup>1</sup> Elias chauseryr, lyvinge in the tyme of Henrye the thirde and of Edward the firste, of whome the recorde of pellis exitus in the receyte of the Exchequier in the firste yere of Edward the firste hathe thus noted: "Edwardus dei gratia &c. Liberate de thesauro nostro Elie Chauseryr decem solidos super arreragia trium obulorum diurnorum quos ad vitam suam, per litteras domini Henrici Regis, patris nostri, percepit ad scaccarium nostrum. datum per manum Walteri Merton cancellarii nostri, apud Westmonasterium, 24 Julii, anno regni nostri primo." With whiche Carractres ys Geffry Chausyer written in the Recordes in the tyme of Edward the thirde and Richarde the seconde. So that yt was a name of office or occupatione, whiche after came to be the surname

But this no more follows than that the John Chaucer who in 1301 was beaten and damaged to the tune of £3000, was Richard's father.

But it's certain that Chaucer's ancestors were foreigners, [<sup>* leaf 7</sup>] for Chausier is 'one who shueth or hooseth a man.'

An Elias Chaucer livd in Hen. III's & Edw. I's times, as a writ to the Treasury in 1272-3, to pay him 10s. for arrears of his pension of 1½d. a-day, shows.

So Chaucer is the name of a trade, describd himself, in the Deed by which he releast his interest in his father's house in Thames Street in the City of London, as "Ego Galfridus Chaucer, filius Johannis Chaucer, Civis et Vinetarii Londonie." Richard was the grandfather. <sup>1</sup> one

These sitt togeder in the halle at theyr meles; and whyles they be present in courte, everyche of them taketh, by the cheker rolle, iii d. and every man for his clothing wynter and somer yerely, one marc; and eche for his chaunces iiiij s. viij d." Liber Niger Domus Regis Edw. IV. But on p. 29, the word is spelt "chawcers": "A BISSHOP CONFESSOUR . . . he kepeth in this courte 5 persones wayters now, but then [? in Edw. III's time] he had horse mete for his horses, clothing and chawcers for his groomes in sojourne."

downe that some Heraldes are of opynyone that he did not discende "of any great howse ; whiche they gather by his armes." This ys a slender coniecture ; for, as honorable howses, and of as greate Antiquyte, haue borne as meane armes as Chaucer ; and yet Chaucers armes are not so meane, eyther for coolour, Chardge or particione as some will make them. And where yo<sup>n</sup> saye, yt semethe lykelye, Chaucers skiñ in Geometrye considered, that he tooke the groundes and reasons of his armes oute of seuen twentye, & eight and twentye, propositiones of Euclide's first booke : that ys no inference that his armes were newe, or fyrst assumed by hym oute of Geometricall proportions, because he was skyllyfult in Geometrye : for so yo<sup>n</sup> maye saye of all the annient armes of Englande whiche consyste not of anymallis or vegetalls ; for all other armes whiche are not Anymalls and vegetalls,—as Cheuerons, pales, Bendes, Checkes, and suche lyke,—stande vppon geometricall proportiones : And therefore howe greateso euer their skyll bee, whiche attribute that choyse of armes to Chaucer, [they] had no moore skyll in armes then they needed.

In the same title also, yo<sup>n</sup> sett downe Quene Isabell, &c. and her sonne prince Edward, withe his newe married wyfe, retourned oute of Henalte. In whiche are two imperfections. the first whereof ys, that his wyfe came oute of Henalte with the prince. but that is not soo, for the prince maryed her not before he came into England, since the prince was only slenderly contracted, and not maryed, to her before his arryvañ in Englande, beinge two yeres and moore after that contracte, (betwene the erle of henalt

2. You say some Heralds think Chaucer came of a mean house because his arms are mean. This is a poor guess.

And your notion that Chaucer took his arms out of the 27th and 28th propositions of Euclid, Book 1, shows that you've no more knowledge of arms than you need.

[* leaf 8, back]

3. You say that Queen Isabella and her son Prince Edward, with his bride, Philippa of Hainault, came over to England together. Two mistakes.

1. The Prince didn't marry her abroad, before he came to England (in Jan. 1327), the second, of 'His Parentage': "yet in the opinion of some Heralds (otherwise then his vertues and learning commended him) hee descended not of any great house, which they gather by his Armes, De argento & rubeo colore partito per longitudinem scuti cum benda ex transverso, eisdem coloribus sed transmutatis depicta sub hac forma."—sign. b. ii.

yere of his reigne; thoughe others haue the fyrste, the solempnytye of that mariage beinge donne at Yorke.
besides, she came not ouer with Quene Isabell and the prince, but the prince sent for her afterwarde; and so, I suppose, sayethe Hardinge in his Cronicle,<sup>1</sup> yf
I do not mysconceve yt, not havinge the historye now in my handes. But whether he saye so or no, yt ys not materiall, because the recordes be playne, that he sent for her into Henalte in the seconde yere of his reigne in october, and she came to the kinge the 23 of Januarye followinge, whiche was aboute one daye

<sup>1</sup> Hardyng (p. 31, ed. 1812) puts it in Edward's third year, and relates how comically Philippa was chosen out of the five sisters inspected, on account of her large hips, by a Bishop (of Lichfield) of great experience with women:

In tender age and youthes intelligence,
In his third yere so of his hie regence,

¶ He sent furth then to Henauld, for a wife,

A bishop and other lordes temporall;

Wher, in chaumbre preuy and secretife,

As semyng was to estate virginal,—

Emong theim selves our lordes, for hie prudence,

Of the bishop asked counsail and sentence,

¶ 'Whiche daughter of fue should bee the quene,'

Who counsaillid thus with sad auisement:

"Wee will haue her with good hippis, I mene;

For she will bere good soonnes, at myne entent."

To which thei all accorded by one assent,

And chase Philip, that was full feminine,

As the bishop moost wise did determyne.

¶ But then among theim selves thei laugh fast ay:

The lordes then saied, 'the bishop couth

Full mekill skyll of a woman alwaye,

That so couth chese a lady that was vncouth.'

[And for y<sup>e</sup> mery wordes that came of his mouth,]

Thei trowed he had right great experience

Of womanes rule and hir conuenience.

hathe thus sett downe in the ferthe daye of februarye
 "Bartholomeo de Burgershe nuper misso ad partes Douor ad obuiandum filiæ comitis Hannoniæ consorti ipsius Regis" &c. but this 'recorde followinge is most pleyne, shewing bothe who went for her, the day when they tooke their journeye towardes henalte, with de<sup>1</sup> daye when & where they presented her to the kinge

[* leaf 10]

Thus I've shown you two mistakes.

Next yo<sup>u</sup> seme to impley by a coniecturall argumente, that Chaucers anncesters sholde be merchantes, for that, in place where they haue dwelled, the armes of the marchantes of the staple haue bin seene in the glasse windowes. This ys a mere coniecture, and of no valydytyte. for the merchantes of the staple had not any armes granted to them (as I haue bin enformed) vntill longe after the deathe of Chaucers parentes, whiche was

4. Your conjecture (from merchants' arms in windows) that Chaucer's ancestors were merchants, is of no validity. [Yet they were vintners.]

<sup>1</sup> MS. plainly de

The Merchants of the Staple had no armes till Henry VI's time.

A. You misquote
Gower.

He doesn't call Chaucer 'a worthy poet'.

Nor does he make Chaucer judge of his works.

He says Venus bade him greet Chaucer,
[* leaf 11]

and tell that poet, in his old age

to write his 'Testament of Love'.

aboute the 10 or 12 of Edwarde the thirde; and those merchantes had no armes before the tyme of Henrye the sixte, or muche what thereabouts, as I dobt not but wilbe well proued, yf I be not mysenformed.
But admytte the staplers had then armes, yt ys no argumente that chaucers anncesters were 'merchantes because those armes were in the wyndowes; as yo<sup>n</sup> shall well perceave, yf yo<sup>n</sup> drawe yt into a syllogisme; and therefore yo<sup>n</sup> did well to conclude, that yt was not materia<sup>l</sup> whether they were merchantes or noo.

In the title of Chaucers educatione, yo<sup>n</sup> saye that "Gower, in his booke entituled 'confessio amantis,' termethe Chaucer 'a worthye poet,' and maketh hym as yt were the iudge of his woorkes<sup>1</sup>": in whiche Booke, to my knowledge, Gower dothe not terme hym 'a woorthye poet' (althoughe I confesse he well deserueth that name, & that the same may be gathered oute of Gower comendynge hym); nether dothe he after a sorte (for any thinge I canne yet see) make hym iudge of his Workes, (whereof I wolde be glad to be enformed,) since these be Gowers woordes, vttered by Venus in that booke of confessio Amantis:

And grete well Chaucer when ye mete,
as my disciple and my poet:
'for, in the flowere of his youthe,
In sondrye wise, as he well couthe, of dytyes and of songes glade—
the whiche for my sake he made,— the lande fulfilled is ouer all:
Wherefore to hym in especiall aboue all others I am most holde;
for-thy nowe in his dayes olde thow shalt hym tell this message,
'that he vppon his latter age sett an ende of all his werke, as he whiche is myne owne clerke, do make his 'testament of Love,'
as thou hast donne thy shrift ab[o]ue, so that my Courte yt may recorde,' &c.

<sup>1</sup> Speght, sign. b. iii: "This Gower in his booke which is intituled Confessio Amantis, termeth Chaucer a worthie Poet, and maketh him as it were, the Iudge of his woorkes."

These be all the verses whiche I knowe, or yet canne fynde, in whiche Gower in that booke mentionethe Chaucer, where he nether namethe hym worthye poet, nor after a sorte submyttethe his woorkes to his iudgemente. But quite contrarye, Chaucer dothe submytte the 'Corrections of his woorkes to Gower in these playne woordes, in the latter ende of the fyfte<sup>1</sup> booke of Troylus :

So far from Gower submitting his works to Chaucer,

Chaucer submits his to Gower.
[* leaf 11, back]

O Morall Gower ! this booke I directe to the, and the philosophical stroode, to vouche-safe, where nede is, to correcte, of youre benignities & zeales good.

But this error had in you byn pardoned, yf yo<sup>a</sup> had not sett yt downe as your owne, but warranted with the auctoryte of Bale in 'Scriptoribus Anglie,' from whence yo<sup>a</sup> haue swallowed yt. Then, in a marginall note of this title, yo<sup>a</sup> saye agayne oute of Bale, that Gower was a Yorkeshire manne;<sup>2</sup> but yo<sup>a</sup> are not to be touched therfore; because yo<sup>a</sup> discharge your selfe in vouchinge your auctor. Wherefore Bale hath muche mistaken yt, as he hath donne infynyte things in that Booke 'de scriptoribus Anglie,' beinge for the most parte the collections of Lelande. for in truth the armes of this Sir Johne Gower, beinge argent, one a cheuerone azure, three leopardes heddes or, do 'prove that he came of a contrarye howse to the Gowers of Stytenhame in Yorke-shyre, who bare barrulye of argent & gules, a crosse patye florye sable. Whiche difference of armes semethe a difference of famelyes, vnleste yo<sup>a</sup> canne prove that, beinge of one howse, they altered their armes vppone somme iuste occasione, as that soome of the howse maryinge one heyre, did leave his owne armes, and bare the armes of his moother; as was accustomed in tymes paste. But this difference

This error is Bale's, and you swallowd it.

6. You copy another mistake of Bale's, that Gower was a Yorkshirer.

For the arms of Sir John Gower show that

[* leaf 12]

Gower the poet was not of the Gowers (or Gores) of Stittenham.

A third mistake you copy from Bale, that Gower's garland of ivy and roses was for his knighthood, and his poetry.

For 1. it wasn't a garland;
[* leaf 15, back]

2. it had no ivy in it;

3. it was simply a Chaplet of Roses, such as knights of old wore.

This Chaplet of Roses was worn also by Dukes, Earls, &c. who were knights,

[* leaf 15]
the Dukes having roses on the top of the chaplet, the knights only on the band, of Cootes, for this cause, or anye other, (that I colde yet euer lerne,) shall yo<sup>n</sup> not fynde in this famelye of Gower: and therefore seuerall howses from the fyrste originall. Then the marginall note goethe further oute of Bale, that Gower had "one his hedde a garlande of Ivey and rooses, the one the ornamente of a knyghte, the other of a poet."<sup>1</sup> But Bale ys mystaken; for yt ys not a Garlande, vnlest yo<sup>n</sup> with metaphoricallie call euerye cyrcle of the hedde a 'garlande, as Crownes are sometymes called garlandes, from whence they had their originall. nether ys yt of Ivey, as anye manne whiche seethe yt may well iudge, and therefore not there sett for anye suche intende as one ensigne of his poetrye, But ys symple a chaplett of Roses, Suche as the knyghtes in olde tyme vsed, ether of golde, or other embroderye made after the fasshone of Rooses, one of the peculier ornamentes of a knyghte, as well as his collar of SSS, his guilte swoorde, and spurres. Whiche chaplett or cyrcle of Rooses was as well attributed to knyghtes, the lowest degree of honor, as to the hygher degrees of Duke, Erle, &c. beinge knyghtes; for so I haue seene Johne of Gaunte, pictured in his chaplette of Rooses; and kinge Edward the thirde gaue his chaplett to Eustace Rybamonte; only the difference was, that as they were of lower degree, so had the[y] fewer Rooses placed one their Chaplett or cyrcle of golde, one 'ornament deduced frome the Dukes crowne whiche had thee rooses vppon the toppe of the cyrcle, when the knyghte had them only vppon the cyrcle or garlande yt-selfe. of whiche dukes crowne to be adorned with litle Rooses, Mathewe Paris, speakinge of the creatinge of Johne erle Mortone, duke of Normandy, in the yere of Christe 1199, dothe saye "Interim comes Johannes Rothomagus veniens in octavis pasche, gladio ducatus Normaniæ cinctus est, in matrice ecclesia, per ministerium Walteri Rothomagensis Archiepiscopi, vbi Archiepiscopus memoratus ante maius altare in capite eius posuit Circulum aureum, habentem, in summitate per gyrum rosulas aureas artificialiter fabricatas," whiche chaplett of Rooses came in the ende to be a bande aboute oure cappes, sette with golde Buttons, as may be supposed.

In the same title yo<sup>e</sup> saye, "yt semethe that these lerned menne were of the Inner Temple, for that, manye yeres since, master Buckley did see 'a recorde in the same howse, where Geffrye Chaucer was fined two shillings for beatinge a Franciscane Fryer in fletestreate.<sup>1</sup>" This is a harde collect[i]one, to prove Gower of the Inner Temple, although he studied the lawe. for thus yo<sup>e</sup> frame your argumente. 'Mr Buckley founde a recorde in the Temple that Chaucer was fyned for beatinge the fryer, Ergo Gower and Chaucer were of the Temple.' But for myne owne parte, yf I wolde stande vppon termes for matter of Antiquytye, and ransacke the originall of the lawiers fyrst settlinge in the Temple, I dobte whether Chaucer were of the temple or noe, vnlest yt were towards his latter tyme, for he was one olde manne,—as apperethe by Gower in Confessione amantis—in the xvi yere of R. 2 :<sup>2</sup> when Gower wroote that Booke. And yt is most certeyne to be gathered by cyrcumstances of Rercores, that the lawyers were not in the temple vntill towards the latter parte of the

as you'll see in the knighting of Earl Morton of Normandy.

7. You've the odd argument, that because the Temple Records are said to have noted that
[* leaf 13, back]

Chaucer beat a Franciscan Friar, therefore Gower belonged to the Temple, as well as Chaucer.

Now I doubt whether Chaucer ever belonged to the Temple. He was old in 1392-3, and the lawyers were not in the Temple till the latter part of Edward III's reign. (Died 21 June 1377.)

<sup>1</sup> It seemeth that both these learned men [Chaucer and Gower] were of the inner Temple : for, not many yeres since, Master Buckley did see a Record in the same house, where Geoffrey Chaucer was fined two shillings for beating a Franciscane fryer in Fleetstrete."—Speght, sign. b. iii.

[* leaf 14] reygne of kinge Edwarde the thirde; at whiche tyme Chaucer was then a grave man, holden in greate credyt, employed in embassye<sup>1</sup>; so that me thinkethe he sholde not be of that howse; and yet, yf he then were,
 I sholde iudge yt strange that he sholde violate the rules of peace and gravityte yn those yeares<sup>2</sup>. But I witt passe ouer all those matters scito pede, and leave euerye manne to his owne iudgemente therein for this tyme.

8. You do not know the name of Chaucer's wife [Philippa]; nor do I.

For though some think it was Elizabeth, a waiting-woman to Queen Philippa,

who had a grant of a yearly stipend,
 [* leaf 14, back]

yet I believe this was Chaucer's sister or kinswoman, who became a nun

 at St Helen's, London.

In the title of Chawcers mariage, yo<sup>n</sup> saye yo<sup>n</sup> cannotte fynde<sup>3</sup> the name of the Gentlewomanne whome he married. Trulye, yf I did followe the conceyte of others, I sholde suppose her name was Elizabeth, a waytinge womanne of Quene philippe, wyfe to Edwarde the thirde, & daughter to William erle of Henalte. but I fauor not their oppynyone. for, althoughe I fynde a recorde of the pellis exitus, in the tyme of Edwarde the thirde, of a yerely stypende to Elizabeth Chawcer, 'Domicelle regine Philippe,' whiche Domicella dothe signyfy one of her weytinge gentlewomen: Yet I can-nott for this tyme thinke this was his wyfe, but rather his sister or kinswomanne, who, after the deathe of her mystresse Quene philippe, did forsake the worlde and became a nonne at Seinte Heleins in london, ac-cordinge as yo<sup>n</sup> haue touched one of that professione in primo of kinge Richarde the seconde.

<sup>1</sup> Chaucer's embassy to Genoa and Florence was from 1 Dec. 1372 to 23 May 1373; that to Paris and Montreuil from 17 Feb. to 25 March 1377; that to Flanders (or France) from 30 April to 26 June 1377; that to Milan and Lombardy from 28 May to 19 Sept. 1378.

<sup>3</sup> "This gentlewoman, whome hee married (whose name we can not finde)"—Speght, sign. b. iii, back. But it is given as Philippa in the Duke of Lancaster's warrant of 13 June 1374, giving Chaucer £10 a year for life, for the good service of him and his wife Philippa; and in the Issue Rolls, Easter 1381 and 1387, "Philippæ Chaucer . . per manus predicti Galfridi, mariti sui," "Philippe Chaucer . . per manus dicti Galfridi" (Nicolas; C.'s Works, ed. R. Morris, i. 19, 109).

In the Latyne stemme of Chawcer yo<sup>n</sup> saye, speakinge of Katherine Swyneforde, "Que postea nupta Johanni Gandauensi, tertii Edwardi Regis filio, Lancastrie duci, illi procreavit filios tres & vnicam filiam."<sup>1</sup> Wherbye we may inferre that Iohne of Gaunte had these childrene by her after the mariage: Whiche is not soo; for he had all his children by her longe before that mariage, so that they, beinge all illegitimate, were enforced afterwarde vppon that maryage to be legitimated by the poepe, & also by acte of Parliamente,<sup>2</sup> aboute the two & twentythe of kinge Richarde the seconde; 'so that yo<sup>n</sup> cannott saye, 'que postea nupta procreavit Lancastrie duci tres filios,' &c.

In the title of Chawcers children and their advancemente, in a marginall noote yo<sup>n</sup> vouche master Campdene, that Bartholmewe Burgershe, knyghte of the Garter, was he from whome the Burgershes, whose daughter & heyre was maryed to Thomas Chawcer,<sup>3</sup> did descende. But that is also one errour. for this Bartholmewe was of a collaterall lyne to that Sir Iohne Burgershe, the father of Mawde, wyfe to Thomas Chawcer; and therefore colde not that Sir Iohne Burgershe be descended of this Barthelmewe Burgershe, though hee were of that howse. Then in that title, yo<sup>n</sup> vouche oute of m<sup>r</sup>. Campdene, that Serlo de Burgo, brother to Eustachius de Vescye, builde Knaresborowe Castle. but that ys not righte: for this Serlo, beinge called 'Serlo de Burgo siue de Pembroke', was brother to Iohne, father to Eustace Vescye as haue the recordes of the towre, and so vncle, and not brother, to Eustace. 'for one other marginall noote in that tittle,

9. You seem to say that Katherine Swynford's children by John of Gaunt were born after marriage.

But her children were born long before marriage, and on it legitimated.

[* leaf 15]

10. You say that Thomas Chawcer's wife was descended from Bartholmew Burgershe.

This is an error.

11. You also say that Serlo de Burgo was brother to Eustace de Vescy.

This is not right.

He was uncle.

<sup>3</sup> There is no evidence that he was in any way related to Chawcer. The strong presumption is that he was not. See my letter in Notes & Queries, 4th Ser. ix. 381; 437, col. 2; 494.

Nor do I think that Michael de la Poole was a merchant, though Walsingham makes him so.

(The clergy were offended that the temporal men were found as wise as themselves.)

[* Leaf 17, back] Also, Michael de la Poole might have been a merchant by Attorney; and that is no true merchant.

14. You say, Alice, the wife of Richard Neville, was daughter of Thomas Chancer's daughter Alice (once Duchess of Suffolk).

But no: she was daughter of Thomas Montacute,

father to this michael, were of lyke estate, and a knyghte. nether canne I fynde (nor ys yt lyke) that michael de la poole was a marchante, (havyng two such welthy marchantes to his ancestors before hym,) notwithstandinge that Walsingham (moore offended then reasone, as all the Clergye were, against temporall menne who were nowe become chief officers of the Realme; and the spyrituall menne, till then possessinge those offices, displaced, whiche bredd greate Sorsseye in the <sup>1</sup>Churche menne againste them;) sayethe that michael de la poole "fuerit à pueritia magis mercimoniis (vtpote Mercator Mercatoris filius) quam militia occupatus." And yet yt 'may bee that he mighte have some factors in merchandise, and deale by his attorneyes, as manye noble menne and great persons have donne, whereuppone Walsingham (whiche wroote longe after) mighte seme to call hym 'marchante' by reasone of othere<sup>2</sup> mens dealinges for hym, althoughe in troothe he was neuer merchant in respecte of his owne persone (for whiche they are properly called marchantes,) as may be supposed. ffyftlye, in the same title yo<sup>u</sup> saye, that Alice, wyfe of Williame de la poole duke of Suffolke, "had a daughter by her seconde husbände, thomas montague, erle of Sarisberye,—named after her mother, Alice,—maryed to Richarde Neville, sonne to Raphe Neuill, erle of Westmerlande, by whome he had issue, Richarde, Iohne, and George.<sup>3</sup> But this is nothings so. for this Alice, the wyfe of Richarde Neuille, (erle of Sarisbery in the righte of the same Alice,) was daughter of Thomas Monntacute, erle of Salisburie, and of Alice his wyfe, daughter of Thomas Hollande erle of Kente, and not of Alice, daughter to Thomas Chawcer, and widowe to Williame de la Poole duke of Suffolke.

In the latter end of the title of Chawcers deathe yo<sup>n</sup> saye, that printinge was brought "oute of Germanye in the yere 1471, being the 37. H. 6., into Englande, beinge fyrst founde at Magunce by one Iohne Cuthemburgus, and broughte to Roome by Conradus, one Almayne."<sup>1</sup> But the yere of Christe 1471 was not the 37. H. 6. but the eleuenthe of kinge Edward the fourthe; and [printinge,] as some have yt, was not fyrste founde at Magonce or mentz, but at Strasborowe, and perfected at Magonce. David Chytreus in his historye sayethe, yt was fyrst founde in anno 1440, and broughte to Rome by Henricus Han,<sup>2</sup> a germane, in the yere 1470; whereof Antonius Campanus framed this excellent epigrame:

Anser Tarpeii custos Jovis, vnde quod alis
Constreperis, Gallus recidit, vltor adest
Vtricus Gallus, ne quem poscantur in vsu Edocuit pennis, nil opus esse tuis.

15. You say printing was brought into England in 37 Hen. 6, 1471; and was invented at Ments.

But 1471 A.D. was 11 Edw. IV.

And Printing, some say, was invented at Strasburg in 1440.

[leaf 18, back]

But others do suppose that yt was invented at Argenterote, as dothe mathewe Parker, in the lyfe of Thomas Burchier Archbyshoppe of Canterburie: whiche, for the incertentye thereof, I leave at this tyme to farther examinatione, not havinge nowe presente leysure therefore.

Others say at Argenterote.

[III. Speght's mistakes as to the 'Roman de la Rose,' and Chaucer's 'Dreme' or 'Dethe of Blaunche the Duchesse.']

In the title of the argumente to euerye tale and booke yo write, that the Romante of the Roose was made in frenche by Iohne Clopinell, alias Iohne Moone,<sup>3</sup> when in truthe the booke was not made by hym alone; for yt was begonne by Guilliame de Loris, and fynished

Againste whiche Booke, Gersone compiled one other, intituled 'Le reprobatione de la Romante del Roose,' as affirmethe the sayed molinett, in the 107 chapter of the sayed moralizatione, where he excusethe Clopinell, and reprouethe Gersone, for that Booke, because Gerson soughte no further meanyng then what was conteyned in the outewarde letter, This Clopinell begynnynge the Romante of the Roose, in these verses of Chaucer:

Secondly, vnder that title yo<sup>u</sup> saye, the woorke, before this last editione of Chaucer termed 'the Dreame of Chaucer,' is mystermied,<sup>2</sup> and that yt is 'the Booke of the Duches, or the Deathe of Blanche.'<sup>3</sup> wherein yo<sup>u</sup> bee greatlye mysledde, in my conceyte; for yt cannott bee 'the booke of the Dutches, or of the deathe of Blanche,' because Iohne of Gaunte 'was then but fowre and twentye yere olde when the same was made, as apperethe by that tetryse, in these verses:

<sup>2</sup> William Thynne, who first printed 'The Dethe of Blaunche,' calld it 'The dreame of Chaucer,' because Chaucer tells the poem as a dream. The booksellers' reprint of ab. 1550 gives it the same title, and so does Stowe in his edition of 1561 in the body of the book; but in his 'Table of all the names of the workes contei-teigned in this volume,' he calls the poem 'The dreame of Chaucer, otherwise called the boke of the Duches, or Seis and Alcione.'

There is a MS. of this Chronicle in Lansd. 200.

<sup>5</sup> Francis Thynne's argument is of course a strong one, if the existing MSS.—of which we have only two left—and Wm Thynne's MS. really have the age which Chaucer wrote. But the rhythm shows that 'twenty fowre' was not written at length, as the beat wants 'foure and twenty.' 'xxviiiij,' as Mr Brook suggests, or 'xxix,' was no doubt written by Chaucer; this was copied 'xxiiiij,' or 'xxiv,' printed 'twenty fowre,' and hence the confusion arose. 'Nine and twenty' must be the true reading. See my Trial-Forewords, p. 37.

[* Leaf 20, back]

she need not have been the Duchess Blanche.

for there's a family nam'd White, and one Miss White might have been fair.

Or this fair might have been one of John of Gaunt's paramours.

So this poem could not be meant for the Duchess.

Besides, the poem you call the 'Dreme' is Chaucer's Temple of Glass.

I wiþ answer, that there is no necessaryte that yt muste be of Blanche the duchesse, because he sayethe her name was 'white,' since there ys a famelye of that denominatione; and some female of that lyne mighte be both 'white' in name, and 'fayre and white'<sup>2</sup> in personne; and so 'had not her name wronge,' or in veyne, as Chaucer sayethe. or yt mighte be somme other louer of his called 'Blanche,' since he had manye paramou's in his youthe, and was not verye contynente in his age. Wherefore, to conclude, yt apperethe as before, that yt colde not be mente of the Duchesse Blanche his wyfe, whiche dyed longe after that compleinte. for whiche cause, that 'Dreame of Chaucer,' in mye opynyone, may well (naye, rather of righte sholde,) contynewe his former title of 'thee Dreame of Chaucer.' for that whiche yo<sup>u</sup> wiþ haue 'the Dreame of Chaucer,' is his 'Temple of Glasse,' as I haue seene<sup>3</sup> the title thereof noted, and the thinge yt selfe confirmethe.

<sup>3</sup> Francis Thynne had no doubt seen the copy belonging to Sir John Thynne, still preserved at Longleat, and now the only MS. known. It is there entitled 'Chaucer's Temple of Glasse.' The handwriting is of Edward the Sixth's time (1547-53).—H. Bradshaw. (Mr Bradshaw long ago pointed out that this Dreme or Isle of Ladies (beginning 'When Flora, the queene of plessaunce') was spurious.)

[IV. Speght's Mistakes in explaining some of Chaucer's Words.]

'In the expositione of<sup>1</sup> the olde wordes, as yo<sup>n</sup> shewe greate diligence and knowledge, so yet in my opynione, vnleste a manne be a good saxoniste, frenche, and Italyane linguïste, (from whence Chaucer hathe borrowed manye woordes,) he cannott weH expounde the same to oure nowe vnderstandinge, and therefore (thoughe I wiH not presume of mucche knowledge in these tounge)s yt semethe yet to mee, that in your expositione soome woordes are not so fullye and rightlye explaned as they myghte bee, althoughe peradventure yo<sup>n</sup> haue framed them to make sence. Wherefore I haue collected these fewe (from many others lefte for moore leysure) whiche seme to mee not to be fully explaned in their proper nature, thoughe peradventure yo<sup>n</sup> wiH seme to excuse them by a metaphoricall gloose.

And because yo<sup>u</sup> shall not thinke this anye fixiōne of myne owne, I wil warrante the same with Williame of Malmesberye in the fourthe booke 'De Regibus,' who hathe these woordes: "Constantinopolis primum Bizantium dicta, formam antiqui vocabuli preferunt imperatorii nummi Bizantium dicta;" where one other coppye, for "nummi Bizantium" hath "Bizantini nummi;" and the frenche hathe yt 'besante' or 'Bizantine,' makinge yt one olde coyne of france, (when he sholde haue sayed one olde coyne in France, and not of France,) of the valewe of a duckette.

Ferment is the soul of the Philosopher's Stone.

Then, after the conquest, mathew Paris speakethe thereof aboute ornamentes to be sente to the Poope. but because I haue not my mathewe Paris here, I will vouche one whose name hathe muche affinytye with hym, and that is, Mathewe Parker, Archbisschoppe of Canterburye, who, in the Lyfe of Bonifacius, Archbishoppe of that see, hathe these woordes. 7. Citrinatione is a term of Alchemy,

and means perfect digestion, or that the Philosopher's stone, when citron, is almost perfect.

[* leaf 27]

8. Forage is not 'meat,' or 'fodder,'

but means, in the Reeve's Prologue,

numerus in vna Ciuitate, scilicet Colonia, ad plus quam mille asseritur ascendisse, etc. After whiche, speakinge yn the yere of Christe 1250 of the encrease of religious orders, he sayeth, "Item in Alemania et Francia mulieres, quas 'Bigrinas' nominant," &c.

'Citrinatione' yo<sup>n</sup> do not expounde,<sup>1</sup> beinge a terme of Alchymye. Whiche Citrinatione is bothe a coolor and parte of the philosophers stooone. for, as hathe 'Tractatus Avicennæ' (yf yt be his, and not liber suppositi[t]us, as manye of the Alchymicall woorkes are foysted in vnder the names of the best lerned authors and philosophers, as Plato, Aristotle, Avicen, and suche others,) in parte of the 7 chapter: "Citrinatio est, quæ fit inter album et rubrum; et non dicitur Coolor perfectus," whiche Citrinatione, as sayethe Arnoldus de nova villa, li. i. ca. 5. "nihil aliud est quam completa digestio." for the worke of the philosophers stooone, followinge the worke of nature, hathe lyke coolor in the same degree. for as the vrine of manne, being whit-ishe, shewethe imperfecte digestion: But when he hathe well rested, and slepte after the same, and the digestion perfected: the vrine becomethe Citrine, or of a depe yellowe coolor: So ys yt in Alchymye. whiche made Arnolde call this 'Citrinatione,' perfecte digestion, 'or the coolor prouinge the philosophers stooone broughte almoste to the heigh[t]e of his perfectione.

'Forage,' in one place yo<sup>n</sup> expounde 'meate,' and in other place 'fodder.'<sup>2</sup> boothe whiche properly cannot stande in this place of chaucer in the reues prologue, where he sayethe, "my fodder is forage." for yf forrage be fodder, then is the sence of that verse,

 "my fodder is fodder." But fodder, beinge a generall name for meate gyven to Cattle in winter, and of affynytie withe foode applied to menne and beastes, dothe onlye signifye 'meate.' And so the sence is,
 "my meate ys forage," that is, 'my meate is suche harde and olde prouisione as ys made for horses and Cattle in winter;' for so doth this worde 'forragium' in latyne signifye. and so dothe Chaucer meane. for the worde next before dothe well shewe yt, when the Reve sayethe,

I ame olde, me liste not play for age,
 Grasse tyme is donne, my fodder is forrage.

Yet metaphorically yt may be taken for other 'then drye horse meate, althoughe improperlye; as Chaucer hathe, in Sir Topas Ryme, where he makethe yt grasse for his horse, and vsethe the worde rather to make vpp the Ryme then to shewe the true nature thereof; sayinge,

That downe he layed hym in that place, to make his steede some solace,
 and gyue hym good forage.

'Heroner' yo<sup>n</sup> expounde 'a certeyne kynde of Hawke,'<sup>1</sup> whiche is true; for a Goshawke,<sup>2</sup> sparrowe hawke, Tasseil, &c. be kyndes of Hawkes. But this 'heroner,' is an especiaill hawke (of anye of the kyndes of longe winged hawkes) of moore accompte then other hawkes are, because the flighte of the Herone ys moore daungerous then of other fowles, insomuche, that when she fyndethe her selfe in danger, she will lye in the ayre vppon her backe, and turne vpp her bellye to-wardes the hawke, and so defile her enymye with her excrementes, that eyther she will blinde the hawke, or ells with her bytt 'or talentes pierce the hawkes brest, yf she offer to cease vppon her.

such old and hard provision as is made for horses and cattle in winter,

[* leaf 27, back
(MS. repeats 'for other')] or metaphorically, or to help out the ryme,
as in Sir Topas,
it may mean grass.

9. The Heroner

is a long-winged hawk for hunting the heron, which fights

when attackt.

 but in ed. 1602 'a special long winged hawke.'

10. The Hip is the berry of the Sweet Briar or Eglantine.

The 'Hyppē' is not simplye 'the redde berye one the Bryer,' vnlest yo<sup>n</sup> adde this epithetone, and saye, 'the redde Berrye one the swete Bryer,' (which is the Eggletyne,) to distinguyshe yt from the comone Bryer or Bramble, beringe the blacke Berye; for that name 'Bryer' ys comone to them boothe, when the 'Hyppē' is proper but to one; nether maye yt helpe yo<sup>n</sup> that yo<sup>n</sup> saye 'the redd Berye,' to distinguyshe yt from the Blacke, for the blackeberye ys also redde for a tyme, and then may be called 'the redde Berye of the Bryer' for that tyme.

11. Nowell means not only Christmas, but Advent, and New Year's tide too.

'Nowell,' yo<sup>n</sup> expounde 'Christmesse,'<sup>1</sup> whiche ys that feaste, and moore; for yt is that tyme whiche is properlye called the Aduente, together with Christmesse and Newe yeres tyde; wherefore the true etymologie of that worde ys not Christmesse, or the twelue dayes, but yt is 'godd with vs,' 'or, 'oure Godde,' expressinge to vs the comynge of Christe in the fleshe; whiche peraduenture after a sorte, by the figure Senecdoche, yo<sup>n</sup> may seeme to excuse, placinge ther Christemas, a parte of this tyme of Nowell, for all the tyme that Nowell conteynethe. for in the same worde is conteyned, sometyme xx, but for the most parte thirte dayes, before Christmesse, aswell as the Christmesse yt selfe, that woorde beinge deduced, as hathe Willelmus Postellus in 'Alphabeto 12 Linguarum,' from the hebrue worde Noell; for thus he writethe: "בְּנוֹל noel, sonat deus noster, siue Deus nobis aduenit. Solitaque est hec vox cantari a plebe ante Christi natalitia viginti aut triginta dies quodam desiderio."

12. Porpherye is not only 'marble,'

marble ys genus, but purpherye is species; for as there is white and grey marblé, so ys there redde marbeñ, whiche is this porpherye, a stone of reddishe purple coolor, distincte or enter'laced with white veynes, as yo<sup>n</sup> may see in the great pillars entringe into the royalle exchange or burse in Cornehiñ.

but a peculiar

'Sendale,' yo<sup>n</sup> expounde 'a thynne stuffe lyke Cypres.'<sup>1</sup> but yt was a thynne stuffe lyke sarcenette, and of a rawe kynde of sylke or sarcenett, but courser and narrower, then the Sarcenett nowe ys, as my selfe canne remember.

13. Sendale is thin silk stuff like sarcenet.

'Trepegett,'<sup>2</sup> yo<sup>n</sup> expounde 'a Ramme to batter walles.' But the trepegete was the same that<sup>3</sup> the mogonell; for Chaucer calleth yt a trepagett or magoneñ; wherefore the trepegett and magoneñ beinge all one, and the magoneñ one instrumente to flynge or cast stones (as youre selfe expounde yt) into a towne, or againste a towne walles, (one engine not muche vnlyke to the Catapulte, an instrumente to cast forthe dartes, stones, or arrowes,) the trepeget must nedes also be one instrumente to cast stones or suche lyke against a wall or into a towne, and not a Ramme to batter wal[les]; since the Ramme was no engyne to flinge anye thinge, but by mens handes to be broughte and pushed againste the walles; a thinge farr different in forme from the magonell or catapulte, as apperethe by Vigeſius and Robertus Valturius 'de re militari.'

14. The trepegett is not a batteringram,

but an engine to cast stones,

[* leaf 29, back]

like a catapult.

'Wiuer,'<sup>4</sup> yo<sup>n</sup> expounde not: wherefor I will tell yo<sup>n</sup>, a Wyuer is a kynde of serpent of good Bulke, not vnylyke vnto a dragon, of whose kinde he is, a thinge well knowen vnto the Heroldes, vsinge the same for armes, and crestes, & supporters, of manye gentle and

16. Autenticke means, not a thing of antiquity, but of authority.

17. Abandone is not liberty; [leaf 30]

though Hollyband says it is.

'Autenticke,' yo<sup>a</sup> expounde to be 'antiquyte.'<sup>1</sup> But howe yo<sup>a</sup> may seme to force and racke the worde to Chaucers meaninge, I knowe not; but sure I ame, the proper significatione of 'autenticke' is, 'a thinge of auctorytye or credit allowed by menne of auctorytye, or the originall or fyrste archetypum of any thinge'; whiche I muse that yo<sup>a</sup> did not remember.

'Abandone,'<sup>2</sup> yo<sup>a</sup> expounde 'libertye'; whiche in all 'Italiane, Frenshe, and Spanishe, signifyeth 'relinquere, to forsake and leave a thinge'; whiche me thinkethe yo<sup>a</sup> most hardely stretche to 'libertye,' vnlesst yo<sup>a</sup> will saye that, when one forsakethe a thinge, he leavethe yt at libertye; whiche ys but a streyned speche, although the frenche Hollybande, not vnderstandinge the true energye of our tongue, hath expounded yt 'libertye'; whiche may be some warrante vnto yo<sup>a</sup>.

fo: 1. pa: 2. For 'Campaneus' you wolde reade 'Capaneus,' wherunto I cannott yelde.<sup>2</sup> for althoughe Statius and other latine authors do call hym 'Capaneus'; yet all the writers of Englande in that age call him 'campaneus'; as Gower, 'in confessione amantis,' and Lidgat in 'the historye of Thebes' taken oute of Statius, and Chaucer hym selfe in many other places. so that yt semethe they made the pronuntiacione of 'Campaneus' to be the dialecte of our tonge for 'Capaneus.' Besides, chaucer is in this to be pardoned, in that, takinge his 'knyghtes tale' oute of the Thesayde of Bocas, written in Italiane (and of late translated into frenche,) dothe there, after the Italiane manner, call him 'campaneus'; for so the Italians pronounce woordes begynninge with 'Cap': with the interpositione of the lettere m, pronouncinge yt 'camp': for, that whiche the Latins call 'capitolium,' the Italians call 'campidoglio'; and suche lyke. But (salua patientia vestra, and reservinge to myselfe better iudgments hereafter, yf I nowe mystake yt,) I wolde, for the printed 'hereos' of Chaucer, read 'heroes': whiche two woordes onlye differ in misplacinge of the letters; a comone thinge for the printer to do, and the corrector to ouerpasse. for Arcyte, in this furye of his love, did not shewe those courses of gouer[n]mente, whiche the Heroes, or valiante persons, in tymes paste vsed; for thoughte they loued, yet that passionie did not generallye so farre ouerrule them (althoughe yt mighte in some one particuler personne) as that they lefte to 'contynewe the valor, and heroicke actions, whiche they

"Whereas some copies haue Hereos, some Hernes, and some such like counterfeit word, whereof can be giuen no reason, I haue set downe Eros, i. Cupid, as most agreeing in my opinion with the matter; which I gather thus: Lucian in his second Dialogue bringeth in Cupid teaching Iupiter how to become amiable; & in him, how louers may be made acceptable to their ladies; not by weeping, watching, & fasting, nor by furious melancholike fits, but by comely behaiour. The words in the Greeke are thus much in Latine: Si coles amabilis esse, neque concutias Aegida, neque fulmen geras; sed suauissimum teipsum exhibe, & vestem sumo purpuream, crepidas subliga auratas: ad tibiam & et Timpana composito gressu incede, & videbis quod plures te sequentur, quam Bacchum Manades. So that the louers of Eros, that is, Cupids seruants, doe cary themselues comely in all their passions, & their maladies are such as shew no open distemperature of body or minde: which mediocritie this Aroite was farre from keeping. And wheras some [t. i. F. Thynne, &c.] will haue vs read Heroes, i noble men; I cannot dislike their opinion, for it may fitly stand with the sense of the place."—Speght, ed. 1602, sign. acornes, whose leaves beinge somewhat grene one the one syde, and of one ouer russett and darkyshe Coolor on the other syde, were not mete for this garlande of Emelye, whiche sholde be freshe and Grene one everye parte,—as was her yonge and grene yeres, lyke to the goddesse to whom she sacryfyced,—and therfore a garlande of Grene oke vnseriall, not beinge of oke serriall; for yf yt had byn oke serriall, yt wolde haue shewed duskyshe, and as yt were of dedishe leaves, and not freshe and orient, as chaucer wolde haue her garlande. And this for your e[x]positione of 'vnseriall,' in some parte: for I wolde suppose that this worde 'vnseriall' dothe not vnaptly signyfye perfectione of Coolor, so that she havinge a Garlande of Grene oke vnseriall, dothe signyfye the oke to be grene and vnseriall, that is, (as some do expounde this worde vnseriall,) vnsered, vnseried, vnwithered, of freshe coolor, lyke unto the oke Quercus, whiche hathe no sered nor withered cooloor in 'his leafes. And yt was of necessitye that Emely (sacryfysinge to Diana) must haue a garlande of the Grene oke Quercus, because that they whiche sacryfyced vnto Diana, otherwise called Heccate, (which name is attribute to Diana, as natalis Comes affirmethe with statius in his Acheleidos, in his first Booke, sayinge,

Sic vbi virgineis Heccate lassata pharetris, being Diana adorned with her bowe and arrowes, called also 'Triuia,' because Luna, Diana, and Heccate, were all one, whereof Virgill speaketh, Tergeminamque Hecaten, tria virginis ora Diana,) were adorned with a crowne of the grene oke Quercus, because that Heccate was wont to be crowned therewith, as hath Pierius Valerius in his 51 booke of Hieroglyphes, sayinge, "Heccate quoquè Quercu coronari solita est." for althoughe Quercus be consecrate to Iupiter, because he gave his oracles in the same 'in Sylva Dodonea,' and therefore called 'Iupiter Dodoneus'; Yet Antiquytie adorned and crowned Diana Heccate with the same 'crowne also. Wherefore I conclude, since she [Emelye] had a garlande of Grene oke, (as Chaucer of purpose addethe that woorde 'Greene' to explane 'vnseriaH,' whiche signyfieth vnsered, vn-parched, vnwithered in euery parte, not lyke to the oke serriaH, whose leafe one the one syde is duskyshe, as thoughe yt were somewhat withered,) that the same woorde 'vnseriaH' must stande vnamended, as well (as I sayed before) by youre owne correctione and the nature of the woorde; as for that Diana, called Heccate, was crowned with the oke Quercus, and not with the oke Cerrus. But yf yo<sup>u</sup> objecte to mee that, in this place, yt must be a garlande of oke CerriaH accordinge to the woordes of Chaucer in one other place, because that he, in 'the flower and the leafe' (newely printed by yo<sup>u</sup>)<sup>1</sup>, hathe these woordes;

I sie come first, all in their clokes white,
a companye that ware, for delighe, Chaplettes freshe of oke serriall
Newly spronge, and Trompettes they were all;

I denye that therefore in the Knightes Tale 'yt must be oke serriaH. for yt maye well bee, that such meane persons as trompettes might be crowned with so base one oke as the serriall ys, whiche I call base, in respecte of the oke Quercus (dedicate to the godd Iupiter) wher-withe Heccate was crowned, and whereof Garlandes were gyuen to the Romans for their nooble desartes in the warres, as apperethe in the QuernaH crowne gyuen to those whiche had saued a cytyzen. Wherefore Chaucer dothe rightly (and of purpose, with great iudgment, in my conceyte,) make a difference in the Chaplettes of the Trompettes, and the garlandes of

And therefore yt must bee "his vassalage forgotten"; as presently after Chaucer sayethe, 'better for a manne to dye when he is yonge, and his honor in price, then when he is olde, and the service of his youthe forgotten;' whiche I colde dilate and prove by manye examples; but I cannott stande longe vppon euerye pointe, as well for that I wolde not be tedious vnto yo", as for that leysure serueth me not thereunto.

reckoned from the end of March,

when the sign

22 days (April 22)
or 32.

[* leaf 44]
So the sign is right,

as farre as heauen and yerthe, in mystakinge Chaucers meanynge and his woordes, asweñ for the daye of the monthe, as for the signe. for where yo<sup>n</sup> suppose<sup>that</sup> Chaucere meanethe the two and twentithe daye of Marche, yo<sup>n</sup> mystake yt. for althoughe yt sholde be the 22 of the monthe, as the printed booke hathe; yet canne yt not be the 22 daye of Marche, but must of necessytye bee the two and twentythe of Aprille: and so the signe Taurus trulye named. But first I must saye, the number of the dayes are mysprinted, for where yt is twentye dayes and two, yt must be (and so are my written copyes) thirtye<sup>1</sup> dayes and two, whiche must be the seconde of Maye, as yo<sup>n</sup> shañ weñ see by the woordes of Chaucer; for whether yowe reckon thirtye two dayes, with the truthe, as hathe the written cotype, or xxij dayes, withe the printe: yet must yo<sup>n</sup> begynne to reckon them from after the laste of Marche.
for so dothe Chaucer, sayinge Marche was compleate,
in these woordes:

When the month in whiche the worlde began,
That hight Marche, when God first made man,
Was complete, and passed were also Since Marche byganne, &c.

Wherbye yo<sup>n</sup> see, that yo<sup>n</sup> must begynne to reckon the number of dayes from the tyme of marche complete; and then wolde the signe fall oute to be in Taurus. yf yo<sup>n</sup> holde yo<sup>n</sup> to the printe (for the 22 daye after marche, whiche is the 22 daye of Aprill, in whiche the sonne is aboute xi degrees in Taurus;) or to the written cotype of thirtye two dayes, (whiche is the seconde of maye, at what tyme the sonne ys also aboute some xxi degrees in Taurus;) the signe is not misreckoned or misnamed, as yo<sup>n</sup> suppose. nether canne these woordes, "since Marche beganne," helpe yo<sup>n</sup> to reckon them from the begynnyng of Marche, (as yo<sup>n</sup> seme to doo;) because they muste answer and be agreable to the former wordes of Chaucer, whiche sayethe marche was complete; and, for that we sholde not dobte thereof, he addethe also farther, "And passed were also since Marche beganne": Where the worde "beganne" ys mysprinted for "be gonne," that is, since "marche be gonne," this word 'begonne' being put for 'is gonne,' or 'gonne bye, or departed.' so that the genuynaff sence hereof is, 'When marche was complete, and also were passed, since marche is gonne, or gonne bye, or departed.' for, in many olde inglyshe woordes, this syllable (be) is sett before to make yt moore signyficante and of force; as, for 'moone' we saye 'bemone,' for 'sprinced,' 'besprinced'; for 'dewed,' 'bedewed,' &c., as in this case, for 'gonne' ys sett downe 'begonne.' But althoughe there be no mysnamynge of the signe; yet yt is true 'the degrees of the signes are mysrekoned, the error whereof grewe, because the degree of the signe, is made equaH with the degree of the sonne ascended above the Horizone, beinge at that tyme xli degrees in heichte from the Horizon. But to remedye aH this, and to correcte yt accordinge as Chaucer sett yt downe in myne and other written copies; and that yt may stande with aH mathematicaH proportiõne, whiche Chaucer knewe and obserued there, the printe must be corrected after those written copies (whiche I yet holde for sounde tiH I maye disprove them) havinge these woordes:

as you must reckon from the end of March.

'Beganne' is misprinted for 'begonne,' begun.

The force of the prefix be-.

But though the sign is right, [\ leaf 44, back*] the degrees of the sign are misreckoned, or miswritten, as my Chaucer MSS. show.

Fortye degrees and one, and moor, ywis, &c.

Thus, May 2 was the real day of which Chaucer wrote.

And that this sholde be mente xxxij dayes after Marche, and the seconde of Maye,<sup>1</sup> there be manye reasons, besides those that Chaucer namethe; whiche are, that the sonne was not farre from the middle of his ascentione, and in the signe of Taurus.

38. Another mistake:

ffurther, since I ame nowe in Chanteclers discourse,

<sup>1</sup> The correctness of Thynne's argument, and of his correction of the old readings of twenty in line 4 above to thirty; and of forty in l. 9, to twenty (which all the Six-Text MSS. have, and Mr Skeat (who follows him) in his edition (E. E. T. Soc. and Chaucer Soc.), p. lxi, lxii. Only they make Thynne's 'second

The fiery ordale was by going on hot shares and culters, not going through the fire.

The mother of Edward Confessor passed barefoot over nine burning shares.

I could make a long discourse on this, copies, (whiche I colde yet see,) and my fathers edytione, haue yt, "By that the manciple<sup>1</sup> had his tale ended." And because my father colde not see by anye prologues of thee other tales, (whiche for the most parte shewe the dependancye of one tale vppone one other,) where to place the plowmans tale, he putt yt after the persons tale,<sup>2</sup> whiche, by Chaucers owne woordes, was the laste tale; as apperethe by the persons prologue, where the hooste sayethe, that 'euerye manne had tolde his Tale before.' So that the plowmans tale must be sett in some other place before the manciple and persons tale, and not as yt ys in the last editione.

My father put it after the Parson's Tale.

[* leaf 51]

One other thinge ys, that yt wolde be good that Chaucers proper woorkes were distinguyshed from the adulterat, and suche as were not his, as the Testamente of Cressyde, The Letter of Cupide, and the ballade begynnyng "I haue a ladye, where so she bee," &c. whiche Chaucer never composed, as may suffycientlye be proued by the thinges them selues.<sup>3</sup>

2. Chaucer's own works should be distinguished from those adulterate, and not his.

The thirde matter ys, that in youre epistle dedicatorye to Sir Roberte Cecille, yo<sup>a</sup> saye, "This Booke,

3. There were three editions of Chaucer before

<sup>3</sup> Assuredly. And although Francis Thynne has been maintaining his father's edition against Speght, he shows his judgment here, in repudiating as Chaucer's, the 'Testament of Cresseide,' and Hoccleve's 'Letter of Cupyde,' which his father included in both his editions of 1532 and 1542. Stowe in 1561 first printed (Fol. ccxliiij) the spurious "A balade pleasaunt: I haue a Ladie where so she bee . . . . Explicit the discriuyng of a faire Ladie," with "O Mossie Quince," &c. &c. Stowe, however, was the first who printed the genuine "Chaucers woordes vnto his owne Scriuener," Fol. ccclv, back, in his edition of 1561.

the firste dedications to that kinge was by mye father, when diuerse of Chaucers woorkes had byn thrise<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Yes, surely it is. Speght meant Chaucer's 'Workes,' the collected edition, first made by William Thynne, which was the basis of his own edition. Wm. Thynne's dedication is reprinted in all the old editions, 1542 (1550), 1561, 1598, 1602, 1687, and 1721.

Early editions of Chaucer's Works.

<sup>2</sup> Only one edition of Chaucer's Works had been published before the date of Thynne's, 1532, and that was Pynson's in 1526, without a general title, but containing three parts, with separate signatures, and seemingly intended to sell separately; 1. the boke of Caunterbury tales; 2. the boke of Fame . . with dyuers other of his workes [Assemble of Foules, La belle Dame, Morall Prouerbes]; 3. the boke of Troylus and Cryseyde. But of separate works of Chaucer before 1532, the following had been published:

Early editions of his separate Poems.

Canterbury Tales. 1. Caxton, ab. 1477-8, from a poor MS.; 2. Caxton, ab. 1483, from a better MS.; 3. Pynson, ab. 1493; 4. Wynkyn de Worde, 1498; 5. Pynson, 1526.

Book of Fame. 1. Caxton, ab. 1483; 2. Pynson, 1526.

Troylus. 1. Caxton, ab. 1483; 2. Wynkyn de Worde, 1517; 3. Pynson, 1526.

Parlement of Foules.<sup>3</sup> 1. Caxton, ab. 1477-8; 2. Pynson, 1526; 3. Wynkyn de Worde, 1530.

Purse<sup>4</sup> (The compleynt of chawcer vnto his empty purse). 1. Caxton, ab. 1477-8.

Mars; Venus; Marriage (Bukton). 1. Julian Notary, 1499-1502.

Wm. Thynne's
editions.

After Thynne's first edition of the Works in 1532 (printed by Thomas Godfray), came his second (for John Reynes and Wyllyam Bonham) in 1542, to which he added the 'Plowman's Tale' after the Parson's.

The booksellers'
editions.

Then came a reprint for the booksellers (Wm. Bonham, R. Kele, T. Petit, Robert Teye) about 1550, which put the Plowman's Tale before the Parson's. This was followed by an edition in 1561 for the booksellers (Ihon Kyngston; Henry Bradsha, citizen and grocer of London; &c.), to which, when more than half printed, Stowe contributed some fresh pieces, the spurious Court of Love, Lydgate's Sege of Thebes, and other poems. Next came Speght's edition of 1598—on which Francis Thynne comments printed before; whereof two editions were by William Caxtone, the fyrste printer of Englande, 'who first [<sup>* leaf 51, back</sup>] printed Chaucers tales in one colume in a ragged letter, and after in one colume in a better order; and the thirde editione was printed, as farre as I remember, by winkine de word or Richarde Pynson, the seconde and thirde printers of Englande, as I take them. Whiche three edit[i]ons beinge verye imperfecte and corrupte, occasioned my father (for the love he oughte to Chawcers lernynge) to seeke the augmente and correccionne of Chawcers Woorkes, whiche he happely fynished; the same beinge, since that tyme, by often printinge muche corrupted. of this matter I sholde have spooken fyrst of all, because yt is the fyrste imperfectione of youre peynfull and comendable labors: yet because the proverbe ys "better late then never," I holde yt better to speake of yt here then not at all.

The first editions being very corrupt, my father (William Thynne) augmented and corrected them.

The fourthe thinge ys, that, in the catalogue of the auctors, yo<sup>n</sup> haue omytted manye auctors vouched by chawcer; and therefore dyd rightlye intitule yt, 'moost,' 'and not all, 'of the auctors cyted by geffrye Chawcer.'

4. You have omitted many authors voucht by Chaucer.

The fyfte matter ys in the Romante of the Roosse, fo. 144; that this worde 'Haroldes,' in this verse,

5. Your reading 'Haroltes,' in the Rosse, should be 'Harlottes.'

My kinge of Haroltes shalte thou bee, muste, by a mathesis or transpositione of the letters, be Harlotes, and not Haroltes, and the verse thus,

My kinge of Harlottes shalt thou bee.

And so ys yt in the editione of Chawcers Workes, printed in anno Domini 1542, accordinge to the frenche moralizatiōne of Molinet, fo. 149, where he is called "Roye des Ribauldez," whiche is, 'the kinge of Ribaldes, Molinet renders it 'Ribalds.'

in his Animadversions—which added the spurious 'Dreme,' and 'Flower & Leaf.' This was followed by Speght's 2nd edition in 1602, in which Francis Thynne helpt him, and to which were added Chaucer's 'A B C,' and the spurious Jack Upland. (Jack Upland had been before printed, with Chaucer's name on the title-page, about 1536-40 (London, J. Gough, no date, 8vo).—H. B.)

The king of Ribalde or Harlottes was an officer of great account in times past.

[* leaf 58, back]

Johannes Tyllius makes mention of a Rex Ribaldorum.

Also Vincentius Luparius makes him an honourable officer.

[* leaf 58. MS repeats 'Hospitii']

The Rex Ribaldorum was like our Marshall.

or Harlottes,' or euill or wicked persons; one officer of greate accompte in tymes paste, and yet vsed in the courte of France, but by one other name, in some parte beinge the office of the marshall of Englande. Al whiche, because yo<sup>a</sup> sha<sup>ll</sup> not thinke I dreame, (thoughe yt may seme strange to the ignorante to haue so greate one officer intituled 'of suche base persons as to be called 'kinge or gouernor of Ribauldes,') yo<sup>a</sup> sha<sup>ll</sup> here Iohannes Tyllius (in his seconde Booke de rebus gallicis, vnder the title de Prefecto pretorio Regis) confirme in these woordes: "In domesticis Regum constitutionibus, quos proximo capite nominauimus, fit mentio Regis Ribaldorum, officii domestici, quem semper oportet stare extra Portam pretorii," &c. and a litle after the explanyng of their office, he addethe: "sic autem appellantur, quia iam tum homines perdit Ribaldi, et Ribaldæ, mulieres puellæque perditæ, vocantur. Regis nomen superiori aut Iudici tribuitur. Quemadmodum magnus Cubicularius dicitur Rex Mercatorum," &c. Where he makethe this "Regem Ribaldorum" an honorable officer for manye causes, as Vincentius Luparius in his fyrste booke of the magistrates of france dothe also, vnder the title of "Rex Ribaldorum et prouostus Hospitii"; makinge the Iudex pretorianus, and this Rex Ribaldorum or Prouostus hospitii, "to seme all one, addinge further (after manye other honorable partes belonginge to this office) that "meretricibus aulicis hospitia assignare solebat." In whiche pointe, bothe for orderinge and correctinge the harlottes and euill persons followinge the courte of Englande, (whiche is the dutye of the marshall,) the frenche and wee agree. Wherefore, touchinge that parte, yo<sup>a</sup> sha<sup>ll</sup> here some what of the marshalls office sett downe and founde in the Customes whiche Thomas of Brothertonne (sonne to kinge Edwarde the fyrste) challenged to his office of marshalcy; where, emongest other thinges, are these woordes: "eorum (whiche was of the marshalls deputyes executinge that he shold ells do hym selfe) interest virgatam à meretricibus prohibere, et deliberare, et habet ex consuetudine mariscallus, ex quâlibet meretrice com[m]uni infra metas hospitii inventa—iiiiij. primo die. Que, si iterum inventa in Balliua sua Inveniatur, capiatur; et coram seneschallo inhibeantur ei hospitia Regis et Reginae et liberorum suorum, ne iterum ingrediatur," &c. And so afterwarde shewethe what shalbe donne to those wemen, yf they be founde agayne in the kinges courte, in suche sorte, that, as by Tillius, this Rex Ribaldorum his auctorytye was ouer 'homines perditos, mulieres puellasque perditas.' And that yt was, by Lupanus, to assigne to Ribaldes lodginge oute of the courte, (for so modestye willethe vs to vnderstande, because they sholde not offende and infecte the courte with their sighte and manners). So ys yt oure Marshalls office, to banyshe those harlottes the courte, and bestowe them in some other place, where they might be lesse annoyance. Wherefore I conclude with the frenche, and the former editione of Chaucer in the yere of Christe 1542,<sup>1</sup> that 'false semblance' was of righte to be made kinge of Harlottes, and not of Haroldes, who wolde mightely be offended to haue them holden of the conditions of 'false semblance'.<sup>2</sup>

Nowe here be nugæ in the Romante of the Roose:

It is the English Marshall's duty to keep harlots out of the court.

[* leaf 58, back]

Thus the Rex Ribaldorum

and our Marshall have like powers over harlots.

And I (a future Herald) am sure the Heralds would be mightily offended to be thought like False Semblance.

<sup>2</sup> Speght says in his glossary, or rather "The hard words of Chaucer explained," in his 1602 edition: "Harrolds, fol. 144, whereas in some bookes it is, 'my king of Harrolds shalt thou bee'; it is now corrected thus (my king of Harlots shalt thou bee.) For so it is in the French Moralization of Molinet 149, where hee is called Roi des Ribaulds, which is, the king of harlots, or wicked persons: an office of great account in times past, and yet vsed in the court of Fraunce. Of this office speaketh Iohannes Tillius in his second booke De rebus Gallicis, vnder the title De Præfecto pretorio Regis. But more hereof when time shall serue in M. F. Thins comment."

[* leaf 54]
6. Your reading
'Minoresse,'
in the Romaunt
of the Rose,

I cannotte (as 'the proverbe ys) take my hand from the table, (fyndinge so manye ouersyghtes in the twoe last
servinge Correctione, in these woordes of the Romante, fo. 116 of the last impressiōe :

Amide saw I hate stonde,
That for wrothe and yre & onde Semed to be a minoresse ;

should be 'Moueresse,' a mover or stirrer of debate,

Where this woorde 'Minoresse' sholde bee 'Mouer-esse,' signyfyinge 'a mover or styrrer to debate' ; for these be the frenche verses in the oldest written cōpye that euer was (to be founde in Englande, yf my con-iecture fayle me not,) by the age of the frenche woordes, whiche are these :

as Hate is calld in the French original.

Ens euz le milieu vi hayne, qui de courouz et datayn Sembla bien estre moueresse et courouse et tencerresse.

Beinge thus englyshed, as of righte they oughte, ac-cordinge to the frenche :

[* leaf 54, back]

Amyde, sawe I hate stonde, that of wrathe and yre & onde semed well to be mooueresse, one Angry wighte, & chyderesse.

Molinet, in his later version, also calls Hate a Ducteresse or leader.

Whiche woord 'mooveresse,' the learned molinet, in his moralizatiōe of that Romant, dothe turne into 'Ducteresse,' a leader or leadresse, so that they agree yt shoulde not be a 'minoresse,' but a 'mooveresse' or leadresse of and to anger and yre ; anye of whose woordes will as well, and rather better, fytt the sence and verse of Chaucer, and better answers the frenche originall and meanyng, than the incerted woorde
'Minoresse.'

Your 'Minoresse' is wrong.

./ . / . / . /

Mr Bradshaw's note on William Thynne's cancelld one-column edition of Chaucer's Works.

"I THINK the discovery of the long-missing Douce fragment has settled, for good and all, the confusion which Francis Thynne has fallen into about his father's editions. The supposed cancelled edition by William Thynne is a fiction. It is described as having one column on a side, and containing the Pilgrim's Tale. Tyrwhitt has shown conclusively that this Tale cannot have been written before 1536 ; and it is clear that the book, of which the Douce fragment is a part, must have contained Chaucer's name on the title-page, and was probably printed shortly before 1540 (when Bale was exiled), or Bale would not have included among Chaucer's Works De curia Veneris, lib. 1, 'In Maio cum virescerent,' &c. ; and Narrationes diversorum, tract. 1, 'In comitatu Lyncolniensi,' &c.

"Please remember that Bale went into exile in 1540, and that the first edition of his Scriptores, in which these appear, was printed at Wesel in 1548, on his return journey to England. This limits the date pretty well to 1536—1540. In that edition the two items occur in quite different parts of his list; but in the later and fuller edition of 1557 the items come thus, after enumerating the contents of Thynne's editions:—

De curia Veneris. Lib. 1. In Maio cum virescerent, &c.

Narrationes diversorum. Lib. 1. In comitatu Lyncolniensi fuit.

"If Mr Bright's fragment of the beginning of a later edition of the 'Court of Venus' is forthcoming (see Hazlitt's Handbook), you will probably find that it begins 'In Maio cum virescerent' . . . at least with the English equivalent of those words.<sup>1</sup> Bale must have seen the book, or he could not have given us the incipits. It must (I think) have borne Chaucer's name on the title-page, or Bale would not have put it among Chaucer's works. It must have been printed after 1536 (see Tyrwhitt) and before 1540 (when the exile took place); and so it may be possible that Thynne thought of including it in his 1542 edition, but was prevented through Bonner's or Gardiner's influence, not Wolsey's, which would put the matter into a wholly different period.

"Remember that W. Thynne died (very soon after Francis Thynne was born) in 1546, and that, the report reaching Francis Thynne through the recollections of Sir John Thynne of many years previous, it is not wonderful that there should be some confusion. Francis Thynne, too, tells us that he had never seen the one-column edition himself. The result is, that I am convinced that the one-column edition of Chaucer with the Pilgrim's Tale can only mean the 4to Court of Venus, &c., printed between 1536 and 1540, which Bale saw. Whether the Douce and Bright fragments are parts of the original edition, or of the reprint licensed to Hen. Sutton in 1557, or to a later edition still, I cannot say,<sup>2</sup> and it does not very much matter for our purpose; as Bale's evidence, coupled with Tyrwhitt's statement, narrows the limit of printing to 4 or 5 years."

In the moneth of May, when the new tender grene

Hath smothly couered the ground that was bare

as Mr Bradshaw expected. Mr W. Christie-Miller adds: "Chaucer's name I do not see upon the sheet, nor any trace of the name of the author." But see Chaucer's name in the Douce fragment of the book, p. 98, l. 740, below.

<sup>2</sup> The dropt lines and misprinted words show the Douce fragment to be part of some reprint.

- and euyn so dyd he fygure the sone, from whom all light and knowleg doth come.
 & now do I say that merlyn was a donine<sup>1</sup>,
 & no deuyll, as deuels determine ; 620
- for if he were a fend, & spok carnally, necessity compellis it a fals prophesy ;
 but thus dyd he take the sprit for heuyn king, which in the sowll shold haue his byding. 624
- & now doth the mon losse hir light, not resayuing the spryt aganst all right ;
 for that sowll is perished and ded where the spryt of god is not hed. 628
- & this is enen it, the vnnaturall thinge, out of his awn realm to baniche the kyng ;
 for christ is a kyng, god, & man,
 & also a pryst, as I lear cane. 632
- marke of his kyngdom, Iohn his diuinite, luke of his prysthod, mathu the humanite, dyd wryt ; & therfore take hed, for thes be the true prophycis in ded. 636
- it is marke that is callyd the lyon, that callis him-selue the way & veryte, which hath byn banyched from his kyngdom, wher-of babylon hath rygned howrdom,

 the lyon, the oxe, the man, & the faulcon.
 all thes in on be son of man, prophysed to ruell with his yron rod ;
 it is his very word which is god,
 in the ymage of christ, the last adam,
 both son of god & son of man,
 In whom we be bownd to work our meyt, of god marked, whan we it truly geyt, 652

The Lion is the mystical image of the Son of Man.	ministerid vnto vs by the lyon, the misticall ymage of the son of man, institute &amp; put in godis sted, ouer sowll and body to be our hed ; 656 not only our hed, but body &amp; all, the misticall man, &amp; so we may hym call ; in vs he hath his operation, as body in members by due proportion. 660 it is a wonder to se scripturs agre ; it passis man, it is so heuenly ; &amp; as moche mistery of the wordis rysyng as euer was of christis comyng." 664
Martin's and Bede's pro- phesies	"I am satisfied," quod I, "what merlyn ment." "bede," sayd he, "coms euyn to the same entent ; for all the dessyr and policy was to dryue it in-to hedis witty, 668 that the pope was antichrist &amp; the howr of babylon, and shold haue a fall &amp; destruction ; a ded man shold ryse, dukis to deme, then after that, all quiet &amp; queme. 672 the true minister, lying a mort longe, shold his awn autorte in-to his hond fonge."
"I'm not a Can- tabrigian, but an Oxonian ;	&amp; then he asked me and I were cantibrygion. I sayd no, I was an oxonian. 676 "there haue you herd," sayd he, "a prophesy, which is true without any lye : hoc magnum studium quod floret ad vada bonum ante finem seculi, &amp;c." 680
and I've sworn not to study at Stamford,	"I haue herd it," quod I, "full oft a-forne, and therto my-selue on a boke sworn, neuer with-in stampford to reyd logyk, diuinite, phylosophy, ner yet retoryk ; 684 for fer that oxford, which once was floryching, shold remoue to stampford for gud learnyng." at Iacobs well to the samaritane,— and leuis the slechy podell, full of frogis, to the old cenkanter phariziecall dogis,
where-in ther delyte is spytfull chyding ;
I beseke god send them a mending, to fulfyll the prophesy thorow the ford of stone,
in which pathe-way christ byld apon,
and leaue ther falshed, craft, and lyes, with that he stod, and toke his leaue, dissiring me my-selue not greue of his taryng, ner his long tale ;

and I besought god to kepe him out of bale,
saue I longyd, for yf euer we met agan, of the blak flet of norwey me to sayn.
he sayd he durst not it dis[c]lose,

PROLOGUE TO THE SPURIOUS PLOWMANS TALE.<sup>1</sup>

Thynne, ed. 1542, Fol. cxix.

T he Plowman plucked vp his plowe whan mydsommer mone was comen in, And sayd his beestes shuld eate ynowe, And lyge in the grasse up to the chynne : "They ben feble, both oxe and cowe, Of hem nys left but bone and skynne :" He shoke of share, and cultre of drowe, And honge his harneys on a pynne ;	The Plowman  turnd his beeste out to grasse,   8
¶ He took his tabarde and his staffe eke, And on his heed he set his hat, And sayde he wolde saynt Thomas seke. On pylgremage he goth forth platte ; In scrippe he bare both breed and lekes ; He was forswonke and all forswatte ; Men might have sene through both his chekes, And every wang toth, and where it sat.	   12 and said he'd go a Canterbury Pilgrimage.   16

<sup>1</sup> The Plowmans Tale was first printed separately by Thomas Godfray in folio, without date, but about 1532-35, probably under W. Thynne's care. Why it was omitted from the edition of 1532 does not appear, unless F. Thynne's report of his father having been compelled to omit the Pilgrims Tale from his first edition be a mistake, based on the fact that the Plowmans Tale was omitted from that edition for some such reason as is alleged, though printed separately at the same press. From this separate edition (of which the only remaining copy, formerly Askew's, Farmer's, and Heber's, is now at Britwell) it was reprinted in W. Thynne's second edition of Chaucer's works in 1542, and separately in octavo by W. Powell, about 1547-8.—H. Bradshaw.

Our Host saw	¶ Our hoste behelde wele all about, And sawe this man was sunne ybrent <sup>1</sup> ; He knewe well by his senged snoute, And by his clothes that were to-rent, He was a man wont to walke about,	20
he was not a monk from a cloister.	He nas nat alway in cloystre ypent; He coulde not religiouslyche loute, And therefore was he fully shent.	24
The Plowman said his work was	¶ Our host him axed, "what man art thou?" "Syr (quod he) I am an hyne, For I am wont to go to the plowe, And erne my meate yer that I dyne.	28
to sweat and earn his family food.	To swete and swynke, I make auowe, My wyfe and chyl dren therwith to fynde; And serue God, and I wyst howe; But we leude men bene full blynde;	32
But Clerks told him to sweat for them, for nothing in return.	¶ "For clerkes saye, we shullen be fayne For her lyuelod swet and swynke, And they ryght nought vs gyue agayne, Neyther to eate ne yet to drinke.	36
They could curse him.	The[y] mowe by lawè, as they sayne, <sup>2</sup> Us curse and dampne to hell[e] brynke; Thus they putten vs to payne with candles queynt <sup>3</sup> and belles clynke.	40
They took the corn, and left him the dust.	¶ "They make vs thrallès at her lust, And sayne <sup>2</sup> we mowe nat els be saued; They haue the corne, and we the dust; who speaketh <sup>4</sup> ther agayn, they say he raued."	44
	[four lines lost . . . . .]
The Plowman says he'll tell what he heard a Priest preach.	¶ "what, man!" quod our host, "canst thou preache? Come nere, and tell us some holy thyng." ¶ "Syr," quod he, "I herde ons <sup>5</sup> teache A prest in pulpyt a good prechyng." ¶ "Saye on," quod our host, "I the beseche." "Syr, I am redy at your byddyng, I praye you that noman me reproche whyle that I am my tale tellynge."	48 52

Thus endeth the prologue, and here foloweth the fyrst parte of the tale.

[Ashmole MS. 766, leaf 5, back.']

A discourse vppon the lord
Burghleyghe his creste.

[BY FRANCIS THYNNE.]

(1)

When burninge sonne with gleames of golden lighte had closd his spreyinge beames to take his reste, And darksome shade had brought in dolefull nighte with sable clooke vppon his slepinge breste,	4 with cristalle starres twinklinge in azurd skye, whiche slombringe dyes, to rest-full bedde I flye.	6

The tyme, I gesse, when Titans ruddy chaire did kepe his course in equall peysed weyte, with lowe descent enforced to repayre to Libras house, where Equinoctiall straye	10-with iuste proporcions cuttes the night & daye in nombred howres a-lyke for Phebus waye.	12

When dolefull mynde & wery lymmes were layed	[leaf 6] to quiet rest in softe and carefull bedde, my wretched state my moorninge brest dismayed, hopelesse of helpe, since craftye faythlesse hedde	16 had wouen the meane by powre for to subdue that honest harte whome enuye did pursue. <sup>2</sup>	18

(4)

Yet, with this hevy care, a wakefull slepe possest my shyueringe corps in depe dispayre;
 for weylinge sorrowe whiche in hart did crepe (by heavye vapoures thicker then the ayre,) 22 so noom'd my musinge wittes, & chokd the breyne, that slombringe must the yeldinge hart distreine. 24

(5)

In whiche vncerteine trothe not full awake, nor soundly luld aslepe as thoughtes had made,
 a trembringe<sup>1</sup> feare my sprytes did ouertake, and secretly my senses ganne to fade; 28 for, lo! the Dragon with quick-siluerd face approchd my sight with wise & plesant grace, 30

(6)

Cladde in a slender lawne to ease his peyne, when with quicke spede he skowrethe from the skye, with winged hedde & fete, with sugred veyne, with rodde devyne, & mase of maiestye, 34 whose heuenly voyce, after a little staye, this future good from goddes above did saye:— 36

(7)

[leaf 6, back] "What meanes thy forginge breyne, with pointe devise to turne her tender nett with dolefull thoughte?
 what nedes thou thus with care to be so nyce, since all thy toylinge peine shalt serue for noughte? 40 for one there lyves, yf thou canst finde his name, whose wyse forecaste may well advance thy fame. 42

(8)

"He is the lowest, and stalld in myddle place, and by the course of heauen rules next the beste;
 sett next the higheste, whose flaminge shyninge face,
 In Ceres shape dothe by Diana reste, 46 and Azurd skye supported to his prayse, whose lyvinge fame shall blome in following dayes. 48

(9)

"Him<sup>2</sup> serche thowe forthe, as worthiest in this lande, vnder that one whiche secret wonder bredes, for to enoye thy sweate of workinge hande;
 for frome his heuenly mynde alwayes procedes 52
 a curteous harte, for to accept in gree those frendly shewes whiche oft presented bee." 54

Whiche sayed, he fledde, and that his saved wande with gentle stroke lett fall vppon my hedde.
 when snorting Morpheus by my side did stande, and thwart myne eyes his sleping hand did spreadde, 58 whereby my harte posseste such quiet reste, as musinge thoughtes were banisht from my breste. 60

(11)

And sowndly thus enyoyinge silente ease, [leaf 7] till pointed tyme of nighte did ende his rase, and gladsome Elios, risinge from the seas with purple hue, did siluer starres displace, 64
 And forced me to for-sake that plesant bedde, whose late swete dreames my carefull senses fedde. 66

 a bodye firme, that rulethe all alone;
 the golden sonne into the middest is lepte,
 a perfecte gouernor, that nedeth none 142

 nedlesse of helpe dothe beare a rulinge swaye. 144

(25)

These thre distincte as goddes of sondrye mighte colde not bee hee whome Mercurye did Deame:
 he spake of one, and these are thre in sighte;
 thre is not one, and these yet well might seme 148 to have byn they, yf he had tolde of more;
 But he nee spake but of one manne before. 150

(26)

This colde not bee the meaninge of his mynde;
 suche hidden tales the goddes wold not power oute to mortall menne, whose wittes were not assinde (lyke Oedipus) to loose eche subtyll dobte; 154 yet well I knewe the goddes vsde this pretence, answer to gyve in speche of doble sence; 156

(27)

 to whome the Oracle in dobt-full speake, shew'd to Ecides, when he sholde fighte, suche doble dome as fatall lyfe did breake, 160 who, hoopinge victrye by their sacred reede, yet lost the felde when truthe the goddes decreed. 162

And thoughe I wanted happye Josephs arte, kinge Pharaos dreame so lyvely to ex[p]layne,
 and of the holy Daniell lackd the harte, thassiryans kingdome to devyde in tweyne, 166
 And was depriu'd of all the dreminge skill whiche did Sinesius and gregoras fill, 168

(29)

Yet pondringe moore what this darke speche might bee—for hevenly goddes, in veyne do neuer sende suche warninge sightes as then apperd to mee, for perfectnes workes no imperfecte ende,— 172
 I was resolu'd, by healpe of heuenly seate, this hidden dobte to open lighte to beate; 174

(30)

For mov'd with secrete fancye in my hedde, (thoughe reasons grownde ledde me not therunto,) the same suche depe impress[i]one in mee bredde, as from thee workinge breyne yt mighte not goo, 178
 but that Mercurius, in somme secret thoughte, by these three planettes had this purpose wroughte. 180

(31)

[leaf 9, back] Thus still pursuyng onne my former brayde,
 (for fleeting wittes no perfecte iudgmente geyne,)
 I manye tymes with deeper muse assayed, for longe contynuaunce dothe the depe attayne, 184 whereby at leng[t]he the wyshed ende I wonne, for endles labor endes the worke begonne. 186

(32)

 but who contynues as he did begynne, withe equall course the pointed goale doth wyune. 192

(33)

The course I kepte for to vnshale this dowte, and laye abroad this clowdye hidden speache, was by vnytinge planettes brought aboute, and by coniunctions whiche the lerned teache, 196 for heauenly bodyes oft in one agree, thoughe seuered farr, and sondred by degree. 198

(34)

Fyrst I devis'd—when I had v[i]ewed their seate, to answere righte this ridles outwarde shewe,— that Sol in middest did yeld for the staming heate, & Luna water colde, and frostye dewe; 202 for I was taughte that thus these planettes mente, whiche hidden thinges doo seme to represente. 204

(35)

This sonke not depe in mynde, for reasonne tolde— [leaf 10] two contraries in one canne neuer reste :
 howe canne the burninge heate agree with colde ?
 so this conceyte yet springinge was suppreste.— 208 and then I thoughte what weyled<sup>1</sup> thinge might lye vnder the same, in righte philosophye. 210

(36)

That true and secret skill Voarchoadumye<sup>2</sup> [?]
 perfectly vsd by grace of heuently sprite, (for, with-oute that, tis subtill vanytie, and mere deceyte vnfyte for skilles wighte,) 214
 straye tolde my wytte, whiche I will here vnfolde, what secret mystrie heuently planetts holde. 216

(37)

The horn'd Diana chaste, is siluer brighte, whiche waninge moone dothe vnto vs bewraye ;
 the sceptred Sol, with steames of shyninge lighte, the horded metall golde dothe here displaye ; 220
 the Crowned Iove, as dothe don Plato tell, is inglishe Tyne, whiche dothe emongest vs dwell. • 222

(38)

All whiche sem'd not to answere my entente ;
 for leade, lowest mettaff, was excluded quite,
 and chefest was in place, whiche was not mente ; for thoughte that siluer gayne next place by righte 226 to glystringe golde, as dothe experience teache, yet none of these to lowest leade do reache. 228

(39)

And then I dem'd it some-what strange to bee, [leaf 10, back] that siluer, golde, and tyne, sholde yoyne in one, yf the[y] had answered vnto eche degree ;
 wherefore I thoughte to lett the same alone ; 232
 But in the end I founde Mercurius witte, by one coniunctione colde these bodyes knitte. 234

(40)

For wyse Mercurius is so quicke by kinde, and gredy, hungrye, that he will deuoure golde, siluer, Tynne; and with their powre him bynde all in one bodye, lesse then in an howre, 238 and vnder this, whiche I dare not expresse, lyes hidden thinges whiche I doo leave to gesse. 240

(41)

Yet colde I saye that wisdome knittes in bande, by sage advyce, bothe welth & worldly reyne;
 and witte and welth may compasse thinges vnskande, whiche Mercurye dothe rule, as poetes feyne; 244 and this I meane by that I tolde before, contente your thoughte, and serche not any more. 246

(42)

But yf soo bee (as well yt may in dede) that these lynckd mettalls may one body make, therby mee thinkes that Mercurye hathe decreed, that manne, whiche dothe of eche of them partake, 250 muste nedes as farr' excell the rest, as they above all erthly mettalls beare the sweye. 252

(43)

I, yet not satisfied with this ex[p]ounde, to higher muse did stretche my serchinge breyne, and mongest Astronomers this lesson founde, that these thre planettes in their lofty reigne 256 do many greate and secret gyftes bestowe one mortall creatures, whiche doo lyve belowe. 258

(44)

for welthye Phebe lendes store of stampèd golde;
 And Cynthia guydes the lyfe and helthfull state;
 Pheton, fortune and gouernemente doth holde;
 all whiche three gyftes mighte dwell in one by fate, 262 for by thaspectes and yoyninge of the same, these planettes do their vertues in vs frame. 264

(45)

When this devise had percèd my conceyte, that theise three goddes mighte powre forthe in one man these seuerall blessinges, & then wayinge streyte their seuerall place in Sphere as I did skanne, 268 swete helpinge comforte cladde my hart in hoope that further skill wolde bitt the fynall scope. 270

(46)

Then I beganne afreshe to rouse that witte
whiche dulled was by fyndinge oute that depte, & so pursued yt with-oute stayinge fyttē, that at the laste, vppon the righte I lepte, 274 & then disclosd the secrete of this riddle, of the lowest, the seconde, and the middle. 276

(47)

But first I was enforc'd, with humble sute, [leaf 11, back] to skylfull herauldes ayde to haue repayre, to see what thinges they did to them depute;
 where I was rydde from all my longe dispaire, 280 for blason sayed in Armes the trycke them thus, as more at large my penne shall here dycusse: 282

(48)

The lowest, Luna, with her perle, dost stande for 'Argente or white,' a coolor fayre to viewe the myddle, sol, with Topas in his hande, is called 'or,' a coolor brighte in hue; 286 & next one Jupiter did note to mee with Saphire blewe, the azurd shewe to bee. 288

(49)

When this was blasde, I nede no longer staye to plodde & prowle aboute this hidden thinge, there rested noughte, by this disclosed waye, but all these three into one forme to bringe, 292 and lerne yf one mannes armes or crest might shewe these thre riche coolors, borne but of a fewe. 294

(50)

And turninge ofte an olde armoriall booke, after discourse of manye soundrye cootes—
whiche Auncientes scochions I did ouer-looke—with hidden pointes of armories secret notes; 298 emongest the noblest crestes by vertue rare,
 I founde a wighte suche worthy creste that bare. 300

(51)

For there was lynck'd with-in one worthy knott,
 The lowest, middle, & highest next the beste, [leaf 12]
 Luna, Sol, and Jupiter that gott the seconde place, were blased in his creste 304
 by whiche devyse that couertly I fynde, whiche tolde the hydden vertues of his mynde. 306

(52)

For fyrste, in philosophye, by hym is borne the lyons two, of siluer and of tynne, whiche dothe supporte a golden garbe of corne.
 next, with Astronome for to begynne, 310
 two lyons of lune & Jupiter he beares, holdinge a sheafe of Sol with glystringe cares. 312

(53)

Then to discende to secretes hearaldes veyne, in vertuous stones, where lerned cunnyng was,
 of orient perle and Saphyre, lyons tweine, whiche do advance a garbe of riche Toopas. 316
whiche lower yet as I must streyne my quill, in colors thus do blase their hidden skill. 318

(54)

Two princely beastes he beares of corage bolde, of argent white, and colord azure blewe, holdinge a garbe of ore whiche they call golde, & thus eche one dothe Stilbons mynde pursue, 322 for by discyphering of these seuerall artes, are drawn in one these planettes seuerall partes. 324

(55)

Now howe this riddle fytteth the noble wighte who beares this creaste of state by due desarte,— [leaf 12, back] since that these coolors and these metalls brighte do answer iuste the vertue of his harte,— 328 yt restes to saye, and so to yoyne the same, with-oute lewde blemyshe to his flowring fame : 330

(56)

The lowest in seate I do not hym accompte, whose mynde devyne, with gyftes of nature rare, doth chefest wittes of comon mould surmounte, as one whome Pallas bleste with speciall care ; 334
 but gentle lyfe dothe humble him so lowe, that low'st in curteous dedes eche doth hym knowe 336

(57)

Thus lowest now he is by course of kinde, and then advanc'd to place of myddle state ;
 for as the sonne in myddle sphere wee fynde, so is he stald, by dome of heuenly fate, 340 in myddest of worthy geintries seuenth degree,
 a lordly baron of nobyltye. 342

(58)

In whiche two thinges, with Hermes I consente, the middle and the lowest ar in sighte.
 nowe nothings wantes to fill vpp his entente, but next to one for to be brought to lighte; 346 then is faire *Maia*s<sup>1</sup> sonnes darke hidden dohte, by darke and princely heroldes skill founde oute. 348

(59)

The famous manne whiche gyues this goodly creste, by wysdomes force, next one beares chefest swaye;
 good vertue hym advancd aboue the reste, one whome grave counsells burden semes to staye; 352
 he reynes and rules; he careth for vs all;
 his depe fore-sight preuentes our thretned fall. 354

 my gladdd sprite redoobled all his yoye that suche a patron sholde my woorkes enyoye. 378

PROPHECIES BY WELSHMEN.

[Ashmole MS. 378, leaf 22.]

Thalysonne<sup>1</sup> savthe that in the liijth yere their shalbe a battell in Brytaine, betwene the sede of the blasinge lambe and the sede of the spanishe woman, for the seat of Cadwaldour. their shalbe great preparinge to battell in those dayes; the raven for hounger shalbe lick to perishe, and yet between the twoe battelles shalbe neuer a stroke stroken. Then A pilgrimage to marye in Aken of women shalbe wofully sought; & after the mylde countinaunce of this, m[arye] shall depart from kenyngale, to which she tooke hir waye, and towards the light she shall bare A countinūale heat. A man of bondes she shall release by menes Iudgment. in hir yere shalbe many Tyrantes abroad that were in bondes, & they shall sitt strayt in Iudgment to opresse the light.

A welch-man called Robart locke vppon the liiiij yere: G. beinge dominycall leter. he did recyte that A woman wytyles shoulde reigne in Cadwaladors seat, and do out the heate of the sommer, and cause paynted cloudes to seme bright after the metinge of A lord & A lady in on daye.

these plagēs shall not ceasse vntill the man god haue the full tuicion and strength, and his ministers shall have greate gyftes. And yet I beheld on woman, the wife of two men, gyvinge hir honor to the man god; & ase for xxxth dayes shall he execut fyre & sword; & I loked toward the Sanctuary, & ther I sawe the throne of the vnknown god, & the wicked having the vpper hand, whetting ther tussh like bores in blude.

David Apiuan sayth these wordes: "in liijth I sawe the lyonesse execute great iudgment. I beheld when this troble beganne, ther weir fyve wicked monthes, & in the v wicked monthes I save xxxth euell dayes. out of heaven I beheld A white lambe, and a great scroll in his hand, and mens names writte in with blod, & yet I save the Egles chicken layng hand vpon the croune & Septer, and executed the sword with bloud xij dayes together; & in these dayes the counsell of the prisoner shalbe swefter then the wynd. & I beheld A white hare standinge in iudgment in Ceasars house, & caste a grime countinaunce A-gaynste the former witt of the ffox, & he ceased not vntill he conveyed the ffox cleane, & no man again in britaine shalbe combred with him; and in those dayes the mone shall losse hur light. Then I beheld A yong coke that crowed wonderous bould, & A young henne did egerly barke, & the lion began to rore; and kent reioysed, & Sussex daunced, & manye chekynes more for gladnes; for now the Egles chickyn is gonne, & the widowe of calabrye shall whet hir tuskes, but the bores counsell shalbe of non effecte. & I beheld another sorowe more grevoser then the fyrst: great crye wase ther Amongest women betwen the hiest of the sonne & the reping of the corne."

Edward Aprian Trevar for the liijth yere also sayth: "wher is the lionesse that executed iustes falsly? for Thomas Buynytes (?) sayth that anne arrow shalbe the destruction of thangry lyonesse."

"Edward Apoveff sayth that the tong shall cleaue to the roffe of hir mouth, & the arrowe that shaft strike

hir is death, & [she] shall [have] no tyme of Inward repentance, but shall deliver hir soule to mans merits : then shall the bright Cler sonne begyne to apere. / . /

Also Robart Duce in the same liiiijth yere sayth, "that A dead man shal Aryse, a kynge whose generation was of a dunne cowe, and generated out of the sea, & this kynge shalbe gouerned one yere by an aungett. vppon Eedward the vj thy time is comme ; the profisie sayth then necessa<sup>re</sup>ye for god, thou must lose that which other men haue mad strayght ; & v<sup>ar</sup>inged swine thou must rote out ; & this sayth god, 'thou sonne of man muste asswa<sup>ge</sup> the prid, mossell the mouthe of prechers that preache mens dreames : ' the moste parte of the peopl shall saye 'wher are thaye cleane consumed in on yere.' A Byshoppe beinge no gentill-man shall enioye the crowne, & vse it as him lysteth for on yere ; & xxviij days shall he bringe many wonders to passe, & then the sonne of man, after iij sorowes, shall occupe the sword, & make euery man & woman offycere, & geue comaundement on payne of death to kyll all that were with the pye, the pykerd, & the fulmer ; for att that shalbe kyllled are knowne by ther marke ; and then shalbe sene many A blodye Rochet, & the lione shall hunt the<sup>1</sup> bore out of his denne.

[leaf 23, back]

"An I. & a Roche shaft blede to dethe for their traterous plaie, & the yelowe lyone tongles also shall suffer execution, & many also of the affutie<sup>2</sup> of the blodye pie ; & Immediatlye shaft euery man enioye his owne wife a-gayne ; and I did see the hedd of the world cleane vanishe awaye, and his dignitie cleane banished out of England. and A chyld with A chaplett had againe in his owne honor ;" and Robart Duce speaketh no more of the liiiijth, yet he sayth that "the dead man that neuere woma<sup>n</sup> sawe borne, nor neu<sup>er</sup> man shaft se buried, shalbe kinge of syx kyngdomes, and Emperour of Rome."

Owen longheith sayth that "A lyon shalbe generated out of the sea by the full strengthe & natur of A dunne cowe, and that lyone shalbe gouerned by an Aungell, which Aungell shaft blede to death. And in the liijth yere thys lyon shalbe gonne. but verye few shall fynd him, & he shalbe awaie xvj monthes; and after xvj monthes hee shall come agayne, and execute iustice in his fathers house; & that which is darke shall he make lyght, & shall make free waye to the holye Crosse."

David Trevar sayth that the same lyone shaft neuere be defyled, & that this is the lxxxxj of the house of Tuheodre that shall geue Armes, & Edward is his name & he shalb[e] crownid Twyse in Englonde & once at Rome.

Merleon le Paule sayth "he shalbe the stronge buh that shaft enter in the yerly wynter, & he shaft destroye the hedd of the world; & by this tokene shaft you knowe him, ffor he shall neuere be borne of A woman. his name shalbe Edward of the house of Tuheodore, & he shalbe bakynge xvij score dayes, lx dayes, & xl dayes, & thene shall he entyer in-to Britaine with thre grevous bestes, A redd lyon, A redd dragone, & A white graye-hownd; & then shall the land of the mone reioyce."

[leaf 24]

Ioñ Aprobardwyn sayth "the sonne of man is caled A commone proverbe maledene steremone for the generation of the Theodorse, otherwise caled tewthers, came out of Englonde; and yt is profisied<sup>1</sup> of him that he should kyll his mother, & yet shall have hir blesinge, & the blesinge of god and the britanes. & he shall make glade the people that shalbe out-castes in those dayes, & he shall labour to se the sedde of the egle; but he shall neuer fynd him, nor neuer anye after him,

NOTES.

p. vi. Lancaster Herald. The 5th Herald, under the 3 Kings of Arms. A document in the Lansdowne MS. 108 (art. 95, leaves 177-8), says that "The Societie and Corporation of the officers of Armes consisteth of xiiij persona, wherof Three be Kinges of Armes,—videlicet, Garter (principall Kinge of Armes and chief Officer of Armes for the Order, having yerly fee of xl<sup>li</sup>), Clarencieux (Kinge of Armes of the East, West, and South partes of the realme of England from the ryver of Trent southward), Norroy (Kinge of Armes of the East, West, and North partes of the realme of England from the ryver of Trent Northward), Eche of them receavinge yearly fee of xx poundes; Six be Heraldes of Armes—Somerset, Chester, Windsore, Richemonde, Lancaster, Yorke,—Euery of them receavinge yearly fee of xx. markes; Fower be Poursuyvantes of Armes, viz. Rouge-Dragon, Rouge-Croix, Blew-mantle, Portcullis, Euery of them receavinge yearly fee of x. poundes." Of these "Some be appoynted to direct and to gouverne in the Societie, as Garter . . . Clarencieux . . . and Norroy . . . Some be apoynted to be dyrected and governed, and to obey, As All the Six Heraldes, All the fower Poursuivantes, In all matters concerninge the Princes service, or otherwise tendinge to the regiment of the Societie, or their owne emolument and profyte."

p. vi. The Adulterer Thynne mentiond by Erasmus. Desiderii Erasmi Epistolae. Epist. CCCCXXXV [A. D. 1519] Opera, Lugd. Bat. MDCCIII, vol. iii, col. 454 (at foot). Speaking of Joannes Vitarius, a Franciscan monk, Erasmus says, "Jamdudum rogabis, scio, quis hujus viri fuerit exitus. Non solum displicuit Commissariis, sed etiam suis fratribus aliquot, non quod non probarent vitam, sed quod ea melior esset, quam ipsis expediebat. Totus inhiabat in lucrum animarum, cæterum ad instruendam culinam, aut extruendos parietes, ad illectandos dotatos adolescentes segnior erat quam illi vellent: etiamsi hoc quoque non negligebat vir optimus, duntaxat si quid ad sublevandam necessitatem pertineret, verum non ut plerique præpostere curabat ista. Imo quendam etiam Thynnum alienarat: is erat aulicus, ac prorsus aulicis moribus, foris per omnia cubilia se volvens, passim matrimonia aliena contaminans, & uxorem pro derelicta habens, quam habebat & claro genere natam, & aliquot liberorum matrem. Per occasionem evenit, ut hæc quoque seduceretur: illico rejecit mulierculam primo lapsu, qui sibi tot lapsus ignoverat. Illa tandem longius etiam prolapsa ad extremam devenit calamitatem, præter infamiam, scabiei etiam, quam Gullicam vocant, obnoxia. Hic cum omnibus tentatis, quo uxorem marito reconciliaret, nihil ageret, nec durus ille, vel affinium respectu, vel liberorum communium affectu, vel sua ipsius conscientia, qui tot adulteriis, qui suo neglectu occasionem dedisset, flecteretur, reliquit hominem ceu deploratum. Is paulo post ex more, petasone, aut armum suillum misit. Cæterum Joannes, nam tum Guardianum agebat, mandarat janitori, ne quid reciperet nisi se vocato. Cum adesset munus, vocatus est: ibi famulis, qui deferebant heri nomine, "Referte, inquit, onus vestrum unde attulistis; nos non recipimus munera diaboli." Itaque tametsi non ignorabant illius vitam ac doctrinam esse seminarium egregium Euangelicæ pietatis, tamen quoniam non perinde conducebat proventui culinæ, jussus est deponere Guardiani munus, quo nihil ille fecit lubentius: & suffectus est illi quidam, quem ego novi, aliunde adscitus homo non dicam qualis, aut quam alteri dissimilis, in summa is mihi visus est, cui nemo prudens caulem suum vellet committere: sive hunc obtruserunt, quia cupiebant abesse, sive is visus est ad rem idoneus . . ."

p. vi, vii. Anne Bond, and Sir John Thynne. The pedigree of the Thynne family in Hoare's Wiltshire, vol. i, p. 60 of Heytesbury hundred, which pedigree Hoare says was approved by the Heralds' Office, shows that our William Thynne (or Boteville),—the grandson of John Boteville with whom the pedigree starts,—was uncle of Sir John Thynne who built Longleat (1567—1580) and left it unfinished at his death. Sir John fought gallantly against the Scotch at Musselburgh, and was knighted on the field while his wounds were bleeding. He was the favoured counsellor of the Protector Somerset, and, to judge from his portrait, a wary resolute long-headed fellow.

Hoare gives the name of William Thynne's wife as Bawde, "Anne, daughter and co-heir of Henry Bawde;" and says that they had children,

Francis Thynne, Lancaster Harold, ob. 1611 [? 1608; p. ix above] married daughter of . . Rivers;

3 daughters—

1. Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Pigott,
2. Anne, wife of Rich. Maudley,
3. Isabel, wife of Geo. Pagett.

p. vii. Sir John Thynne (knighted by the Duke of Somerset in the camp at Roxburgh on Sept. 28, 1547) was Francis T.'s cousin, was an M.P. in 1546 when he was only 24; was afterwards, in Edw. VI's reign, steward of the household to the Protector Somerset; and in Queen Mary's reign, comptroller of the Lady [or Princess] Elizabeth's household. Stem. Bot. clii. 'He shared largely in the spoil of the Abbeys, and justified the Wiltshire proverb recorded by Aubrey—

Hopton, Horne, Smith, Knockmaile, & Thynne,
When Abbots went out, they came in.

Longleat was built by him on the site of a dissolved priory.' It took 12 years in building (p. clxxvii).

p. viii. Camden's Estimate. Camden's words in his Britannia, iii. 7, col. 2, are, "Francis Thynn, who has long pursued the study of English antiquities with equal application and judgement."

p. ix. William Thynne rests beside his wife, &c. This 'beside' is more than doubtful. Col. Chester writes, "You will find the Inscription on Wm Thynne's tomb, and some account of Thynne, in the Rev. Joseph Maskell's 'Collections in illustration of the Parochial History and Antiquities of the Ancient Church of All Hallows, Barking' (London, 4to, 1864)—(but Maskell was not very correct usually, and his statements must be tested).

"I see the date is wrong. Mr Maskell says Thynne's wife Anne, mother of Francis, was buried by his side. As in my voluminous and careful collections from the All Hallows register I do not find her burial recorded, I doubt not Mr Maskell is in error, and was misled by the figure of the lady on the brass. I suppose it was not contemplated that she would twice re-marry."

The Licenses or Letters Patent were dated May 8, 1603, and 26 Oct. 1604. The first was seconded by a letter from King James in 1603, which, with the Second License, is printed in John Strype's edition of Stowe's Survey, 1720, p. xij-xij. The License of 1604 was for Stowe or his Deputy "to ask, gather, receive, and take the alms and charitable benevolence of all our loving Subjects whatsoever, inhabiting within our Cities of London and Westminster" &c. &c., in Churches or other Places; and the Parsons, Vicars and Curates were to stir people up "to extend their liberal Contributions in so good and charitable a Deed." Strype's Life of Stow—"Memorials of this honest good Citizen" p. xxvij—is well worth reading. It is full of sympathy for the worthy tailor and his work, and must touch every student. What a member of the E. E. Text Soc. Stow'd have made!

"He was also a curious observer of Manuscripts, and a diligent Procurer of them to himself, wheresoever he could. He was mightily delighted with the Sight of a fair Bible in large Vellum (the fairest that ever he saw) written by one John Coke, a Brother of St Bartholomew Hospital, at the age of Threescore and Eight Years. p. xvij, col. 2.

"He affected likewise old printed Books, and was a great Collector of them, . . the Names of divers whereof we mentioned before, An. 1568, when by Order of Council his Study was searched for Superstitious Books. p. xix.

"Stow was a true Antiquarian, in that he was not satisfied with Reports, or with the Credit of what he found in Print; but had recourse to Originals. He knew how much falshood is commonly thrust upon Readers, either by the Carelessness of Authors, or by taking up things too credulously, and upon slight Grounds, or upon Hearsays and the Credit of others. But Stow made use of his own Legs (for he could never ride) travelling on Foot to many Cathedral Churches, and other Places, where ancient Records and Charters were: and with his own Eyes to read them." p. xx. See note to Hindwords, p. xlv.

p. xxi. Mr Martin sends me a few corrections, &c., as to Thynne's appointments: line 2, Essex, ?Sussex. Ric. ?John, Shurley. line 5, the Manor of Cleobury Barnes was in the lordship of Cleobury, parcel of the Earldom of March. Last line: Stoke Clymslond was in the diocese of Exeter.

In the State Papers are mentions of a Mr Thynne, servant of the Earl of Hertford in 1545-6.

And the profite of the kinge ye shall awayte to doe as moche [p. 78] as in you is, accordinge to your knowledge and to your power. Soe god helpe you, and the holye Evangelistes.

p. xxii. William Thynne's Erith tithes. Mr C. T. Martin has just (Sept. 30) told me of the two following letters from William Thynne to Secretary Cromwell:—State Papers, Miscellaneous Chapter House Records, Vol. 43, Nos. 20, 21.

No. 20. Sir, In my moste herty maner I commende me vnto your maistershipe, and am informed that ye will fynde an office of the Landes of Crïtechurche to the kynges vse. Sir, I besече you that it may please you that my Indenture of the parsonage of Lesones & Erith, whiche berith date the ij<sup>d</sup> day of February in the xxij yere of the Reygne of our souerain Lorde the kyng, & ys for the space of iiij<sup>xx</sup> xix [= 99] yerys, payng yerly vj li xiijs iiij d therefore, may be founde in the sayd office : it is tolde me that, in case it so be, it wylbe a greate suerte to me hereafter ; and in doing herof ye bynde me to do you & yours suche pore pleasure as may lye in my smale power ; & besydes that, bynde me & myne to pray for you, as knowes god, who haue you in his kepyng ! from Eltham this present Thursday, by the rude hande of yours at commandement.

W. Thynne.

Sir, the breche ys inned.

Addressed, To the Right worshipfulle maister Cromeweſt, this be delyuered.

There is nothing about William Thynne in the other Calendars and Historical MSS. Commission Reports yet publisht. References to large masses of Thynne letters, in the 16th and 17th centuries, are in the Hist. MSS. Com. 3rd Report, p. 199.

p. xxxix. The inscription on Wm. Thynne's Tomb. Mr Maskell, author of 'The Ancient Church of All Hallows, Barking,' has been good enough to copy for me the inscription on the restored Brass to Wm. Thynne. He says that "Stowe is not quite correct even in those parts of the ancient inscription which still remain. Stowe is by no means always literally correct."

"Here lyeth M. Will<sup>m</sup>. Thynne Esq<sup>re</sup> one of the Masters of the honourable household to King Henrie VIIIth our soveraign Lord. He departed from the prison of this frayle body the Xth day of August Anno Dom. 1546 in the XXXVIIIth yeere of our said Soveraigne Lord the King ; whose bodye, & every part thereof, in the last daye shall be raised up againe at the sound of the loud trumpet. In whose coming, that we may all joyfully meet him, our heavenly Father grant to us, whose mercies are so great towards us that he freely offereth to all them that earnestly repent their sins everlasting life, through the death of his dearly beloved Son Jesus, to whom be everlasting praises. Amen."

The discrepancy between the two versions Mr Maskell has kindly explained to me:—

"Emanuel Hospital, Westminster, Sept. 7, 1875.—Dear Sir, The tomb and inscription of Wm. Thynne was restored at my suggestion by the Marquess of Bath in 1860-61. When, with the assistance of one of the Churchwardens, I took a rubbing of the Memorial brass, I found the early part and many letters of the original inscription obliterated. Of the first part, only the letter y remained. Acting on my own judgment, and with the advice of others, I wrote out the inscription from the letters which remained, taking the y as the second letter of lyeth, and this was placed on the restored brass. The Marquess never saw the tomb, but I believe Messrs Waller sent him a rubbing of it. After the restoration was complete, I became acquainted with the original inscription, and I learned from it, and from an increasing knowledge of archæology, many things of which I was very ignorant when I first began to explore the church of All-Hallows, Barking. I began to make collections towards the history of the parish, and those collections were (somewhat immaturity) published at the desire of friends. If they are worth your consulting, there is an interleaved copy in the British Museum Library. Please to remember that I call them merely 'collections,' and I hope they may be useful with all their imperfections to others better able to put them into a more complete shape. Thus, you will find a little about Wm Thynne, and a copy of his will on p. 50—52. This copy was taken for me by Mr George Corner, F.S.A., and was printed from his abbreviated MSS. All the early part of the volume was unfortunately corrected for the press in my absence from England, and not by me. This copy of the Will contains only the substance of the Testament, and is by no means a correct 'orthographic' copy.

"But to return. When I learned the true inscription from Stowe I showed it first to our churchwardens,—who would not hear of 'Pray for the Soule,'—and then to the Ordinary, the late Archdeacon Hale. By the latter I was informed that the inscription 'Pray for the soule' would be illegal, and could not be restored, and I had already learned that all inscriptions savouring of purgatory had been obliterated throughout the church; I was advised therefore to let the matter rest. It never occurred to me till I saw Stowe's work that the inscription could have begun 'pray for the soule' because of the very protestant character of the remainder of the Inscription.—I am faithfully yours, J. MASKELL."

p. xlviii. "Francis Thynne never in any University." Wood in his Athenæ Oxon. ed. Bliss, ii. 107, puts him at both Oxford and Cambridge, and so misled the Messrs Cooper when preparing their Ath. Cantab. Wood says,

"Francis Thynne . . was educated in gramaticals in Tunbridge school in Kent . . where being fitted for higher learning by Jo. Proctor, master thereof, . . . was thence sent to this university, at which time several of his surname of Wilts, studied there; & one of both his names, and a knight's son of the same county, was a commoner of Magd. coll. in 1577. Whether our author Franc. Thynne went afterwards to Cambridge, or was originally a student there before he came to Oxon, I cannot justly say."

p. xlix. Francis Thynne's first antiquarian work. Mr G. Parker sends me these further notes on the Ashm. MS. 766.

"An epistle dedicatorye of the booke of Armorye of Claudius Paradyne Harris obtained his desire, and afterwards took as a partner Joseph Hall, who fell into disgrace from his wrongful actions. The paper also contains a territorial history of the White Lion from 1654 to 1798, when it was ordered to be taken down."—H. B. Wheatley.

p. lxxv. F. Thynne's Lists or Catalogues. 'John Vowell alias Hooker, gentleman,' was a fellow-sinner with Francis Thynne. He put-in 'A catalog of the bishops of Excester,' pages 1300-1310.

p. lxxv. W. Nicolson was successively Bp. of Carlisle, Bp. of Derry, and Archbp. of Cashel. His book alluded to is "The English Historical Library. In Three Parts. Giving a Short View and Character of most of our Historians either in Print or Manuscript: With an Account of our Records, Law-Books, Coins, and other Matters Serviceable to the Undertakers of a General History of England. The Second Edition Corrected and Augmented. By W. Nicolson, Arch-deacon (now Bishop of Carlisle. London . . . M.DCC.XIV." (1714). He says of Francis Thynne, p. 71, "Holinshead frequently owns the great assistance he had from Fran. Thynne, sometime (in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth) Lancaster-Herald, and an eminent Antiquary. He [Holinshead] has been severely treated by Sir Thomas Craig<sup>1</sup>, for some Insolencies which that Learned Gentleman suppos'd him guilty of, in Relation to the Kingdom of Scotland: Whereas (in Truth) that part of the Book no farther concern'd poor Mr Holinshead, than as the whole was sheltered under his Name . . . The common Books of Holinshead's History are visibly Castrated: above Fourty Pages (from p. 1491. to 1536.) being omitted. I have seen one<sup>2</sup> Copy which supplies this Defect; and shews manifestly [?] that it was occasion'd by F. Thynne's singular Respects to the Lord Cobham, at that Time very unseasonable. All that's left out [?] relates to Royal Grants in favour of that unfortunate Peer and his Ancestors: And his Disgrace [not] happening at the very Time of this Impression, it seems to have been thought Wise in this Continuer to leave out the whole Matter, reserving no more than a single Copy of the whole to himself. I am the rather inclin'd to make this Conjecture, because this Book is beautify'd with the Blazon of the Arms of the great Men, in the course of the History, from the Conquest to the latter End of Edward III. (in their proper Colours) fairly drawn in the Margin."

p. ciii. John Stow. William Harrison, the Essex parson, in his Description of England 1587 (1st ed. 1577), which I am now editing for the New Shakspeare Soc., 1876, gives Stow a good character:—

"But hereof let this suffice, & in steed of these enormities, a table shall follow of the [Law] termes, containing their beginnings and endings, as I have borrowed them from my freend John Stow, whose studie is the onelie store house of antiquities in my time, and he

p. cv. Anstis's MS. Hist. of Officers in the Heralds' Office. As this compil'd Life of Francis Thynne speaks with authority as to some of his MSS., I print the rest of it here:—

"There is nothing publishd of his works besides Certain Histories concerning Embassadors & their functions, dedicated by him to his Good Lord W<sup>m</sup> Lord Cobham, printed long after<sup>1</sup> his death; and the divers Successions or Catalogues of the Great Officers of state published in Hollinsheads History, in which booke there are many pages omitted, occasioned by m<sup>r</sup>. Thynnes singular respects to the Lord Cobham, whose disgrace happening at the time of his publication, it seems to have been thought wise to leaue out the whole, reserving (as a Right Reverend Author<sup>2</sup> saith) no more than a single copy of the whole to himself: which later is a mistake, for there are more than one still remaining. It is to be lamented that in these printed Lists, the proofs, Vouchers, and Authorities were not inserted, which are constantly quoted in those MSS. of m<sup>r</sup>. Thynne that the Collector hath perused, and even in that part of the Genealogical History of Cobham<sup>3</sup> now in his Custody. The Annals of Scotland from 1571 to 1586 are of his writing<sup>4</sup>, with the Catalogues of the Regents, Dukes, and Chancellors, in that Kingdome &c. He composed also the Catalogues of English Cardinalls and Chancellors of England; and there remain in Mss. divers Treatises, as a discourse of Arms, Collections of severall sorts of Antiquities, Miscellanies of the Treasury, Epitaphia siue Monumenta sepulchrorum, Anglice et Latine quam Gallice, with Notes on, and Corrections of, Chaucers works<sup>5</sup>, which comment on Chaucer. He had an intention to have published as an addition to the Edition of that Author made by his father when he was Clerk of the Kitchin to H. 8. In the late Bp. of Ely's Library<sup>6</sup> was his Original History of Dover Castle and the Cinque Ports, to which He refers in a MS. now with the Collector<sup>7</sup>; And in the Cotton Library are preserved his Collections out of Domus regni Angliæ<sup>8</sup>, Nomina Episcoporum in Somerset<sup>9</sup>, Collectanea Saxonica de donationibus a Regibus Eadfrido, Eadgaro et Edwardo. Catalogus Episcoporum Bathoni & Welleñs, a Book of various Collections<sup>10</sup>, et Commentarij de Historia et rebus Britannicis<sup>11</sup>, and a learned letter touching the Heralds. Besides these, there remain in this Collectors custody, the following peices finished by him, A discourse of Arms<sup>12</sup>, The plea between the Advocate and Anti-Advocate

The other Courte of Venus is T. Rolland's, 1575 (?). On Valentine's day, gay young Esperance praises Venus, while the grave Disperance abuses her. Esperance calls on Venus; she appears, and blows her horn for her nymphe. They advise her to try the culprit Disperance. The Seven Sages, the Nine Muses, the Nine Worthies, the ten Sibyls, the three Fates, all successively refuse to defend Disperance, and reproach him for abusing Venus. At last, Vesta undertakes his defence. The trial proceeds; Disperance is convicted, and put in the will of Venus. She orders him to be punished and imprisond; but on the entreaty of Esperance, &c. remits the punishment on Disperance's promise to serve her. She christens him Dalliance; and dances, tourneys and feastings end the book, which is very prolix and dull, though luckily not very long.

The Prologue.

In the moneth of may when the new tender grene
 Hath smothly couered the ground that was bare Poudred with flours, so wel be sene
 I would haue brought my hart out of care
 And as I walked in the wood so fayre
 Thycke of grasse among the floures swete
 And many a <sup>1</sup>hoisome herbe fayre vnder the fete.

(14 more stanzas, then)

¶ Thus endeth the prologue, and hereafter foloweth the new court of Venus.

My penne take payne a lytle space to folow the thing that doth me chase and hath in hold, my hart so sore
 And when thou hast this brought to passe :
 My pen I praye the wryte no more.

(And 5 more stanzas.)

Finis.

My lute awake performe the last Labour that thou and I shal wast,
 And end that I haue new begone
 For when this song, is gon and past
 My lute be stil for I haue done.

(And 6 more stanzas.)

Finis.

To whom should I sue to ease my payne
 To my mysters, nay nay certayne
 For feare she should me then disdayne
 I dare not sue, I dare not sue.

(And 5 more stanzas.)

Finis.

Dysdaine me not without desert
 Nor leaue me not so sodeynly
 Sence wel ye wot that in my hart
 I meane nothing but honesty

Dysdayne me not.

(And 4 more stanzas.)

Finis.

Fortune what ayleth the Thus for to banysh me
 Her company whom I loue best,
 For to complayne me
 Nothing auayleth me
 Adew farewel this nights rest.

(And 4 more stanzas.)

Finis.

---

I may by no meanes surmyse
 My fantasy to resyst
 But after the old gyse
 To cal on had I wylt
 And thought it to suffyce
 That agayne I shal haue none
 Yet can I not deuysse
 To get agayne myne owne.

(And 4 more.)

Finis.

---

If fantasy would fauour
 As I deserue and shal
 My loue my lady paramour should loue me best of al.

(And 8 more stanzas.)

During of payne and greuous smart Hath brought me lowe & wöderous weake that I cānot cōsort my hart
 Why sighest thou my hart & wil not breake.

(And 5 more stanzas.)

Finis.

---

Now must I lern to faine
 And do as other do
 Seing no truth doth raine
 That I may trust vnto
 I was both true & playne
 No one and to no mo
 And vnto me againe
 Alas she was not so.

(And 5 more stanzas.)

Finis.

Loue whom you lyst and spare not Therwyth I am content Hate whom you lyst and spare not For I am indyfferent.

(And 4 more stanzas.)

Finis.

Meruaile no more al tho
 The songes I sing do mone
 For other life then woe
 I neuer proued none
 And in my hart also
 Is grauen with letters depe
 And many thousands mo
 The fouds of teares to wepe.

(And 3 more stanzas.)

Finis.

Shal she neuer out of my mynd, &c.
 In this sonnet the fragment ends.

p. 85, l. 279. The Chancellor of Lichfield. He was at this time, the Bp of Peterborough tells me, "David Pole, appointed Vicar-General and Official Principal (i. e. what is commonly called 'Chancellor') in 1534, and was acting in 1543,—perhaps later.—Antony Draycot occurs in 1556 as holding the Office. Pole was also Archdeacon of Derby and Salop at the same time, and consecrated Bp of Peterborough in 1557." I find no notice of him in Strype before 1540. He was present (as Chancellor of Lichfield and Archdeacon of Salop) at the Convocation of Clergy in that year, which found Henry VIII's marriage with Anne of Cleve void, because Henry did not like her;<sup>1</sup> then in 1553, under Queen Mary's order "to turn out of their livings and livelihoods all priests that had taken wives, and to divorce them asunder . . . D. Pole, L.L.D., vicar-general, and principal official to the Bishop, articled and deprived divers of the clergy for this cause: namely, H. Williams, Dean of the church of Litchfield, who married Eliz. King, widow of Alan King, of London, [and 3 others, a vicar, curate, and chaplain]. Moreover, in the archdeaconry of Statford [so], David Pole aforesaid did article & deprive several other beneficed priests for the same grievous crime of marriage, as Nicholas Morrey, rector of the church of Rolleston" [and 10 others] (Eccl. Mem. III. i. 168-9). In 1553 also, David Pole, Archdeacon of Derby, was one of the Commission who found Bp Bonner's sentence null, and restored him (ib. 36-7). In 1554 he was present at—and evidently approved—the trial of Bp Bonner, and that of Dr Taylor, when he was sentenced to be burnt, and martyrd. On 30 Sept. 1554 the Dean of Canterbury, acting as Archbishop during the vacancy of the see, gave Pole a commission to exercise episcopal jurisdiction in the see of Lichfield, vacant by the death of Bp Sampson (Strype's Cranmer, 459). In 1556 "Commissions went out from King Philip and Queen Mary, throughout most of the dioceses, if not all, for a diligent search and discovery of heretics. . . . The new Archbishop [Reginald Pole] soon fell upon his work of constituting officers, and exercising visitations. March 27, he gave commission to David Pole, L.L.D., to be his vicar-general in spirituals. And another of the same date to the same person, to be auditor of the audience of Canterbury. And another yet, of the same date, to the same person, to be official of his court of Canterbury. And another to be dean of the Arches, dated March 17, 1557." The date I suspect mistaken, for he was bishop before March 17, 1557. "And besides all this favour to his namesake, (but not his relation, unless basely,) resolving upon an ordinary visitation of his diocese, he appointed him, being his vicar-general, to execute it"

<sup>1</sup> He had, he told Cromwell, "felt her belly and her breasts, and, as he should judge, she should be no maid; and added, he left her as good a maid as he found her." And so, "to comfort and deliver his Grace of his affliction," as Cromwell put it, Convocation set him free!! Eccl. Mem. I. i. 555—60.

(Ecccl. Mem. III. i. 477-8). In 1557 he was consecrated Bp of Peterborough—one of “Queen Mary’s bishops . . . from whom was to be expected all the opposition that could be, against casting off the pope’s usurpation, and restoring of true religion” (Annals, I. i. 82);—in 1558 he sent his proxy in the first parliament of Queen Elizabeth; in 1559 he was summonsd before the Queen, and afterwards deprivid of his bishopric for refusing to take the oath of supremacy. Then in December 1559 he, with 4 others, signd a letter to the Queen in behalf of the Papist religion, entreating her ‘ladyship to consider the supremacy of the church of Rome’ (ib. 217). His name is then found (ib. 411) as one of the “Recusants which are abroad, and bound to certain places,” “Dr Pool, late bishop of Peterborough, to remain in the city of London, or suburbs, or within three miles compass about the same;” and the last entry (214) is “David Poole, an ancient grave person, and quiet subject, was used with all kindness by his prince, and living in his own house, died in a mature age, and left his estate to his friends.”

All this is the ‘Pole, David’ entry in the index to Strype, turnd into paragraphs from the books. Foxe just enters Pole among the ‘Persecuting Bishops etc. committed to the Tower.’ viii. 637. All these are notices too late for our Pilgrims Tale, but David Pole’s papist or persecuting tendencies must have shown themselves before Strype records them, as they calld forth our poetaster’s condemnation in 1536-40.

“David Pole, or Poole, of noble race, as it seems, some say<sup>1</sup> bastard brother to cardinal Pole, became fellow of Allsouls coll. in 1520, took the degrees of civ. and can. law, that of doctor being compleated in 1527, at which time being archdeacon of Salop,<sup>2</sup> he was much in esteem for his great sufficiencies in those laws. Afterwards he was made dean of the Arches, archdeacon of Derby [Jan. 8, 1542] and chancellor of the diocese of Lichf. and Coventry. At length, upon the death of Joh. Chambers being nominated to the see of Peterborough, was consecrated thereunto<sup>3</sup> on the 15 Aug. 1557, and on the 28 of January following had the temporalities thereof delivered to him.”—Anth. Wood, Ath. Ox. ii. 801.

Anthony Wood says of Pole’s deprivation and death, “In 1559, about the time of Midsummer, he was deprived of his bishoprick, for denying the queen’s supremacy, being then esteemed a grave person and a very quiet subject. Wherupon being committed to custody for a time, was soon after set at liberty, ‘& principis beneficio (as one<sup>4</sup> tells us) in agro suo mature ætate decessit.’” “Dr Heylin in his History of the Reformation, an. 1559, saith that Bp Pole, by the clemency of the queen, enjoyed the like freedom, was courteously treated by all persons among whom he lived, and at last died, upon one of his farms, in a

p. 89. Lying prophecies. See Dr John Harvey's (Gabriel H.'s brother's) Discursive Probleme concerning Prophecies, 1588, p. 68:—"Now touching the Finall why; or the generall and speciall ends therof, were not these extrauagant prophesies, mostwhat inuented and published to some such great holie effect as the tales of Hobgoblin, Robin Goodfellow, Hogmagog, Queene Grogorton, king Arthur, Bevis of Southhampton, Launcelot du Lake, Sir Tristram, Thomas of Lancaster, Iohn à Gaunt, Guy of Warwike, Orlando furioso, Amadis du Gaul, Robin Hood and little Iohn, Frier Tuck and maid Marian, with a thousand such Legendaries, in all languages; viz. to busie the minds of the vulgar sort, or to set their heads aworke withal, and to auert their conceits from the consideration of serious, and grauer matters, by feeding their humors, and delighting their fancies with such fabulous and ludicrous toyes. For was it not the graund pollicie of that age, wherein those counterfet prophesiers cheefly florished, to occupie and carry away the commons with od rumors, by flimflams, wily cranks, and sleightie knacks of the maker, euen with all possible indeuors and vnderminings, fearing least they might otherwise ouermuch or ouer deeply intend other actions, and negotiations of greater importance, priuate or publike affaires of higher value, matters of state or religion, politike or ecclesiasticall gouernment, which from time to time they kept secret and couert, as mysticall priuities, and sacred intendiments, to be meerly handled, and disposed by the cleargie, or other professed in learning; thinking therby to maintaine themselves, and vphold al their proceedings in the greater credit, authoritie, and admiration amongst the people. It was a trim worke indeede, and a gay world no doubt, for some idle Cloister-men, mad merry Friers, and lustie Abbey-lubbers, when themselves were well whittled, and their panches pretily stuffed, otherwhiles to fall a prophesieng of the wofull dearths, famines, plagues, wars, and most wretched, lamentable and horrible Tragadies of the dangerous<sup>2</sup> daies imminent: other whiles, when haply they had little else to do, or lesse to suffer, to tell the world a lewd tale, or some notable miracle, as namely of Saint Francis, how he turned water into wine, walked drie footed vpon the waters, forbad the swallowes to sing; and how good S. Francis made all creatures reasonable and vnreasonable to obey his deuout commandements; or of S. Margaret, how she conquered and killed the diuell with the signe of the holy ✠; how she was saluted by an Angell from heauen, in the likenes of a doue, and called by the name of Christs owne Spouse, and so foorth in the same miraculous veine. Lo, I beseech you (as an ancient poet said of soothsaiers) how, Sui questus causa fictas suscitant sententias; and to increase their owne priuate ease, libertie, and wealth, with publique reputation and reuerence; how they trouble al the world besides, and procure the perpetuall seruitude, bondage and confusion of infinite good simple soules . . . . (p. 70). I touch not alone any one onely calling, degree or qualitie: hath not euery vocation, profession and estate yeelded some such counter-prophets and pennyfathers, very gromelgainers, self-louers, libertines, epicures, Lucianists, perpetuall incrochers, ingrossers and aspirers, publique forestallers, and regrators of al publique commodities and honors, libellers, factioners, troublers of al waters, sauing their owne, hartie friends to themselues onely, and deadly foes to all the world besides. . . .

Sed superstitiosi vates, impudentesque harioli . . . .

As the good old Ennius long ago vttered his affection towards such bribing copesmates, and incroching Bisogniers . . . . (p. 71). Such small ends as commonly ouerthrow and destroy the best established states, and at length bring most flourishing kingdomes, principalities, and commonwealthes to their small endes, euen most woofull, most dolefull, and most horrible ends; such in effect, and in conclusion, or rather in confusion, are the ends of such wretched and wicked prophesies, the very prophesies of the diuell, to vndoo and destroy the world. Which our noble and well affected princes of England well knowing, and accordingly considering, haue purposely ordeined & enacted penal statutes to bridle the vnruely & presumptuous insolencie of such imposturall prophets: (as namely 5. Elizabeth .15.)

(p. 73) I before mentioned the like Vissean policie: and nothing doubt, but some of Achytophels mightie oracles sauored of the same humor: as more lately som of Machiauels politique resolutions and practises haue pretily tasted & relised therof. In former times, and in a simpler age, it was no difficult matter, to shift out with good plaine rude cloisterly stufte: now lateward, sithence those frierlie skarcrowes, and moonkish dumps began to be lesse dreaded or regarded, there haue not wanted iolly fine pragmatikall wares, of the maker, whereby no small intendiments, or base enterprises haue beene attempted in most kingdomes and principalities thorow out Christiandome. Forsooth loosers must haue their words: and beggers will needes be somewaies bulbeggars. I cannot stand to make any curious deuision; howbeit some of them would be noted for terrible Elphes, and Goblins: som other of them can be contented to insinuate themselues like Robin goodfellow and frier Tuckes. Amongst whom (p. 74) can we better compare the former, than vnto such pedlers, tinkers, and sturdy roges, as were woont to carie about with them their fierce nastiues & terrible bandogs, to serue their knauish and villanous turnes, vpon aduantage giuen? As for the rest, notwithstanding the sweete and plausible honie in their mouthes, haue they not also spitefull and pestilent stings in their tailles? The world neuer more complained of Achitophels, Vlysses, and Machiauels, than of late yeeres: but take away, or contemne, all malicious suborning of calumnies, libels, and prophesies: and shall they not hurt or preuaile much lesse, as well in publike, as in priuate, notwithstanding their other williest conueiances and suttellest practises? Were it not ouer great pitie, that any such knack of knauerie, or couenous cheuissance, or hypocritical policy, or Mercuriall stratageme, either by false libelling, or false prophesieng, or other falsifieng of matters & maners, should peremptorily ouerthrow or traitterously vndermine, any well gouerned or wel established state? God, they say, sendeth commonly a curst cow short horns: and doth not the diuel, I say, in the winde-vpall, and in fine, oftner play willie beguile him selfe, and crucifie his owne wretched lims, then atchieue his mischieuous and malicious purposes, howsoeuer craftilie conueied, or featly packed, either in one fraudulent sort or other?

p. 86, l. 310. Popish Masses and Persecutions.—"SIVQUILA (= Aliquis) . . . after I departed from the carnal Gospellers, I came among the peruerse Papists, among whom was such Superstition, Idolatrie, and Massing, with other abominations, beside the imprisoning, rack-ing, punishing, killing and burning of the true professors of Christ, that I could not choose but openly tell the truth & their faults. Which in no wise they could abyde to heare. Wherby quickly I was imprisoned, & there so punished that the vnchristen Turkes would not so haue used me.
